Fierce Soviet Attack Fails; 4 Divisions Face Disaster

Finns Cut Supply Lines of Forces Fighting to Relieve Two Trapped Units

By K. J. Eskelund.
Copyright by New York Times

Helsinki, Jan. 26.—Russian detachments, north of Ladoga Lake, Thursday, again with desperate courage threw themselves against the Finn positions. The Soviet soldiers again and again stormed toward the Finns, who repulsed every attack with machine gun and rifle fire.

As regularly as ocean swells the Russians rolled forth, but were repulsed with equal regularity, each time retreating in rows that were thinner. More than 1,000 Soviet soldiers fell in yesterday's fruitless attack.

The Russian attack north of Lake Ladoga has been characterized as a great offensive aimed at a rear attack on the Mannerheim Line. This is undoubtedly wrong. The Russians north of Lake Ladoga have not been fighting to get around the Finns but for their lives.

Soviet divisions north of Lake Ladoga may have intended a rear attack on the Mannerheim Line, but the Finns gave them something else to think of.

Relief Force Harried

A Russian relief division yesterday attempted to cross the ice of Lake Ladoga to get to two divisions of encircled comrades at Kitela, but these were repulsed by Finnish field artillery. More than 100 Russian corpses were left on the ice before the attackers retreated.

Another relief division attempting to penetrate along the railroad highway to the southwest toward the Russian forces at Kitela attacked strong Finn defenses along the river of Kollaanjoki. It met violent Finnish machine gun fire and was driven back.

For five days Russian soldiers have been hurled with unusual violence against Finnish positions north of Lake Ladoga. Thousands of Russians have fallen, but the Finns have been unyielding.

The situation is becoming more difficult daily for the Russians. Those Soviet detachments are still communicating with their base towns, from which they are forced to transport all supplies through a 100-kilometer stretch of desolate forests between the different fronts and the Russian base town of Kontupuhja.

A modern fighting division needs several dozen carloads of foodstuffs, gasoline and munition daily. The Russians are always wasting ammunition and gasoline, so many of the Soviet divisions north of Lake Ladoga need hundreds of carloads

Whew! The Swedes Breathe Easier

Copyright by New York Times

Stockholm, Jan. 26.—The Swedes are breathing easier tonight after the American Legation and the Swedish foreign office denied a scare-head story in the Stockholm daily, Dagens Nyhfter, that Washington has asked American citizens in Sweden to leave as soon as possible, reportedly "because of disquieting German troop concentrations."

The foreign office emphatically denies any knowledge of German troop concentrations.

What actually happened was that American Minister Frederick A. Sterling had on his own initiative circularized American citizens, not having compelling reasons for remaining here, to consider the advisability of returning home in view of the general uncertainty about the turn of European events, when spring comes.

The Great Packed In, 500 Wait Outside As 'Gone With the Wind' Arrives at Last

Artillery Duel Rages Along Maginot Line

Germans Reported Massing Men, Guns For Frontal Attack

By the Associated Press

Paris, Jan. 26.—The slumbering steel giants of the Western Front suddenly burst into action today with a fierce artillery duel which shattered the frosty silence of the Vosges Mountains.

Military sources said French big guns opened the engagement from behind icicle-draped emplacements after scouts had brought back reports of feverish German outpost activities, possibly indicating an impending offensive.

Nazi artillery replied in kind and for hours both sides threw shell after shell at each other.

The French high command made no mention of the artillery engagement reported by these sources, using exact words in both its morning and night communiques: "Nothing to report."

Fire Damages D.C. Lumber Mill, Ties Up Traffic

Hampered by cold and frozen water plugs, firemen last night extinguished a two-alarm blaze which damaged the mill of Galliher & Klimkiewicz Lumber Co., 1301 Twelfth street southeast, and kept it from spreading to thousands of dollars worth of stored lumber.

Traffic was tied up 1½ hours and Eleventh street bridge was closed. A shivering crowd gathered.

Joseph Klimkiewicz, son of the proprietor, said $30,000 worth of new machinery had been installed last year, but was unable to estimate the damage immediately. Three years ago the firm lost $50,000 by fire.

Crowd Stands in Cold To See 'Melanie;' Borahs' Chairs Empty

It took three years for "Gone With the Wind" to reach the Nation's Capital, but last night it actually arrived.

The great and near-great and the would-be-great filled every seat in the Palace Theater to see the first showing of the Margaret Mitchell epic—they filled every seat but two. The late Senator and Mrs. Borah had planned to be there.

Olivia De Havilland, Melanie of the picture, gave police no end of trouble when she started to enter the theater.

500 Stand to See Star

Some 500 fans, who had been stamping around in the subfreezing temperature, showed but mild interest in the 50 Senators, scores of Representatives, Supreme Court justices, Cabinet members, socialites and glamor girls, but broke into a wild ovation as the screen beauty arrived, and tore through the police cordon to see her close up.

The parade of notables and celebrities attending the grand opening started three-quarters of an hour before 8 o'clock show time, and at 8:30 p. m. they were still coming—late.

Senator Norris, interviewed by a WJSV announcer as he came through, admitted that he hadn't read the book, but that his wife had. The announcer, Charles Daly, later revealed that of a dozen or so interviewees, only one confessed to reading "Gone With the Wind."

Rebel Yell Sounds

Bill Boyd, the actor, and his lovely wife, Grace Bradley, evoked admiration as a "handsome couple," and Mrs. Boyd's $60,000 albino mink coat gave most of the women fans something to dream about. Tom Corcoran and Ben Cohen, behind-the-scene brain trusters, escaped unnoticed.

The rebel-yelling Southern Bachelors Cotillion, 150 squires and their belles, escorted two officers of the Gray Army, Gen. Julius F. Howell, 90-year-old commander of the United Confederate Veterans, and Maj. Peter Pierre Smith, 97, of Washington, in a parade from the Willard

Home at Last to U. S. Waters, Flint Fights Chesapeake Ice

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Jan. 26.—The City of Flint, an unassuming little freighter catapulted by war into the center of an international drama, moved into the safety of United States waters tonight and toward a gala welcome befitting a hero home from the wars.

Nothing more sinister than a stiff north wind and occasional ice floes remained to be conquered as she steamed up Chesapeake Bay—at the end of a "six weeks'" voyage that took 113 days to complete.

Capt. J. A. Gainard and his crew of 40 will arrive tomorrow morning, ending a fiction-like journey that saw them seized by a German crew, held captive in a Russian port, headed through the gun-sprouting British blockade and, at last set free, turned for home with a cargo of iron ore. She was expected to reach quarantine some time after midnight and dock after daylight tomorrow.

Families and friends of five Baltimoreans in the crew planned joyous receptions and promised a crowd "and maybe a brass band" would be on hand.

It was the City of Flint's cargo of tractors, fruit, wax and leather that set the Deutschland's crew on her October 9; they labeled it contraband and took her over. With Danish flags painted on her sides and the name "Alph" on her bow, she pushed through northern waters, arriving finally at Murmansk, Russia, on October 20 flying the Nazi flag.

While diplomats fired round after round of cables, she stayed there six days and was headed for Germany. Coastal storms punished her and she put into Haugesund, Norway. The Norwegian government took the German crew off and returned Capt. Gainard's command.

After a long delay the freighter took on her ore cargo at Narvik, Norway, and headed for home. A harbor collision with a British steamer held her up two more days.

115 Rescued As Liner Sinks Off Japan

Philippine Ship Is Wrecked on Reefs In Raging Storm

By the Associated Press

Tokyo (Saturday), Jan. 27.—The 8,341-ton Philippine liner President Quezon was reported by the Japanese steamer Ukishima Maru to have sunk stern first today several hours after going aground on treacherous reefs off Tanegashima Island, southern Japan.

Radio advices from the Ukishima Maru said all the 114 crewmen and the one passenger, Cyrus Anderson, had been removed by three rescue ships.

The Ukishima said the grounded liner disappeared in a raging storm that handicapped the rescue efforts.

The President Quezon began sending out distress calls at 4 a. m.

The ship, en route to Manila from the United States, carried a heavy cargo. She was making her first voyage under the Filipino flag. She was formerly the President Madison and sailed from San Pedro, Calif., January 6.

Officials Blame Conditions on Lack Of Funds; Record Shows Budget Requests Have Been Cut in Half

The District welfare chief last night declared himself powerless to correct conditions at the District Home for the Aged which "shocked and depressed" Mrs. Roosevelt on a surprise visit to the institution yesterday.

Welfare Director Robert E. Bondy said he agreed in general with the views expressed by Mrs. Roosevelt and would study her analysis. He maintained that the institution was doing a "good job" with the funds, facilities and personnel which had been made available. The home has 640 residents.

The institution "could use a lot more money," he said, and "I hope to get it."

Although the Board of Public Welfare had requested $337,690 for the needs of the institution during the 1941 fiscal year, the Commissioners whittled this amount to $159,170, which is less than was appropriated for this year. The Budget Bureau raised the amount to $161,270.

8 Forecast Here as Cold Holds Grip

350 Dead in U. S. As Below-Zero Weather Ranges Over Southland

The Capital and the Nation continued to shiver yesterday as the death toll from the cold wave throughout the United States rose to 350.

Thermometers were exected to fall to 8 degrees this morning and the cold weather was expected to continue through tonight. Slowly rising temperatures were predicted tomorrow and Monday by the Weather Bureau.

Lowest mercury reading here yesterday was 11 degrees at 7 a. m. Highest was 20 degrees at 3:15 p. m.

Ice Chokes Channels

Ice-choked channels blocked the Coast Guard efforts yesterday to find two Crisfield, Md., oystermen, missing eight days.

The men, Arthur Nelson, 48, and Joseph Taylor, 42, were reported isolated near Cedar Strait, close to Fishing Creek, and the Coast Guard said their chance of immediate rescue was "slim."

Virginia continued to have the problem of slippery roads as cold weather fixed the ice crust more firmly to the highways.

Temperatures from around the zero mark to a record low of minus 16 at Farmview were prevalent in the State early yesterday. The outlook was for continued cold.

Highest among States reporting tolls this week was Ohio, with 19 deaths. Three Ohioans were frozen, four burned to death, eight were killed in traffic accidents, three were asphyxiated and a water heater explosion killed one.

The 7,500-ton Finnish freighter Olovsborg reported by radio she had lost a crew member and all her lifeboats in the stormswept Atlantic and was limping into Hampton Roads, said an Associated Press dispatch from Norfolk. The vessel sailed from Norfolk Monday for Japan via the Panama Canal.

Relief for Idle Asked

New England shivered yesterday in freezing temperatures, but found considerable consolation in the fact that conditions were good for winter sports.

David Lasser, national president of the Workers Alliance of America, wired President Roosevelt the "unprecedented and prolonged cold wave is causing unusual suffering among hundreds of thousands of unemployed and WPA workers."

He asked that WPA workers be allowed full pay for time lost because of cold and that funds for food, clothing and shelter be allocated.

Richmond, little more than 100 miles south of here, reported 11 below zero at its airport. Other Southern cities were stricken with intense cold. Nashville, Tenn., reporting a record —13; Memphis, —2; Chattanooga, —12, and Birmingham, —5. Most Northern cities fared better, with the mercury hovering above the zero mark.

Miners' Cheers All but Name Wheeler for Presidency

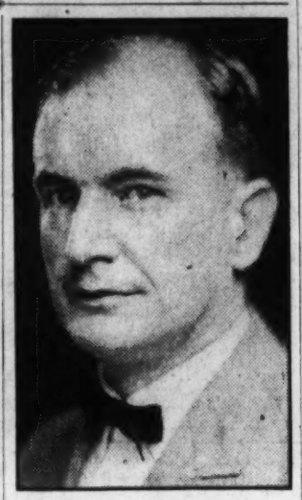
Senator Urges Drive On Unemployment as U.S. 'No. 1 Problem'

By Louis Stark.
Copyright by New York Times

Columbus, O., Jan. 26.—Senator Wheeler, accorded an ovation at the Golden Jubilee Convention of the United Mine Workers of America, which all but nominated him for the Presidency, today urged President Roosevelt to declare himself immediately on the third-term issue.

The Montana Senator's visit, from the moment he stepped off the train to be greeted by a miners' band playing the National Anthem, to the "build up" late this afternoon, when he shook the hands of delegates at a receptiton on the convention platform after his address appeared an important incident in his bid for the Presidency.

John L. Lewis, president of the miners' union and of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, wore a "cat - that - swallowed - the-canary" smile when he greeted Wheeler at the Deshler-Wallick Hotel. Later he heaped high praise on the Senator when he presented him to the 2,400 delegates, but carefully refrained from touching off the Wheeler boom by any specific reference to the future. On his part Wheeler paid tribute to the miners' leaders in an all-embracing reference, which spoke of them as men who had no peers in the American labor movement.



SENATOR WHEELER

In his address Wheeler espoused an idea which has been pressed by the C. I. O. and also in some American Federation of Labor quarters, namely, an attack on unemployment. "America's No. 1 economic problem," by a conference of leaders of industry, labor and agriculture, under Government auspices.

The delegates were tumultuous in

P.U.C. Orders Pepco to Cut Rates $575,029

New Schedule Probably Will Be Effective in February

Customers of the Potomac Electric Power Co. will receive an aggregate reduction this year of $575,029 under an order issued yesterday by the Public Utilities Commission.

Along with the order the P. U. C. requested the company to submit a new schedule of rates reflecting the reduction by 10 a. m. Monday when the commission will decide a new rate schedule. The commission accountant also will submit a new schedule at that time.

The new rates probably will become effective in the February bills. Last year the commission ordered a rate reduction of $394,085, of which $141,500 was allocated to reductions in residential rates.

At the public hearings on the annual adjustment of rates held last Wednesday, company officials had stated they had $454,766 available for rate reductions. The $575,029 figure had been submitted by George H. Wilson, chief accountant of the P. U. C.

The discrepancy in the two amounts developed over methods of handling various miscellaneous items of property, formerly charged to operating expense, but in the last year handled through the depreciation reserve item accounting.

The reduction of rates is based on the sliding scale arrangement whereby part of all profit in excess of a basic rate of return of 6 per cent is allocated for reductions.

During the public hearing a dispute had developed between spokesman of building owners and a labor union over division of the proposed cut in this year's electric rates. Sidney R. Katz, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland and District Industrial Union Council demanded a "greater allocation" of the reduction for residential consumers. Rufus S. Lusk, secretary of the Building Owners and Managers Association of the District, had asked that it all go to commercial consumers.

Congress Waits Hint From Hull On Embargo

Leaders Would Leave State Department Free To Act on Japan

By Robert C. Albright

Expiration of the Japanese-American commercial treaty last night cleared the way for Congressional consideration of trade embargo legislation, but spokesmen for House and Senate Foreign Relations committees said there is no need for precipitate action.

In the absence of Chairman Pittman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, influential Democratic members of that group warned that the matter is now in the hands of the State Department. They urged that Congress "go slow" pending departmental recommendations.

Likewise, Chairman Sol Bloom, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, declared Congress should not "embarrass" Administration officials "before the facts are laid before us." With last night's death of the Japanese most-favored nations clause, he said, the President now has broad power to adjust

Ex-Sen. Thomas Appointed to Borah's Post

Boise, Idaho, Jan. 26 (AP).—Gov. C. A. Bottolfsen tonight appointed former United States Senator John W. Thomas, Republican, to the Senate seat left vacant by the death of William E. Borah.

Thomas, former Idaho Republican State chairman and national committeeman, accepted immediately.

"No one realizes better than I, who was for five years his colleague," Thomas said, "that no man can fill the vacancy resulting from Borah's untimely death, but . . . I pledge myself to an undying fight in behalf of Senator Borah's often expressed determination to keep our Nation out of war."

Osculotherapy Proves a Flop. Reporter Tries It, Gets a Bop!

Employes' Compensation Commission,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Sirs: I want to report an accident in line of duty. I got the most beautiful shiner you ever saw—and all because I tried to carry out orders.

It was like this. Some doc in California comes out in defense of kissing when you have the sniffles and says a good, genuine "hot" kiss generates enough heat to kill a small army of germs. He went so far as to contend the more you sniffle the "hotter" you should kiss. All this put ideas in the boss' head and he sends me out to discover Washington's reaction to the suggestion.

Boy, did I get reaction! First off, I visit our local health department. They were nice enough to me—even asked me if I felt all right after I told them what I wanted. One of the health officer's staff finally granted an interview.

But I guess he hadn't been around much. He admitted a torrid bit of osculation would be a pleasant dose to take in curing a cold, but doubted if even regular applications would burn out the flu.

"The girls I have met," he said, rather reluctantly, "do not even approach fever therapy. This whole thing would be open to a lot of research and no man could take it up without an endowment—it would cost a lot of money."

He thought maybe we should open a clinic in Washington to test out the plan and suggested the consulting staff include Hedy Lamarr, Dorothy Lamour and others.

The name Dorothy Lamour struck a responsive cord and I next stopped in to see C. N. Odell, who is her local press agent. This was right up his alley and he immediately became very serious.

"If there was that much heat," he rationalized, "it obviously would burn the lips."

Japanese Army Warns U. S. Against Embargo

Economic Pressure To Block Drive in China May Lead to War, General Says

By Clark Lee,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Shanghai, Jan. 26.—Japanese army officers in China say that the ending of the United States-Japanese commercial treaty today cannot alter their program for the establishment of "a new order" in this country.

They assert that no matter what economic pressure the United States may bring, their program must go on, even if this means conflict with the United States.

Since 1931, the Japanese army has dictated the empire's policy respecting China. If its attitude is unchanged, experienced observers here see little chance for a Japanese-American agreement to replace the old treaty.

The Army Means Business

Every officer with whom this writer has spoken, from mature commanders like Lieut. Gen. Masaharu Homma in Tientsin and Lieut. Gen. Hayao Tada in Peiping, to hot-headed members of the younger officers' clique, insists that "nothing America can do will alter Japan's determination to establish the new order."

One young officer, typical of many, said:

"This is a war of life or death for our nation. If we are going to die, we will go down fighting—against America or any other nation that tries to stop us."

Army officers freely discuss the possibility that gradual tightening of the economic screws on Japan by the United States might lead to war between the two countries.

Navy Dismisses War Fear

On the other hand, however, the more conservative Japanese navy, which would have to do most of any fighting, dismisses the question of a Japanese-American war as extremely unlikely.

And in the middle of the tangled situation is the third party, China, whose hopes for victory over Japan now rest to a large extent on the possibility of a split between Japan and the United States.

If the United States and Japan reconcile their difficulties, it would be a severe blow to China and possibly would mean the end of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's resistance.

If Japanese-American trade continues as it has for the two and a half years of the Japanese-Chinese conflict Japan still would receive the large supplies of American oil and scrap iron she needs.

Officers Admit Danger

Many Japanese officers admit that if this indirect help from the United States were ended by an embargo the chances of success for their "new order" would be greatly lessened. But in spite of that they are not disposed to yield to Washington on any phase of China policy.

The army's position is not alone due to stubbornness nor to all-important Oriental consideration of "face." The army's position is that even if it wanted to "appease" the United States, present conditions in China prevent it.

The following summary of the army's position is based on scores of talks this writer has had with Japanese military men:

American trade and supplies have enabled Japan to fight China this far and to begin to establish the "new order," which, in its economic aspects, means Japanese control of China's industry, finance, trade and natural resources.

"Open Door" at Stake

Roosevelt, 3 Aides Study 3d-Term Issue

Suggestions for Conference of Liberals Reported Weighed

By Felix Cotten.
Post Staff Writer

A New Deal-sponsored drive to organize third-term sentiment, carried on with tacit White House approval, appeared possible yesterday when President Roosevelt explored the 1940 situation with three members of his "Little Cabinet."

Although participants in the conference maintained a strict silence, it was reliably reported that suggestions previously advanced for a Nation-wide conference of liberals were discussed.

Secretary Ickes, leading third-term advocate in the Cabinet, has suggested that such a conference might be held in advance of the convention dates as a means of organizing progressive sentiment and seeing to it that liberals will have a maximum degree of influence in the party conventions.

Two of those who called at the White House yesterday—Norman H. Littell, Assistant Attorney General in charge of the lands division, and Marshall E. Dimock, Second Assistant Secretary of Labor—were accused by John L. Lewis October 30 of planning a conference of Western progressives to launch a third-term boom.

The other caller was Oscar L. Chapman, Assistant Secretary of the Interior.

The conference intensified the political war of nerves highlighted recently by Lewis' statement that, if the Democratic National Convention should be "dragooned" into renominating the President, the result would be "ignominious defeat." Lewis' remark is believed to have been discussed, and there was some speculation the three men had called as a reply to Lewis.

Conference May Be Shaping

It was regarded as possible, however, that plans may be shaping up for a conference of progressives. Ickes has referred to such a conference as an ideal means of organizing liberal sentiment.

If a progressive conference should be called under New Deal sponsorship, it was expected third-term sentiment would dominate.

Some observers believe such a move would not conflict with the President's 1940 strategy, even assuming that he does not intend to run and would not accept the nomination unless an extreme international emergency prevailed. The greater the degree of third-term sentiment in the Democratic convention, the greater will be the President's influence in naming his successor, it was pointed out.

Conference Plans Fail

Following the Lewis October blast, the projected Western conference of progressive did no materialize. Behind-the-scenes rows between various left-wing and liberal groups have made difficult any attempt to get together.

Lewis is believed to be supporting Senator Wheeler, Montana, for the Democratic nomination. Labor's Nonpartisan League, of which he is chairman, he said, opposed the Western conference idea because Wheeler and "other great liberals of the West" had not been consulted.

Littell and Dimock, he said, were prepared to call the conference in January in Salt Lake City "or some other convenient city." He attacked the "surreptitious manner" in which Littell and Dimock had worked. He questioned the legality of their activities under the Hatch act.

Roosevelt Declines Comment

The President declined at his press conference yesterday to comment on Lewis' "ignominious defeat" remark.

Asked about a conference Thursday with Senator Donahey, Ohio Democrat, Mr. Roosevelt said he had talked mostly about other matters than politics. He remarked, however, that he had asked Donahey some time ago to seek reelection this year.

Ohio Democratic leaders, for whom former Representative Charles O. West has been spokesman, have arranged to pledge Ohio's 52 convention votes to Donahey under an arrangement whereby they would switch to a third term if sentiment seemed favorable.

Public announcement of this plan by Arthur L. Limbach, Ohio Democratic chairman, irritated Donahey, who is reported to have told the President that he would not be a "stalking horse" for any candidate.

Chicago, Philadelphia, St. Louis and San Francisco have notified the Democratic and Republican committees that they will bid for the national conventions of the two parties. Chicago and Philadelphia groups were said to be prepared to offer substantial sums.

ICC Reports Canal Might Kill Railways

Lake Erie, Ohio Project Condemned as Likely To Hit Public Interest

By the Associated Press

The Interstate Commerce Commission asserted yesterday that construction of the long-projected $240,000,000 Lake Erie-Ohio River Canal might so weaken the railroads as to prevent them from meeting the "needs of the public for efficient and safe transportation."

This statement was made in a report to President Roosevelt on "certain aspects" of the proposed canal. The ICC was asked for a report a year ago after the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors had told the President that if the railroads would reduce their rates by an average of 29 cents a ton, the project could not be justified.

The report was delivered to Mr. Roosevelt four months ago, but only made public yesterday. Among its conclusions were:

Permanent rate reductions of the type and magnitude specified would not be economically justified prior to construction of the canal.

A large volume of traffic, at least 56,000,000 tons a year and probably more, would be affected and gross revenue loss of the railroads would be $35,000,000 a year, possibly more.

The railroads can ill afford, now or in the future, to lose revenue in such an amount.

The railroads have ample capacity to carry any traffic likely to develop for many years to come.

The public has a vital interest in protection of the revenues of an agency of transportation whose services are available the year-round and to large and small shippers on equal terms.

Motor carriers in a limited area would to some extent be adversely affected by construction of the waterway.

The proposed waterway would be constructed over the so-called Pittsburgh-Ashtabula route from Beaver, Pa., on the Ohio River 25 miles below Pittsburgh, up the Beaver River 21 miles to a point near New Castle, Pa., thence up the Mahoning River about 35 miles to Warren, Ohio. From Warren there would be a 46-mile canal to Lake Erie.

Italians Hoard Food, Fearing More Rationing

Rome, Jan. 26.—Frightened by rationing of coffee and sugar, Italians are rushing to buy large quantities of other foods which are later expected to be restricted. Montevideo, Jan. 26 (INS).—The British cruiser Achilles, participant in the battle which culminated in the scuttling of the Nazi pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee, docked at Montevideo today for a 24-hour stay to refuel and take on stores.

German sources here had reported the Achilles crippled or sunk by Nazi submarines off the Brazilian coast.

Wheeler Calls For Job Drive

their demonstration of approval when Wheeler pledged himself "never to vote to send an American boy across the water to fight on foreign soil.

"History tells us," he said, "that foreign wars are an easy device to divert our attention from our own domestic problems. In such wars there will be a blackout of American institutions and possibly of democracy itself. I am convinced that the people of this Nation are firm and united in their determination not to have any part of these foreign conflicts."

Wheeler, accompanied by J. Burke Clements, of Helena, Mont., chairman of the Wheeler-for-President Club, was met on his arrival by a miners' convention delegation consisting of John Owens, Ohio C. I. O. chief; Van A. Bittner, of Charleston, W. Va.; Earl E. Hauck, of Washington; Joseph Hunter, of Montana, and P. T. Fagan, of Pittsburgh, mine union officials.

Says Borah Pledged Support

At a late press conference Wheeler verified a report from Washington that three days before he died Senator Borah had confided an intention of supporting Wheeler for the Presidency if he were nominated by the Democratic Party.

"In my judgment if President Roosevelt wants the nomination he will get it," said Senator Wheeler. "If he wants the nomination, he should say so. If he does not want it, he should say so.

"I think it would be better for him and the Democratic Party to say now if he wants the nomination. The longer the situation runs the more chaotic conditions within the party become. It can only lead to disaster if the confusion continues up to the time of the convention."

Wheeler merely smiled when asked if he would be a candidate for the Presidential nomination. He remarked that he is a candidate for the Senate.

Despite his personal opposition to breaking the third-term tradition, Senator Wheeler said he would support President Roosevelt if he obtained the third-term nomination.

"Any President of the United States can renominate himself if he wants to," he continued. "The Federal Government has too large an organization and too much patronage for anyone to overcome it."

Welcomes Lewis Backing

The Senator said he did not agree with those Presidential advisers who had counseled withholding of a statement by Mr. Roosevelt on his third-term policy until Congress adjourned because it might injure legislation in which the Administration is interested.

"An announcement that he is not a candidate would dissolve Republican opposition (to legislation) that is based on politics alone," he said.

Wheeler, asked about reports that Lewis and the C. I. O. appeared to be strongly in favor of his nomination for the Presidency, said that if the mine union chief "favors me he has never told me so."

"I would be happy to have the support of Mr. Lewis and anyone else interested in preserving democracy in this country." He declared, "I know of no Democrat or Republican who would not be glad to have his support. They would welcome him and that goes for Mr. Taft (Senator Taft, Republican, of Ohio,) on down the line."

Wheeler said at this point that William Green, president of the A. F. of L., "has always been a friend of mine and so far as I know all labor leaders have been my friends."

His "guess" on the Republican Presidential nominee was Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan.

Senate Group May Restore Slashed Funds

Committee Weighs House Reductions In Four Agencies

Vigorous protests by three fund-shy White House agencies and the Maritime Commission yesterday threatened to scale down in the Senate the $95,000,000 saving ordered by the House in the independent offices bill.

The Congressional economy drive slowed down for the week-end as a procession of agencies hard hit by the House reductions asked a Senate Appropriations subcommittee for at least a partial replacement.

The committee concluded hearings with sentiment reportedly in favor of granting the Maritime Commission part of the $75,000,000 hacked from its budget. The Senate group will not vote on any items until Monday.

The three White House agencies denied any funds by the House—the National Resources Planning Board, Office of Government Reports and the Council of Personnel Administration—also apparently are assured of a Senate move to continue their life but reduce their budget allotments.

Director Lowell Mellett appeared for the $1,055,000 asked by the Office of Government Reports, describing the offices "coordinating" activities and defending its radio unit from charges of "propaganda."

Chairman Frederic A. Delano, of the Natitonal Resources Planning Board, uncle of the President, previously outlined the duties of the board, and contended it has a statutory basis. He asked $1,060,000.

President Roosevelt recently criticized the House committee's elimination of the two agencies, and the Republican point of order striking out $25,040 for the Council of Personnel Administratiton.

Bailey Backs Commission

Maritime Commission officials, supported by Chairman Bailey of the Senate Commerce Committee, complained that the House slash in maritime funds would leave the commission $39,000,000 shy at the end of the year and adversely affect the shipbuilding program.

Both houses, striving to scale down appropriations to avoid the $460,000,000 in new taxes proposed by the President, had netted a saving of $128,000,000 on the first four fund bills, but all were threatened with further increases before passage.

A more serious threat to the economy drive was involved in the Agriculture appropriation bill due for House consideration Tuesday. Although a subcommittee has trimmed farm appropriations below budget, a farm bloc campaign in both houses seeks to add $225,000,000 for unbudgeted parity payments.

Debt Limit Issue Rises

That increase would wipe out all savings to date and all others in sight, and place Congress up against the proposition of raising taxes or increasing the statutory debt limit of $45,000,000,000. Both Ways and Means and Senate Finance Committee sentiment is hostile to additional taxes, and the President has been so informed.

Aside from an expression by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau that a $50,000,000,000 debt limit would not be "dangerous," the Administration has avoided any recommendation for an increase in the limit. The President takes the position this is a Congressional responsibility.

Quicker Summons Service in Effect

At the suggestion of Judge George C. Aukam, Municipal Court officials yesterday reduced the time for serving summonses from 20 days to 11 days, in an effort to speed up justice.

The practice has been that if lawyers wanted writs returnable sooner than 20 days, they have been able to obtain such order. Miss Blanche Neff, clerk of the court, said that with the 11-day period, extensions of time for serving summonses will be granted when believed necessary.

Steel Chief Defies Hearing To Find New Price System

Benjamin F. Fairless, president of the United States Steel Corporation, conceded at a Monopoly Committee hearing yesterday that, if the prices charged for steel products followed strictly the basing point pattern, a "one-price system" would result and there would be no competition in the steel industry.

Competition in the industry, however, is proved by the fact that prices actually charged frequently are below the delivered price arrived at by the basing point plan, he said.

He was asked whether he was not saying, in effect, that competition existed when the basing point system failed to work. Fairless replied that the basing point plan had evolved as an orderly means of marketing steel products. If the committee can suggest a better plan, he declared, the United States Steel Corporation will be the first to adopt it.

Fairless and Avery C. Adams, vice president of the corporation in charge of sales, told the committee the corporation discouraged transportation of steel products by trucks calling at steel plants. In such cases, they said, a deduction of 65 per cent in the freight charge from the basing point to delivery point is allowed. It costs more, they explained, to load steel products on trucks.

Treaty Critics Afraid to Talk, Jenkins Avers

Manufacturers Fear Reprisals by Democrats, He Says

By the Associated Press

A Republican's charge that many manufacturers would not testify against the reciprocal trade agreements program for fear of Government "reprisals" furnished a stormy interlude yesterday in a Congressional committee's hearing on proposed extension of the program.

Representative Jenkins (Republican), Ohio, supported by other Republicans, made the accusation, and added that Democratic members of the House Ways and Means Committee were making "vicious attacks" on witnesses in an attempt to "confound" them.

Explaining his "reprisals" statement, Jenkins told newsmen later he meant that many businessmen feared the Government would "investigate their tax records and confront them with any requests they had made to the Government departments."

"In other words they would make them live hard," he said.

Robertson Criticized

Jenkins' remarks followed the action of Representative Robertson (Democrat), Virginia, in questioning a witness, J. M. Wells, of East Liverpool, Ohio, about statements he had made some years ago before the Tariff Commission.

Representative Crowther (Republican), New York, joined Jenkins in the attack.

"It seems to me unfair that the member comments on and criticizes the witness," Crowther said. "I don't know whether the gentleman from Virginia is the appointed representative of the majority or the self-appointed representative."

Looking at the Virginian, Crowther remarked that "some members just can't forget that they once were prosecuting attorneys." Robertson was a county prosecutor before coming to Congress.

Charges G. O. P. Used Files

Later Representative Treadway (Republican) Massachusetts, senior minority member of the committee, took a hand in the attack. Like Jenkins, he criticized the activities of the majority clerks in furnishing the Democratic members with ammunition, particularly about past statements of the witness.

Robertson replied that the Republicans had made frequent use of the Tariff Commission's files and reminded the committee that when the Smoot-Hawley tariff bill was under consideration in 1930, the Democrats were excluded from the committee's deliberations for two months and ten days.

Women Back Treaties

Two women representatives of large organizations—Dr. Emily Hickman, of the National Board of the Y. W. C. A., and Mrs. Arthur Brin, of Minneapolis, representing the National Council of Jewish Women—urged continuation of the trade program.

Dr. Hickman asserted it was a force for international peace, although Representative Knutson (Republican) Minnesota, said that Britain, France, Germany and Russia had had such trade pacts for years.

Mrs. Brin said her organization believed the trade pacts "protect the interests of the consumer."

A Syracuse (N. Y.), attorney, Henry S. Fraser, former technical adviser to George W. Wickersham, said:

"Whatever may be found in judicial support of advance consent by Congress to the making of agreements between States of the Union, it is not possible, I believe, to find any decision upholding advice and consent given in advance by the Senate in fulfilling its functions in the treaty-making process."

E. H. Cooley, of Boston, representing the Massachusetts Fisheries Association, told the committee the reciprocal trade agreement with Canada had worked great hardship on the New England fishing industry.

Training Urged For Social Case Workers

Although most of the key positions in the administration of public social service agencies are filled by trained workers, thousands of case workers have had no professional training, Miss Edith Abbott, dean of the school of social administration of the University of Chicago, said yesterday.

The problem of giving adequate training is the main topic of the three-day American Association of Schools of Social Work meeting at the Mayflower Hotel, in which Miss Abbott is a participant.

The extension of child welfare service into rural areas and the continual growth of national, State and local social welfare legislation is creating a growing need for trained workers and extending the field in which they must be trained, Miss Abbott said.

State scholarships enabled 250 workers in child welfare bureaus to attend the schools last year. Institutes and extension courses were conducted in probably every State, Walter W. Pettit said.

At the annual dinner of the association last night, Miss Virginia P. Robinson, of the Pennsylvania School of Social Work, stressed the importance of discipline in training.

Howard Russell, of the Pennsylvania Department of Public Assistance, will be chairman of discussion at a luncheon meeting at 1 p. m. today.

Panama Revolt Plot Halted By Gen. Stone, D. C. Hears

Army Commander Talked Conspirators Out of the Idea

Maj. Gen. David L. Stone was given credit by official Washington last night for talking revolutionaries in Panama out of a plot to assassinate President Augusto S. Boyd.

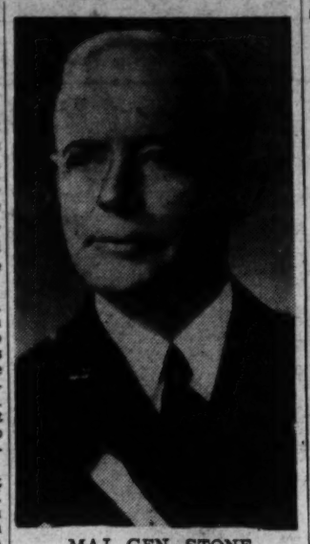
Gen. Stone, now commanding the Fifth Corps Area, Fort Hayes, Columbus, Ohio, formerly commanded American military forces in the Canal Zone.

According to Capital sources, Dr. Boyd was to have been slain when he arrived in Panama by plane to succeed President Arosmena. His death, it was said, was to have been the signal for a "strong faction" to take over the government. Dr. Boyd, who was vice president of the republic and Ambassador to Washington, landed in Panama December 19.

The reason for the change of heart by the conspirators was Gen. Stone. During the years of his Panama command he had proved himself a top-notch diplomat. He had won the friendship and confidence of key officials.

Thus it was that when plans for the revolution had been completed, the conspirators called in Gen. Stone for advice. What happened in that unique conference was described in a speech on the floor of the House by Representative Arthur C. Anderson (Democrat), of Missouri:

"The general in his fine, quiet and fatherly manner, talked to them as a father would to a sick child. He told them that they and their constitutional government were on trial before the whole world; that their actions would show whether democracy in Central America was to live or die; that Dr. Boyd was the constitutional head of their government by their own preselection, and that if they took any steps to prevent him from assuming his rightful office or to engage in intimidation or bloodshed it would seriously blight the future of the Republic of Panama . . . and give aid and comfort to alien systems of government which were not in accord with their ideals."



MAJ. GEN. STONE

"The general spent many hours with these men," Representative Anderson went on, "who had it in their power to throw the country into revolution. When he departed in the late hours of the night he had soothed their feelings and brought them around to his way of thinking. In plain words, he prevented a revolution in Panama and restored good will all around."

Sources at the State Department last night said the department knew nothing of the purported plot, but described Gen. Stone as a "good man."

At the outbreak of European hostilities, President Roosevelt placed Gen. Stone in charge of civil and military administrations in the Canal Zone. He was relieved by Maj. Gen. John L. DeWitt, former commandant of the Army War College here, January 10, being transferred to the Fifth Corps Area.

Postlude

Washington National Ballet presents "Friday at Nine" in Wardman Park Theater. Program of four ballets: "The Merry Wives of Windsor" to music by Carl Otto Nicolai, "Not Quite Cinderella" with music by Edward C. Potter, "Noblesse Oblige" with music by Edward C. Potter, and "Valse a la Winterhalter" to music by Johann Straus 2d.

Opening its second season last evening in a new location in Wardman Park Theater, the Washington National Ballet presented the first of three "Fridays at Nine" to an audience which in size and approving demeanor demonstrated the growth of the organization's following. The mere fact that the group had found it necessary to find more commodious quarters than the King-Smith Playhouse is sufficient evidence of the increasing interest of the public in the company capably directed by Lisa Gardiner. The hearty cooperation of the Washington Composers' Club in writing music for her choreography has been from the beginning an omen of success, and this will continue to be an important factor.

Edward C. Potter was the composer responsible for two of last evening's ballets: "Not Quite Cinderella," which was repeated from last season, and the new "Noblesse Oblige" which had its premiere. He has a deft hand at this type of music, when he turns to it for diversion from such serious works as his excellent "Chatterton" overture, and both his rhythmic and melodic patterns are apt to the purpose.

In "Noblesse Oblige," the choregraphic plot, involving a tragic encounter between a comtesse and a sans-culotte jailer, called for some musical references to the French Revolution. Mr. Potter followed the example of Giordano in "Andrean Chenier" and used just as effectively strains of "Ca Ira," the "Carmagnole" and the "Marseilles." In asmuch as he had less space in which to employ this material, his treatment was neater.

The opening ballet, danced to Nicolai's overture to "The Merry Wives of Windsor," was a pantomimic version of the episode in which portly Sir John Falstaff hides in the laundry basket in a vain attempt to escape the wrath of Page and Ford. At the close of the program came the picturesquely costumed "Valse a la Winterhalter" to the lilting cadences of Strauss.

Between the ballets were interludes of pleasing variety. Irmanelle Corell, Fillis Cole and Marjorie Mitchell danced a charming pas de trois to a Chopin mazurek; Dawn Tagi gave a graceful and proficient exhibition of dancing sur les pointes to Grieg's "Waltz Caprice;" and the "Reverie" of Debussy was the basis for a pas de deux by Mary Day and Willard van Simons. The two outstanding new members of the troupe, Dawn Tagi and Madeleine Lazard, who was the comtesse in "Noblesse Oblige," were warmly welcomed.

Madelyn Sheppard was the pianist for the interludes, the "Merry Wives" and "Not Quite Cinderella." The music for the other two ballets was arranged for two pianos by Herbert Herzfeld, who took his place at the second keyboard. The costumes were the clever designs of Christine Stewart, and the economical and effective decors were the work of Charles Weber.

Bill to Bar Aliens in Canal Sent to Senate

Measure Restricting Workers Approved by Military Affairs Group

By John G. Norris

The Senate Military Affairs Committee yesterday approved legislation to bar aliens from employment in skilled or key positions on Panama Canal construction projects.

A bill requiring contractors for "buildings, flying fields and appurtenances thereto" in the Canal Zone to employ only American citizens in skilled, technical, clerical, administrative and supervisory jobs, was sent to the Senate floor by a unanimous vote.

Action came after Senators and a Representative of the American Federation of Labor testified that there were "thousands of aliens often employed on confidential projects in the important defense zone.

The committee approved a bill to give the Army commanders in Panama and Hawaii the rank of lieutenant general.

Last session, Congress authorized the commanders of the four armies of the United States to hold the rank of lieutenant general. Normally, Panama and Hawaii defense chiefs are major generals. Lieutenant generals receive $500 more in allowances yearly.

The A. F. L. spokesman, William Hushing, said the alien restriction would prevent some contractors who have been employing cheap West Indian labor from undercutting others who deal with organized labor.

Meanwhile, naval officials said that the first of its new "mosquito" fleet, designed to guard American coasts against submarine attack, will soon be ready. Two fast 59-foot torpedo boats are approaching completion at Miami, Fla., and will be delivered for tests at Norfolk, Va., late in the spring.

Exports Mount

Belligerent and neutral foreign nations procured licenses for export of American war implements, mostly aircraft, to a value of $204,555,780 in 1939, the State Department reported yesterday.

This volume contrasted with export licenses procured on war materials valued at $83,000,000 during the preceding year.

French purchases amounting to $122,120,000 led, $85,519,000 of its licenses being for aircraft.

Britain followed next, getting licenses for $20,991,000, of which aircraft accounted for $17,225,000. Australia's licenses covered $11,469,000, and Canada's $6,001,398.

Finland's licenses amounted to $4,487,000, while those of its adversary, Soviet Russia, totaled $1,178,062.

Japan licensed war materials valued at $761,684 and shipped materials valued at $998,590 before the "moral embargo" cut off its supply.

Police Trial Board Flouts Justice Agents

Untruthful Statement Charge Against Sergt. Baker Dismissed

Agents of the Department of Justice who questioned him were not "authorized Government officials," a special police trial board held yesterday in dismissing a charge against Detective Sergt. John Baker that he made untruthful statements to them.

At the same time the board of civilians took under advisement two other charges which grew out of a three-month investigation of the Police Department last spring. Baker was the only man accused as a result of the investigation and his alleged offenses, it was said, were not of criminal nature, but involved only infractions of department rules.

Schulte Backs Character

Surrounded by an impressive group of character witnesses, which included Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana; John O'Calligan, House Office Building paymaster, and several of his superior officers, Baker pleaded not guilty to all counts.

Richard L. Chapman, special agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, testified he interrogated Baker about a watch in his possession and was told several conflicting stories, the last being that it was from the "personal property" drawer of the pick-up squad and Baker was wearing it while his own was being repaired. He also asked Baker about a kit of medical instruments and said Baker admitted having in his possession a speculum given him "10 or 12 years ago."

Baker testified he was held at the Department of Justice from 8 a. m. until 3:45 p. m. and was allowed to communicate with no one. Agents insisted on searching his home, he said, and accused him at first of taking $90,000 in graft and of having performed criminal operations.

Time Limit Studied

The medical instrument, he testified, was given him by a filling station proprietor while he was a patrolman and he threw it in the back of his automobile and forgot it.

In taking the watch and medical instrument charges under advisement, the board overruled an objection by James A. O'Shea, defense counsel, that the statute of limitations had run out on the latter. The board ordered Assistant Corporation Counsel J. Francis Reilly, prosecutor, to prove by 10 a. m. today that the three-year limitation which applies at courts-martial does not apply at trial board hearings.

The special trial board was composed of Jo V. Morgan, member of the District Board of Tax Appeals; Edward A. Dent, tax assessor, and Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, highway director.

of vast quantities of guns and materials to the Western Front, tonight reported that Chancellor Hitler is willing to risk the lives of 1,000,000 soldiers in an early offensive against the Maginot Line.

The Allied command is said to be convinced that the Nazis are preparing a "lightning bolt" offensive as soon as the weather permits.

French reconnaissance planes reported today that the Germans were moving field guns and materials into the Vosges Mountain sector and were digging new gun pits.

The German preparations of the last 24 hours, military informants said, indicate that the Germans may be preparing for an attack.

Clearing weather brought increased activity on both sides. The French made numerous flights and the Germans continued scouting flights deep into France.

It was reported that one French reconnaissance plane flew into central Germany but was driven back by 12 German chaser planes.

Belgian dispatches reaching Paris today reported that the Germans have tested a new "Big Bertha," far more powerful than the one which shelled Paris in the World War and capable of firing 150 miles.

French military authorities said they had no confirmation of development of such an enormous weapon, able to fire virtually twice the distance attained by the shells of the Big Bertha which fell regularly on Paris from Laon Forest early in 1918.

The Belgian reports said that thus far the gun has been able to fire only 128 miles but that the German engineers are confident that its range can be lengthened to 150 miles—so that one of the weapons installed on the Dutch coast near Westkappelle Lighthouse could bombard London.

of supplies daily. All these must be transported from the Murmansk Railroad through 100 kilometers of forests. The Russians, unable to use trucks, have been transporting supplies on sleighs and pushbarrows.

Supply Roads Cut

Finnish skiiers have been incessantly harassing the supply columns and in many cases, the roads between the Russian forces and their base towns were cut. In addition, agile Finnish detachments are incessantly attacking and attempting to encircle these Russians forces.

Incessant Finn attacks make heavy tanks helpless in the woods. Heavy Russian artillery likewise is unusable against speedy Finnish sharpshooters.

What happened at Suomussalmi was repeated at Lake Ladoga in yesterday's fruitless Soviet attacks when hundreds of Russians fell and the Finns also annihilated a column of 400 horses.

On the Karelian Isthmus the Russians attempted yesterday morning a weak attack on Lakes Taipale and Mulajervi, where thousands of Russians have been killed since the outbreak of the war. The attacks were repelled. Today fresh corpses were among the frozen bodies of Soviet soldiers who have lost their lives at Taipale. Russian attacks on the Karelian Isthmus front apparently are mainly to divert attention from the desperate Lake Ladoga situation.

Both yesterday and today inclement weather kept Soviet fliers inactive. Large squadrons of Soviet planes, however, during the last few days have flown over Aabo every afternoon, it is believed in an effort to cut off the Finnish air connection between Stockholm and Aabo.

Retreat in North

Helsinki (Saturday), Jan. 27 (AP).—Paul Sjoblom, Associated Press correspondent with the Finnish army on the Lapland Front, said the Finns believed the Russians were moving back their heavy arms in preparation to resuming the general retreat begun last week at Lake Joutsi, intending to dig in at the central Soviet base of Salla Village.

Salla is less than 40 miles from the Russian border.

"For three days not one shell has been fired from behind the Soviet lines," Sjoblom reported.

"What the attacking Russian forces now undertake is done under the cover of grenade fire.

"The Finns tell me that the Russians prepared their original retreat from Lake Joutsi for a couple of weeks beforehand, gradually carrying away artillery and such equipment as would slow up a surprise getaway or constitute serious loss in case the pursuit came up fast and they had to abandon supplies.

"Here and there in strategic places between Lake Joutsi and Markajarvi I have seen unused Soviet machine-gun nests and trenches which were dug considerably in advance of the retreat. Finnish patrols say the same preparations are being undertaken around Markajarvi, and the absence of Soviet shell fire supports the expectation that before long the Sella Front will be restricted to the area around Salla Village.

"At least a whole division, largely fresh and splendidly equipped, is stationed at Salla."

Sjoblom also said the Russians were taking more and more to skis, but that the Finns would not use the ones they captured from the enemy because they were clumsy.

Hand-to-hand fighting continues in the Lapland woods, between patrols—knife play, bayonet duels and even wrestling.

"One lone Finnish scout told me how he ran into a party of four Russians and had to wrestle all of them until help came," said Sjoblom.

More Men on Way

Berne, Switzerland, Jan. 26 (AP).—More than 2,000 trained Italian and Hungarian volunteers were reported today by Allied sources in Bern to have crossed through France recently en route to Finland by way of the North Sea.

They said the French and the Scandinavian nations had guaranteed free transit for the group under the resolution of the League of Nations Assembly to lend all help possible to the Finns.

The 2,000 were said to have traveled as a battalion with auxiliary units into France to be transported by sea to Norway and thence overland through Sweden to Finland.

Blockade Delays Planes

Uleaborg, Finland, Jan. 26 (U.P.).—Finnish military officials complained today that Great Britain's blockade control is delaying foregin warplanes needed to cope with the Red air force.

One American ship carrying 60 to 70 crated fighting planes to Finland was said to have been detained for several days in a British port for blockade examination.

Swedish Precautions Reported

London (Saturday), Jan. 27 (INS).—Sweden was reported in British press advices today to be establishing machinery for the wholesale evacuation of civilians from Swedish cities to the country.

At the same time, Swedish Foreign Minister Christian Guenther was quoted by the London Daily Telegraph as bluntly declaring Finland's fight against the Soviet invasion bears heavily on the survival of Sweden's independence.

Job Applicant Says Doctor Took Interest in Her Anatomy

Texas Hospital Head Hired Her After Musing on Her Figure, She Says; His Fitness for Post Questioned

By the Associated Press

Austin, Tex., Jan. 26.—Trim Mrs. G. F. Foelsing, 20, former telephone operator at the State hospital headed by Dr. W. J. Johnson, testified today the slightly stoop-shouldered doctor wanted to see her knees when she asked him for a job.

She got the job, she said, after he had inspected her figure, commented on it, and mused he "didn't see why all the boys weren't crazy about" her.

When she told him she did not have sexual relations with men, the witness testified Dr. Johnson commented that she "was missing all the fun in life."

Her testimony, given at a public hearing called by the State board of control, followed that of Miss Lucy Robinson, 20, former waitress at the asylum directed by the 56-year-old married doctor. Miss Robinson said the doctor hugged and fondled her when she applied for a job at the San Antonio hospital.

The two women were the last witnesses called in support of a charge by San Antonio ministers that the doctor, if guilty of evidence they said they had uncovered, was morally unfit to head the hospital.

Tomorrow Dr. Johnson will offer defense testimony. Through his counsel he has labeled the charges as "false and slanderous."

Mrs. Foelsing, the mother of a 3-month-old baby, frequently caused much laughter in the crowded capitol chamber where the board's three members and scores of spectators heard her testify.

The witness said she went to see Dr. Johnson in June, 1938, about a job.

"He asked me to sit down beside him at his desk, but I told him I would just sit in a chair at one side," she said.

She said the doctor inquired if she ever had picked cotton.

Mrs. Foelsing said he remarked he knew a way to determine if she had, and when she inquired how, the doctor replied:

"By your knees."

"I told him I was not in the habit of showing my knees to men, especially men of his age," Mrs. Foelsing said.

Chicagoan Reports Mass Executions Of Poles by Nazis

Copyright by New York Times

Paris, Jan. 26.—A vivid description of the situation in German-occupied Poland was conveyed to this correspondent by Florian Piskorski, from Chicago, who arrived here today from a journey along the Polish frontier in Hungary, Rumania and Slovakia.

He stated that he saw many Poles escaping across the frontier.

"Those from Poznan and Pomorze tell of the incredible suffering of the Polish population there," he said.

Piskorski also confirmed reports of mass executions and expropriations in cities and villages. Germans, he said, were severely punished for showing any sympathy or trying to assist the Poles.

Trio Indicted In $15,000,000 Narcotics Ring

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, Jan. 26.—A distribution syndicate alleged to have dealt in sales of narcotics amounting to nearly $15,000,000, from 1934 to 1933, was believed by Federal authorities to have been broken up today, when a Federal grand jury indicted Harry, George and Charles Neiditch for conspiracy to violate the narcotic laws.

The three men had been indicted Tuesday on charges of attempting to evade the Federal income tax laws.

The indictments charge that the three brothers managed the operations of the narcotic syndicate and received a major part of the profits from the sale of heroin, opium and morphine.

Musicians' Union Freed From Injunction

New York, Jan. 25 (AP).—By a 3-to-2 decision, the appellate division of the New York State Supreme Court today ruled that the musicians' and stagehands' unions should be permitted to use legal and peaceful means to oppose an opera company's use of "canned music."

The ruling reversed an order issued just a year ago by Supreme Court Justice Kenneth P. O'Brien which permanently enjoined the two unions from interfering with Opera-On-Tour, Inc., in a dispute over the use of amplified recorded music versus living musicians.

This Winter on Way to Being Coldest Here in 123 Years

Already crowding the field, this winter last night appeared likely to capture the dubious honor of being the coldest in Washington in 123 years.

Even with the handicap of an unusually mild December, indications were that record low temperatures this month may continue to drive the season's average under the record low of 28.3, set in 1856. So far this month, the average of 26.4 degrees is 7 below the long-term seasonal average of 33.4 degrees, 1 below the average of 1917-18 and 1.9 under the 1856 seasonal record of 28.3 degrees.

"December was much above normal and the cold weather didn't set in until the last few days of the month," said Dr. Joseph B. Kincer, chief meteorologist of the Weather Bureau. "It has been much below normal since cold weather really started and is one of the coldest winters we have had in a long time."

He explained that winter, as the Weather Bureau measures it, means December, January and February. He added that the world has been going through a 25-year warm winter cycle and is about ready for a turn to cold winters.

In the last 25 years, he said, there have been five "kickbacks," or winters colder than normal for the cycle. These were in 1916-17, one degree colder, 1917-18, six degrees colder; 1919-20, four degrees colder; 1933-34, one degree, and 1935-36, four degrees.

So far this winter, Dr. Kincer said, there have been 27 days when the mercury fell below freezing, the longest being December 27 to January 11. Only four days this month, January 12, 13, 14 and 15, has the thermometer remained above freezing and the lowest reading, 8 degrees, stuck for two days, January 19 and 20.

Coldest January on record was that of 1856, with an average of 21.3 degrees, 12.1 below normal. Warmest was in 1932, when the average was 46.8 or 11.7 above normal.

Highest temperature ever recorded here in January was 77 degrees, January 15, 1932, and the lowest was —14, January 1, 1861. Lowest ever noted here was —15, recorded February 11, 1899.

Washington's warmest winter was in 1931-32, when the average temperature was 44.6 degrees.

Hines Appeal Fails; To Be Carried Higher

Capshaw Removed From Bench as Sequel to Trial

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 26.—The conviction of James J. Hines, fallen Tammany district leader under four-to-eight-year sentence for acting as the political "front" for the Dutch Schultz policy racket, was affirmed unanimously today by the appellate division of the State supreme court.

At the same time Magistrate Hulon Capshaw, one of the jurists claimed by the prosecution to have been improperly influenced by the old boss, was removed from the bench.

Martin W. Littleton, counsel for Hines—who was convicted specifically of conspiracy in the operation of a lottery—made immediate preparations to take the case to the State court of appeals.

Hines Out of Town

District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, whose victory in the case had brought him national attention, made no comment.

Hines himself was out of town, and arrangements were made to renew his bail and permit him continued freedom.

The appeal was upon legal grounds, the defense relying particularly upon a contention that the operation of policy, otherwise called the "numbers game," was simply a misdemeanor.

Court Spikes Argument

The court cast out this argument, noting that defense counsel had conceded that the evidence had shown a conspiracy, but had contended that it could not be prosecuted as a felony.

The removal of Capshaw, who had been under suspension since the Hines trial, led directly from that case. The most damaging accusation against him was made by George Weinberg, a Schultz henchman who turned State's evidence, and later killed himself. He swore that on one occasion he had heard Hines ask Capshaw to "take care" of a policy charge and that the magistrate had replied, "I haven't failed you yet."

10 Draw Terms Of 6 to 30 Months In Narcotics Cases

Justice Peyton Gordon gave sentences ranging from 6 to 30 months, and fines totaling $325, to 10 persons convicted of narcotics violations, in District Court yesterday.

Lawrence E. McNally was fined $25 and given from 24 to 30 months at the Federal narcotic farm at Lexington, Ky.

Four others sentenced to the farm were Edward R. Johnson, one to two years and a $50 fine; Bainbridge Thornley, one to two years, $50 fine; Richard Washington, one year to 18 months and a $25 fine; John Mackey, 18 months to two years, $25 fine.

Prison terms were given to Richard Brooks, one to two years and $25; Eleanor Johnson, one year to 15 months and $25; Ersaline Thomas, six months to one year; Robert Thomas Burgess, one year to 15 months and $25; Wilhelmina Scott, one to two years and $50.

German Envoys To Balkans See Hitler, Ribbentrop

By C. Brooks Peters

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Jan. 26.—German Ministers to Greece, Bulgaria, Yugoslavia, Rumania and Hungary have consulted with Chancellor Hitler and Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop in Berlin during the last week, it was learned here today.

In view of the forthcoming Belgrade conference of the Balkan entente—Rumania, Jugoslavia, Greece and Turkey—it was pointed out the Reich government desired to survey the Balkan situation with respect to its own interests.

Britain Doubles Bacon, Ham Ration

London, Jan. 26 (AP).—British conviction that the navy and air force are solving the problem of German assaults upon the empire's vital supply lines was bolstered today by a food ministry order doubling the bacon and ham ration. Conclusion of an economic and financial agreement with the Greek government also was announced.

The new rationing order, effective January 29, increased to 8 ounces the amount of bacon or ham allowed each person a week.

RFC Attorney Is Accused of Violating Law

Marcantonio Charges Hatch Act Evaded by Puerto Rican Leader

By the United Press

Representative Vito Marcantonio (American Labor), New York, said last night he has filed with Attorney General Jackson charges that Benjamin Horton, Democratic national committeeman for Puerto Rico, is violating the Hatch "clean politics" act.

Horton, Marcantonio said, is employed by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation as a $3,000-a-year attorney on a temporary appointment basis. He charged that the "temporary" aspect of the assignment is a subterfuge to circumvent the act.

The law was passed by Congress last year and was designed to bar use of Federal patronage to build up political machines. It prohibits all Federal employes, except top policy-making officials, from actively engaging in politics.

Charges Patronage Policy

"Horton is in no sense a policy-making official in his duties," Marcantonio said. "The only policy he makes is in his recommendations on Federal patronage for Puerto Rico."

He said he had learned that Horton resigned from a regular, full-time position with the RFC last fall and was immediately given "temporary reappointment." That appointment, he said, was made on October 11 and expires in June.

"In this manner," Marcantonio asserted, "they avoided the necessity of making public Horton's name on the RFC's legal rolls."

Horton Is Silent

Reached at his home here, Horton said he had no comment.

Marcantonio said the fact that Horton is employed on a temporary basis does not detract from illegality of his service.

4 Ships Lost In War at Sea; Week's Toll 11

19 of Crews Missing; French Vessel, Three Neutral Craft Sunk

By the United Press

London, Jan. 26.—The torpedoing and sinking of two merchant ships, one French and the other Swedish, by German submarines and the loss of two other neutral vessels were reported today and 19 members of the crews were said to be missing.

In the last week 11 ships have gone down in the war at sea with at least 331 persons dead or missing, including the lives lost aboard the British destroyer Exmouth.

24 Men Picked Up

The ships sunk by German U-boats were the French steamer Toruny, which went down in the Bay of Biscay Thursday night, and the Swedish steamer Sonja sunk by a submarine off the Irish coast last Sunday.

Two lifeboats of the Sonja, one carrying 13 men and the other 11, were picked up and their occupants landed at Irish ports. The submarine, they said, fired four warning shots before sinking the Sonja.

A Madrid dispatch reported that the Spanish steamer Castillo de Monforte arrived at Vigo with 28 survivors of the crew of the 4,000-ton Toruny.

Eight other members of the Toruny's crew, adrift in a lifeboat, were reported missing and six of those rescued were injured.

The Toruny was en route from Senegal to Bordeaux.

The captain and 11 crew members of the Sonja were landed today at a port on the southwest Irish coast and reported that their vessel was sunk, presumably by a mine, last Sunday while bound from New York to Rotterdam with a cargo of cotton and rubber.

Thirteen of Crew Missing

A lifeboat containing 13 of the Sonja's crew was missing.

The Norwegian steamer Gudveig, 1,300 tons, and the Latvian steamer Everene, 4,434 tons, were reported today to have been sunk in the North Sea.

In the sinkings reported today 32 persons were reported missing.

Seven members of the Gudveig's crew were landed at a Scottish port but ten others were missing.

Congress Awaits Hint on Embargo

upward tariff duties on Japanese goods.

Bloom said his House group will defer to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in consideration of pending Japanese embargo bills, adding: "I feel we should not do anything until the State Department tells us to. They have been negotiating and they know what the situation is."

Pittman had tentatively scheduled Senate committee consideration of his own discretionary embargo bill and the Schwellenbach mandatory measure for Wednesday, with State Department officials present.

Pittman, who would like to arm the Administration with every economic weapon for an "open door" for American trade in China, had not returned yesterday from Senator Borah's funeral.

In his absence it was suggested that the Senate committee might first call up the pending Finnish loan plan, embodied in a bill to double the lending power of the Export-Import Bank.

Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, suggested that the State Department might be vested with authority to raise or lower trade restrictions on Japan, depending on developments.

Barkley Asks Caution

Senate Majority Leader Barkley, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, advised against "precipitous action" by Congress.

Other Foreign Relations committeemen privately advising against hasty action included Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, and Senator Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi. Connally suggested it might be well for the committee to first take up the Export-Import Bank lending authorization, permitting additional Finnish trade credits.

House Chairman Bloom said the State Department should be given time to collect all the facts on post-treaty relations, as Japan's future actions in the end will determine whether trade relations are restored to a treaty basis. He said termination of the treaty "simply means that excuses and gestures are no longer acceptable."

"It is to Japanese interest to be friendly with us," said Bloom. "Until we hear from the State Department, I feel that we should do nothing to embarrass them and put us in the position of being unfriendly. If the department should find we need an embargo, then all right."

Nothing to Add

America's trade with Japan went on a "day-to-day" basis at midnight last night, after the 28-year-old treaty first lapsed in Tokyo at 10 a. m. Thursday.

Secretary of State Hull was confined at his home by a cold, but State Department officials had nothing to add to their word to Japanese Ambassador Kensuke Horinouchi on Tuesday that no temporary interim agreement will be considered here.

At the White House, Chinese Ambassador Hu Shih and Dr. W. W. Yen, Shanghai banker and former foreign minister, chatted with the President for half an hour. The ambassador said Dr. Yen, an economic adviser to the central government, is leaving for China and had called to bid the President good-by.

May Ask New Credit

Ambassador Hu Shih said they did not discuss at this time the possibility of a further Export-Import Bank loan to China, as "the country and Congress are now so engrossed with aid to Finland."

But he added, "When the opportune time presents itself we expect to present our wishes for a new credit." He indicated the $25,000,000 credit already advanced to China by the Export-Import Bank for non-military purchases in this country is near exhaustion. The pending Senate Export-Import Bank bill places a limit of $30,000,000 on credits to any one country.

Union Monkeys Quit Throwing Coconuts at Noon, Film Shows

Carveth Wells Back From Malay Jungle With Movies of Seven-Inch Deer and Fish That Climb Trees and Wink Their Eyes

By Scott Hart
Post Staff Writer

From somewhere east of Suez, where the deer are 7 inches tall and fish climb trees and wink their eyes, has returned Carveth Wells, the explorer, with the story that the monkeys are unionized now and won't pitch coconuts down after 12 noon each day.

Wells proves all this with movies, such as he showed last night for the National Geographic Society. The animal life was quite something, but so were those weeds that accommodatingly bend down so that golfers can find golf balls knocked into the rough.

Consider the Periopthalmus, the fish that climbs the tree and winks his eyes. Long ago Wells came back with this information. Nobody believed. So on the last trip into the Malay jungle he made the movie.

Then, the Malay lizards. When they are pursued, they give their tails a jerk and a section of the tail breaks off. The dismembered part writhes and wriggles for 10 minutes, from reflex action, which befuddles the pursuer. He doesn't know whether he is chasing the lizard or will get only the tail end of a bargain. Pictures prove it.

And the monkeys! For years they have been sent up trees to throw down coconuts, and were pretty active and hardworking, probably thinking the business some sort of a game. Then they noticed, over a long period, that the men struck off at noon and went to sleep. So do the monkeys now.

Then the deer's slight 7-inch height was photographed effectively with an elephant in the background. Active fellows. When pursued, they leap into trees, pretending they are fruit.

There is the phalanga, an animal that flies through the air with at least a cumbersome ease, and the wild bull, one of the meanest of animals, that a tiger will attack only when the bull is old and enfeebled.

And there are orchids, that grow so plentifully that the hotels use them for table adornment; and the Saki dwarfs that take to American dances; and the mother elephants that arrange for an elephant nurse when baby elephants are born; and the sacred snakes that don't bite during religious ceremonies because they're already too well fed.

Then, too, there are the elephants that store up water in their mouths and drink it when the distance between streams is far, or squirt it on their owners when their moods are bad.

Wells says these movies are the first of such things.

U-Boats to Attack Suspected Traps

Berlin, Jan. 26.—German submarine commanders have orders to attack without warning any vessels they suspect of being U-boat traps, it was stated by Rear Admiral Doenitz, commander of the German U-boat fleet, in an interview today.

British "Q" boats, or U-boat traps, which fly flags of neutral vessels, have made particular precautions vital, he said.

Liberals Back King as Canada Plans Election

March 26 Tentatively Set; Dissolution of Parliament an Issue

By Frederick T. Birchall.
Copyright by New York Times

Ottawa, Jan. 26.—The general election which must follow yesterday's dissolution of the Canadian Parliament has been provisionally set for Tuesday, March 26. Confirmation waits upon a report from the chief electoral officer, but under the present law, the election cannot be held earlier.

Meantime, the leaders are busy preparing for what threatens to be the bitterest political campaign since confederation. The lightning stroke by the Mackenzie King government in dissolving Parliament a few hours after it met yesterday, has united both liberals and conservatives. Each held a caucus today.

The liberals contend that valuable time is being saved by taking a direct appeal to the people. They are solidly behind Mackenzie King and his ministers.

Dissolution to Be Issue

The conservatives hope to make Mackenzie King's "flouting of Parliament" the issue. They were arguing today that the prime minister is "afraid to meet the representatives of the people and submit the conduct of his government to their analysis, inquiry and discussion." The conservative caucus voted confidence in Dr. Manion as the party leader.

Dr. Manion promised that if the conservatives were successful a "truly national government" into which would be drafted "the very best brains in the country" would be formed.

"Ask him whose are the best brains he proposes to draft," was the prime minister's reply when the statement was reported to him. "The people are entitled to know for whom they are voting. They should not be expected to elect a government of ministers whose identity they don't know."

King Feels He Has Them

The prime minister's attitude is that he has already recruited the best brains in the country in his cabinet.

If the government carries the day, Mackenzie King plans to bring Parliament together in April.

Dr. Manion proposes to make his campaign on the issue of responsible government.

Brazil Reports Subs Near Bahia And Bermuda

Copyright by New York Times

Rio de Janeiro, Jan. 26.—German submarines are prowling in Bahia waters accompanied by a mother ship, skippers of coastwise vessels have reported in Bahia.

According to reports, submarines were found near Ilheos, Brazil's main cocoa center, which is located between the States of Bahia and Espiritu Santo.

Another report here today was that submarines had been seen around Bermuda.

German merchantmen refuged in Brazilian ports have been loading recently, and several have sailed at night.

At Brazilian ports there still are 13 German ships.

Reich Offers Arms Barter To Rumania

Increased Supplies Of War Materials Available to Bucharest

Copyright by New York Times

Bucharest, Rumania, Jan. 26.—Reports from Cernauti, near the Russian frontier, state that Rumanian freight trains still are being accepted by Russian officials, indicating that the Germans have not taken control of the 400-kilometer Cernauti-Lwow-Cracow Railway line.

Trains carrying food are being accompanied by German guards.

It also has been revealed that Germany has offered Rumania increased supplies of war materials in payment for raw materials bought by the Reich because the latter's stocks are now more than ample to supply demands of the fighting forces.

Current negotiations in Bucharest cover four main points.

First is the Cernauti-Lwow-Cracow Railway. Rumanians are insisting that their cars be unloaded at the border town of Oraseni because the Germans are slow in returning them when they are allowed to proceed to the Reich. Germany is running from 12 to 15 trains daily.

Another matter under discussion is payment for materials bought by the Reich in Rumania. Due to the present inaction on the Western Front, Germany can provide Rumania with far greater quantities of war supplies than before and has proposed that Rumania's claims, amounting to 1,000,000,000 lei, be paid off in armament.

The Germans are said to have suggested that in return for greater armament supplies, the Rumanian armament industries be reorganized to synchronize with Goering's war factories, so that when the war really begins in the spring, the two industries can work hand in hand.

This offer has startled Rumanian circles, but it does not seem to have been turned down entirely, as the offer of larger scale shipments of war materials seems to be acceptable.

Another question under discussion is timber. The Finnish-Russian war has cut off Germany's normal supplies from Finland and she is now seeking to open up sources in Rumania.

Cereals provide another subject. Thirty thousand tons are awaiting a buyer in Braille. The Germans want to purchase the entire lot, but transport difficulties have to be overcome.

Japan's Generals Warn U. S. of War and yet the United States is demanding that Japan restore the "open door."

The army's attitude is shared to some extent by Japanese diplomats and civilians in China. They hope for the best but fear the "worst eventuality"—war with the United States. One Japanese diplomat in Peiping commented:

"I sincerely believe an American embargo might bring war. Our whole nation is united in our China adventure, which we believe a just and worthy cause. We have made too many sacrifices to abandon it. That mood tends to make us close our eyes to the weaknesses of Japan and might, under certain circumstances, lead us to national suicide."

Economic control is what the Japanese fought for, and the army believes it is "absurd and unreasonable" for any one to expect that the Japanese will simply walk out of China.

Seizure Overshadows Treaty

Tokyo (Saturday), Jan. 27 (AP).—Continuing excitement over the British seizure of 21 German seamen from a Japanese liner today obscured the dying hours of the 1911 American-Japanese trade treaty.

Some sources said they believed the sentiment against the British was being stirred deliberately in order to divert Japanese attention from the expiration of the pact.

While the lapse of the agreement frees the United States to put pressure on Japan in behalf of American interests in China, reliable information indicated that vital industries had a backlog of materials necessary to maintain normal production for at least a year.

Nevertheless, Japanese will devote close attention to debates in the United States Senate on various proposals to impose an embargo on exports to Japan.

High sources indicated Japan would make no special efforts to obtain a new agreement with the United States immediately but would try to prevent any incidents in China which might aggravate the situation.

Britain's reply to the Japanese protest against the seizure last Saturday from the S. S. Asama Maru of the German seamen was expected. The foreign office received a flood of telegrams and letters urging Japan to take strong action.

Brdtish Ship Halted

Shanghai, Jan. 26 (AP).—The captain of the British coastal steamer Wing Sang reported today that a Japanese naval boarding party searched and detained his ship for more than 15 hours in apparent retaliation for the British seizure of 21 Germans from the liner Asama Maru.

Bar to Pay Tribute to Justice Butler

Taft and Donahey to Speak at Memorial Exercises Today

Members of the Supreme Court Bar will pay tribute to the late Associate Justice Pierce Butler at memorial exercises at 11 a. m. today in the Supreme Court Chamber.

FLANNERY

An address by Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, will be read by Senator Danaher (Republican), of Connecticut. Other speakers include former Solicitor General Thomas D. Thacher, George Haight, Chicago lawyer; and W. E. Rumble, of St. Paul, Minn., of the law firm of which the late justice was a member.

The attorneys, gathering in the Court chamber, will be called to order by Solicitor General Biddle. Former Attorney General William D. Mitchell, who was Justice Butler's law partner, will preside as chairman in the Chief Justice's seat on the bench. He will read a number of documentary tributes.

Resolutions concerning the work of the justice, who served on the high court from 1923 until his death in 1939, will be adopted at the meeting and presented to the Supreme Court later by Attorney General Jackson. The resolutions have been drawn up by a sub-committee consisting of former Senator George W. Pepper, of Pennsylvania, Michael J. Doherty, former law partner of Justice Butler in St. Paul, and John S. Flannery, Washington attorney.

The committee on arrangements consists of Attorney General Jackson, and Frank J. Hogan, former president of the American Bar Association; J. Widow's Suit Says Union Failed to Protect Husband

New York, Jan. 26 (AP).—A long dormant mystery—the slaying of R. Norman Redwood, "sandhog" union leader—was revived today by a $200,000 suit brought against the union by Redwood's widow who charged the union failed to give her husband "proper and adequate protection."

Redwood, business agent of the compressed Air Workers Union, Local 102, was shot to death the night of February 19, 1937, as he sat in an automobile in the driveway of his home at Teaneck, N. J.

Mrs. Redwood contended in her action that the union was aware of threats against Redwood's life and had agreed to provide him with protection, but had not done so.

Home for Aged Does Its Best On Lean Purse, Says Bondy which is less than the present appropriation.

Mrs. Roosevelt, who was accompanied by Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, described the home as "below the standards of decency" and "like the old type prison of 20 or 30 years ago, where inmates were herded together."

"The plumbing seems to be totally inadequate, and also the kitchen," she said.

In the 1941 budget the Board of Public Welfare had requested $12,500 for an addition to the main dining room, but this item was deleted by the Commissioners.

Another item of $10,000 had been requested to replace some of the plumbing, but this, too, was deleted by the Commissioners.

The First Lady brought with her ten cartons of cigarettes and two boxes of flowers. She was told by Supt. Frank B. Haskell that the home cares for 640.

A check on the other requests made by the Welfare Board showed the Commissioners had:

Deleted an item for $20,000 for a new administration building and home for nurses and other female personnel.

Reduced from $80,640 to $73,420 the sum for salaries. The welfare board wanted to hire two hospital attendants and an additional nurse.

Reduced from $86,800 to $75,550 the amount for maintenance of the institution.

Deleted an item for $101,000 for new equipment for the power plant. They did allow $1,000 for a study of the plant but this sum was deleted by the Budget Bureau.

Deleted an item for $10,000 for an addition to the colored women's ward, to take care of 50.

It was pointed out that the budget permits only $58.70 to feed one inmate each year. To this amount, however, is added the individual portion of the $31,407 in farm products produced at the grounds at Blue Plains, D. C. This individual amount is $46 a year. The total cost per inmate per year is $211.

This compares with the per capita cost at the National Training School for Girls, which is $500 a year and the $2 a day cost per District inmate at the National Training School for Boys.

First Lady's Statement

Mrs. Roosevelt's statement, which she released after her visit, follows:

"In line with my point of view that Washington institutions should be models which people from other communities could visit in order to get standards by which to gauge what they are doing at home, I was tremendously disappointed in the Blue Plains Home For the Aged. It seems to me far below the standards of decency, both in the plant itself and in the appropriations which Congress allows for upkeep and in limited personnel. The establishment seems to me to be run on extremely low standards.

"The plumbing seems to be totally inadequate and also the kitchen.

"Personnel also is inadequate and the program does not differentiate between types of individuals in order to give them variety of treatment. This was particularly depressing.

"I also was particularly shocked to find young people there, because the home seems to be used as a convalescent institution for certain indigent cases whom Gallinger and other local hospitals could no longer care for.

"The only thing I could think of as I went through the institution is that it was like the old type of prison of 20 or 30 years ago, where inmates were herded together.

"I went to Blue Plains because I have been visiting various Washington institutions and I had a letter from an individual who had visited this home for the aged, asking if I would not go there."

Reciprocity Club Hears John Vance

History of the Congressional Law Library since its establishment in 1832 was traced yesterday by John Vance, law librarian of Congress, at a luncheon meeting of the Reciprocity Club in the Mayflower Hotel.

The library, he said, is second largest in the country. Its collection of law books includes many formerly owned by the Nation's great.

The club also heard reports on its welfare project. In less than a year, members were told, the Reciprocity Club has furnished 101 underprivileged school children with eyeglasses.

Gen. Keefer To Head D.C. Red Cross

Executive Committee Names Gen. Pershing Honorary Chairman

Brig. Gen. F. R. Keefer was reelected chairman of the D. C. Chapter, American Red Cross, and Gen. John J. Pershing was named honorary chairman, at an executive committee meeting yesterday in the Chapter House.

Victor B. Deyber was elected first vice chairman; Miss Mabel T. Boardman, second vice chairman; James C. Dulin, jr., treasurer, and George B. McClellan, counselor. Mrs. Dwight Davis was elected to a place on the executive committee.

Rear Admiral Charles Conrad, chairman of the finance committee, reported $85,436 had been reserved from Roll Call funds for the coming year's work. In addition $14,155 has been appropriated from reserve funds to meet production needs for war relief.

Miss Boardman, chairman of volunteer special services, reported a large number of women are now meeting daily to sew, knit and make surgical dressings.

The chairman appointed committee and activities heads for 1940 as follows:

Miss Mabel T. Boardman, volunteer special services; Mrs. John B. Cleland, jr., staff assistance; Mrs. P. J. Altizer, garment production; Miss Grace S. Wright, surgical dressings production; Mrs. Lilley M. France, Braille; Mrs. William S. Spencer, canteen corps; Mrs. L. E. 2 Men Found Dead By Gas in Room

In the same third-floor room where an elderly veteran was asphyxiated two weeks ago, two young men were found dead yesterday, gas pouring from a hot plate tube.

One was identified tentatively as Hubert Stephens Pate. The other remains unidentified.

Police expressed the belief the tube had been torn loose from the stove accidentally by one of the men moving across the room. None of the jets was open.

Aid was summoned by Abraham F. Faust, occupant of an adjoining room.

Proposed Baptist Church in Arlington

Artist's drawing of proposed $45,000 Mount Vernon Baptist Church in Arlington

Officials of the Mount Vernon Baptist Church, Arlington, Va., shortly will begin construction of a new $45,000 church and educational building.

Expected to rise on the present site at Twenty-third and Joyce streets, the project will have a sunken garden, through which there will be an entrance to a fellowship hall. The junior, beginners' and primary departments will be accommodated on that floor.

The second floor will contain the church auditorium, pastor's study, women's parlor, Boy Scout room and the space for the intermediate department, the latter having three classrooms and an assembly room.

The educational wing will contain the adults' and young people's departments and the church library, the youth unit also having an assembly room with a fireplace.

Coming Week's Religious Calendar Will Be Crowded

With conferences, banquets, pre-Lenten services, membership and financial drives, and other activities slated, the coming week's local religious calendar will be crowded. Many are city-wide functions.

DR. MILLER

Notable will be the annual "Victory Dinner" of the Methodist Union, a city-wide temperance mass meeting, a preparatory service for the National Christian Mission, the pre-Lenten service of the District Lutheran Brotherhood, and the launching of the Washington Federation of Churches' financial drive.

Also the annual church Social Work Institute sponsored the Social Welfare Department of the federation, the annual banquet of the District Christian Endeavor Union, the annual dinner of the Washington Lutheran Inner Mission Society and the Potomac Assembly of the Brother of St. Andrew's meeting.

Temperance Meeting Monday

Scheduled for Tuesday at 6:30 p. m. at Hamline Methodist Church, Sixteenth and Allison streets northwest, the "Union" dinner will have as speaker Dean Lynn Harold Hough, D. D., LL. D., J. U. D., of Drew Theological Seminary, Madison, N. J., who will discuss "Defeat and Victory in a Confused World."

Church and temperance organizations of the city will unite in the mass meeting on Monday at 8 p. m. at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, Ninth and Massachusetts avenue northwest, with Sam Morris, internationally famous crusader against the repeal of the eighteenth amendment, as speaker.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, and Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, regional prelate of the Methodist Church, have agreed to serve as vice chairmen of the committee on arrangements for the coming of the National Christian Mission here in February, 1941, for which a preparatory meeting will be held this Friday at 8 p. m. at Calvary Baptist Church. Dr. Raphael Harwood Miller, pastor of National Christian Church, Thomas circle, will be chairman.

Speakers at the preliminary meeting will be Dr. Jesse M. Bader, of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, and Dr. Elmer R. Homrighausen, of Princeton Theological Seminary. The Washington Federation of Churches will sponsor the local mission in cooperation with the Federal Council.

Twenty thousand dollars has been set as the goal of the annual federation of churches drive, scheduled to be initiated Sunday, February 4, in the more than 150 Protestant congregations affiliated with the organization.

The Woman's Council of the federation, which heretofore has maintained a separate budget, will join in the united appeal. J. Fred Laise, Foundry Methodist layman, will direct the campaign on a voluntary basis. Dr. W. L. Darby is executive secretary of the federation with offices at 1749-51 N street northwest.

Officers of the District of Columbia Lutheran Brotherhood will be installed at the pre-Lenten service on Wednesday at 8 p. m. at Atonement Lutheran Church, North Capitol and Rhode Island avenues northwest.

They will be Lindley L. Smith, St. Paul's Lutheran Church, president; J. A. Donaldson, St. Stephen's, vice president; L. R. Hanson, Luther Place Memorial, secretary; James A. Solt, Atonement, treasurer, and the Rev. M. J. Bieber, pastor of Silver Spring Lutheran Church, spiritual adviser. Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor of Reformation Lutheran Church, will speak. Martin A. McGrory is president of the Maryland Synodical Brotherhood.

Endeavor Week, being launched here tomorrow under the auspices of the District Christian Endeavor Union, will be climaxed with a banquet February 5 at the Burlington Hotel. A membership drive will begin tomorrow.

The membership costs $10 and entitles the holder to voting privileges in the election of trustees and officers of the local unit. Miss Julia Collier is chairman of the membership drive, and assisting her are Lindley Raiford and Paul Williams, the latter International Endeavor Society trustee.

Memberships have been reported from Mrs. Roosevelt and Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes. The latter's gift will be given to high school age endeavorers at Calvary Baptist Church, and the "First Lady's" gift to outstanding endeavorers at the banquet.

Coleman Jennings, president of the Washington Community Chest, and the Rev. A. J. Du Bois will address the Potomac Assembly of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew's on Thursday at 5:30 p. m. at St. Agnes' Episcopal Church, 44 Q street northwest. Preparations will be made at that time for the coming annual corporate communion of the organization at the Washington Cathedral. H. Lawrence Choate is president of the Potomac Assembly.

The Washington Lutheran Inner Mission Society will hold its thirteenth annual dinner on Friday at 6:30 p. m. at Reformation Lutheran Church, with Dr. C. E. Krumbholz, secretary of the department of welfare, National Luthern Council, speaking. The function will climax the annual roll call of the local unit.

With "The Church and the Community" as its theme, and the formulation of church social welfare principles as its objective, the second annual Institute of Church Social Work will be held on Tuesday from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m.

It will be sponsored by the social welfare department of the Washington Federation of Churches, whose secretary, the Rev. John L. Mixon, said yesterday that "in repeating the institute for a second year, the department of social welfare is responding to what appears to be a widespread desire among church leaders for further discussion and interchange of opinion and information in the field of church welfare activities.

The Rev. F. Bland Tucker, social welfare committee chairman of the federation, will preside at the morning session. Dr. E. L. Ford, director of religious education of the host church, will bring greetings, and the Rev. O. G. Robinson, pastor of Calvary Methodist Church, will conduct the opening services.

Dr. E.B. Lawson Will Preach At Augustana

Scheduled Speaker Is President of Upsala College

Dr. Evald B. Lawson, president of Upsala College, East Orange, N. J., will address tomorrow's services at Augustana Lutheran Church.

Mrs. Louise Englund, mother-in-law of Dr. Arthur O. Hjelm, pastor of the church, with whom she made her home, was stricken with a cerebral hemorrhage last Tuesday, and now lies at the point of death.

St. Matthew's. A service of rededication will be held tomorrow morning in connection with the reopening of the renovated church building. The Rev. Theodore P. Fricke will preach on "Beautifying the Lord's House."

Representatives of five local Lutheran churches will have joint meeting at St. Matthew's tomorrow at 8 o'clock, in the interest of the tenth anniversary celebration of the American Lutheran Church.

Grace. As a member of the President's committee on child welfare which met last week in Washington, Dr. C. E. Lenski will preach on some of the findings of the conference relating to religion and the moral training of children in a democracy.

Luther Place. The Rev. Frederick J. Eckert, B. D., assistant pastor, will preach on "Remember the Sabbath Day" at the 11 a. m. service tomorrow morning.

Atonement. "Strength through Weakness" is the sermon subject of the Rev. James T. Powers tomorrow at 11 a. m.

The annual candle-lighting service will be at 8 p. m. The installation of the officers of the organizations of the church will take place.

St. Paul's. Dr. Henry W. Snyder will preach tomorrow morning on the theme "Duty Plus."

Georgetown. "The Third Heaven," will be the subject of the Rev. Harold E. Beatty.

Reformation. Continuing the series of evening sermons on "Translating the Beatitudes Into Modern Life," Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor of the Lutheran Church of the Reformation will speak on the theme, "Blessed Are the Persecuted. Why Do Some Folks Enjoy Being Martyrs?" "After Paralysis—What?" is Dr. Blackwelder's subject for the 11 a. m. service.

Christian Science Sermon on 'Truth'

"Truth" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow, at 11 a. m. All are cordially invited to attend the church services including the Wednesday evening meetings at 8 o'clock.

The golden text is from Isaiah 25:1, "O Lord, thou art my God; I will exalt thee, I will praise thy name; for thou hast done wonderful things; thy counsels of old are faithfulness and truth."

Mgr. Sheen to Speak

Beginning the second phase of his series on "The Seven Last Words and the Seven Virtues," the Right Rev. Fulton J. Sheen, of Catholic University, will speak tomorrow at 6 p. m. over the N. B. C. red network on the Catholic hour program. The National Council of Catholic Men sponsors the broadcasts.

Services in French

Dr. Marcel Brun will address the French congregation of Washington tomorrow afternoon at St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette Square. The members will tender him a reception afterward.

Because Woman Changed Mind on Buying A Hat, Esther Memorial to Get Parsonage

Instead, Mrs. Joy Used Money to Start Fund For Rector's Residence

By Robert Tate Allan

Because a woman changed her mind about buying a new hat, the congregation of Esther Memorial Episcopal Church, Congress Heights, soon will have its first parsonage.

According to the story related yesterday by the Rev. Roy E. Le Moine, rector, Mrs. Emma Joy several years ago was on her way downtown to purchase a new chapeau when she recalled that the congregation did not have a parsonage. Rectors had to live in rented quarters.

Deciding to "do something about it," she returned home, placed the $1.98 in a parsonage fund, to which the congregation added nickels and dimes until it reached $2,500 a couple of years ago. Henry Dietrich, a loyal friend of the parish, agreed to give 50 cents for every dollar raised for the purpose.

Not so long ago the parish spent $1,100 of the amount to buy a lot in Mellon street in Wilson Park, nearby, where the parsonage will stand when completed this spring. With recent donations, the remaining cash amounts to $3,000. The cost of the finished project, including the lot, will be about $8,000.

A seven-room brick dwelling, now two-thirds finished, it will have two entrances, including one to the rector's study, and is six blocks from the church. A. Raymond Eno, member of the parish and Federal architect, drew the plans for the structure with the aid of his son, Arthur R. Eno.

It was in the home of Mrs. Joy, charter member and widow of a Methodist clergyman, that Esther Memorial Church had its origin back in the early '90's. Sunday school classes were held at her home for sometime, a church being built in 1902 with the financial aid of Col. Arthur E. Randle.

The church is a memorial to his mother-in-law, Esther Shannon, Latter Mrs. Randle left a $10,000 legacy to the church, with a pew dedicated forever to the Randle heirs.

Mrs. Emma Joy views progress on the parsonage, financed by fund which she started years ago with $1.98

The Rev. Willard Davenport, rector of Emmanuel Episcopal Church, Anacostia, conducted services at Esther Memorial Church when the latter was a mission of his parish. The Rev. Patrick Murphy, curate emeritus of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, near Washington Circle, was preacher at Esther Memorial Church from 1928 until the coming of the Rev. Waldo Manley in 1931. He served until 1938.

Much progress has been noted at the Congress Heights parish since the advent of Mr. Le Moine in the summer of 1938. The congregation has grown, numerically and spiritually; the interior of the church has been recarpeted and painted, and new kneeling cushions will be purchased very soon.

Mrs. Hayes serves as President of the Woman's Guild, which will carry the mortgage on the parsonage, amounting to about $500 annually. James Blaine and Elmer Hayes are senior and junior wardens, respectively; Mrs. Dietrich heads the Woman's Auxiliary, and Mrs. Joy, the Junior Daughters of the King.

Other leaders are Charles McGogney, Laymen's League; Amerlia Xander, Young People's Fellowship; and the Rev. Mr. Le Moine, Earl De Marr and Miss Ethel Hayes, the Sunday school. E. J. Newcomb is among the oldest members. The rector's father is the Rev. Emanuel A. Le Moine, rector of St. Columba's Episcopal Church, here.

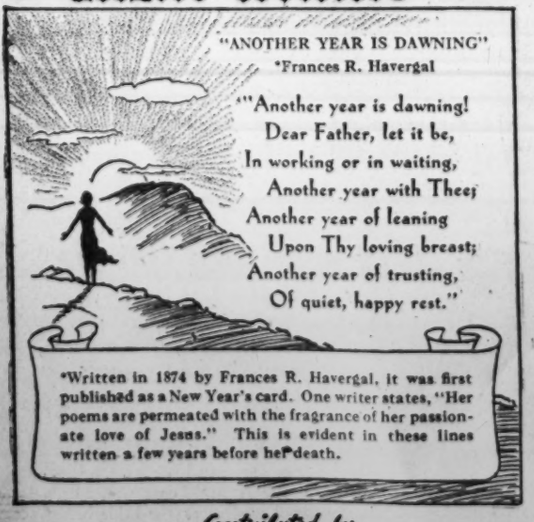
Little Stories about GREAT HYMNS

"ANOTHER YEAR IS DAWNING"
Frances R. Havergal

"Another year is dawning!
Dear Father, let it be,
In working or in waiting,
Another year with Thee;
Another year of leaning
Upon Thy loving breast;
Another year of trusting,
Of quiet, happy rest."



Written in 1874 by Frances R. Havergal, it was first published as a New Year's card. One writer states, "Her poems are permeated with the fragrance of her passionate love of Jesus." This is evident in these lines written a few years before her death.

Seven Years of Hitler . . .
Seven Years of Roosevelt

In last Sunday's Post there was an article reviewing the seven years with Roosevelt, the President. In tomorrow's Post Edward Folliard gives you a personality sketch of Roosevelt, the man. Smiling, unperturbed, witty, Roosevelt seems to have weathered seven years at the most killing job in the world much better than any of his predecessors. In this article Folliard brings you a close-up view of the President as he faces some of the most challenging problems of his career. And while Roosevelt ends his seventh year as President of the United States another man is also celebrating a seventh anniversary. It was just seven years ago that Adolf Hitler became Chancellor of the Reich. Only seven years but in that time Der Fuehrer has eliminated boundary lines, destroyed nations and plunged Europe into another war. The events which took place during these years are reviewed in an article by Hedley Donovan in Sunday's Washington Post.

And Sunday's Post Will Also Bring You:

in the AMUSEMENT section

If you're a movie fan you'll find plenty of material designed just for you in the Sunday Post. There's a page on how Hollywood is turning toward Latin-America and the mistakes it's making. There are columns by Louella Parsons, Hedda Hopper, Nelson Bell. There's the weekly film table, and the news of local movies. The amusement section also contains the radio log and program notes, installments of The Post's two serial stories, travel page, and columns by Lucius Beebe, Richard Watts, Charles Driscoll, and Weare Holbrook. There's a column by Damon Runyon, too. The back page of this section is devoted to the Parade of Youth, a special page for youngsters.

in the CURRENT EVENTS section

In addition to the articles about Roosevelt and Hitler, the Current Events section of tomorrow's Post contains the editorial page, book page, columns by Mark Sullivan and Ernest Lindley, and Folliard's weekly War Review.

Gallup Polls in this section are on America's ideas on what should be done to insure a lasting peace after this war ends, and whether we should have a national vote before Congress could draft men to fight overseas.

The runaway romance of Winston Churchill's nephew and the sister of Hitler's "ideal Nordic beauty" made headlines in London newspapers but the American adventures of the Hon. "Decca" and her husband, Esmond Romilly, make even more startling reading. First article in this entertaining joint autobiography will also appear in this section Sunday.

in ABOUT WASHINGTON section

Are you up on the plans for improving Washington's waterfront, and what has already been accomplished? Christine Sadler tells about it in Sunday's Post, and also tells about the president of the Southwest Citizens Association. In this section you will also find an article by Gerald Gross on the Health Security Administration, which handles hospitalization and medical care problems for Washingtonians who can't take care of these problems for themselves, and John Smith, who wrote those articles about the National Symphony, writes about Washington's other symphony, the 92-piece Civic Orchestra. Then there are special things of interest to Government employes, members of fraternal organizations, Army and Navy people, those interested in music and art. School news, bridge, chess, and the stamp column are also in this section.

News

No other Washington paper can compare with The Post in news coverage. In addition to its own staff, The Post has FIVE news services covering the world for Washingtonians . . . Associated Press, United Press, International News, New York Herald-Tribune, and New York Times Special War Service, plus pictures of the events while they are still news through Wirephoto.

Sports

Complete news of sports events with action pictures of the most dramatic moments. Columns by Bob Considine and Sports Editor Ben Dulaney (pinch hitting for vacationing Povich). Whittlesey's Sunday column on golf, Anne Hagner's on horse shows, and George Berner's on dogs. Racing news and charts, and Bill Benning's selections. Page of high and prep school sports.

Women's Features

Mary Haworth discusses the husband who came back mad, and Malvina Lindsay picks and describes the Men of the Year. Marshall Adams tells you about pockets for spring (pictures, too) and Martha Ellyn gives pointers on entertaining. Lots of society news and pictures, and the club page features the Twentieth Century Club's Gallinger Hospital project.

Rotogravure

You'll like the full pages, each telling a complete story, in The Post's roto section. There's one on a college cotillion, another on the Government's heating plant, still others on the camera exhibition at the Children's Art Gallery, dancing girls of a Washington theater, America's steel plants, war goods at Staten Island.

Comics

Superman, Joe Palooka, Terry and the Pirates, Dixie Dugan, Prince Valiant, Mickey Finn, Chief Wahoo, Napoleon, Grin and Bear It, Don Winslow, The Timid Soul, Ned Brant, Off the Record, Nippie, Mr. and Mrs., Apple Mary, Smitty, Winnie Winkle, Looie, and Smokey Stover will give you a lot of thrills and laughs in the Sunday Post.

Real Estate

The Post's real estate section gives you the widest selection of houses for sale, and keeps you abreast with developments in housing. This section also includes the financial pages, with stock, bond, and produce prices, financial news and comment, and the classified pages with their wealth of offerings.

Curtailing Contraband

It is, perhaps, mere coincidence that the new postal regulations, applying the provisions of the neutrality law to articles sent by parcel post or mail to countries in the designated war zones, should be promulgated at this moment. The restrictions now laid down are mandatory under the law and should have been in effect long before the close of the fifth month of the war.

Their current imposition, however, should greatly help to ease the difficulties which have arisen with Great Britain over the seizure and examination of American mails. For the likelihood of the mails being used for contraband is certainly lessened by these new safeguards.

In its recent note the British government emphasized the ease with which the mails can be used to transfer such contraband as monetary equivalents, or even the industrial diamonds which are essential to certain forms of machine-tool munitions manufacture. There is, unfortunately, reason to suppose that our mails have been used to carry contraband of this type and the British are justified in pointing out that the limited immunity which international law provides for genuine postal correspondence was never intended to protect contraband shipments.

The current postal regulations will do a great deal to lessen the likelihood of such contraband shipments from the United States. Therefore they will also weaken the British argument that interception of the mails is, from the viewpoint of that government, a military necessity.

It is still to be demonstrated that the supervision at our postoffices will be adequate to prevent some contraband from going out under American postage stamps. But a long step in this direction has been taken. And if the Department of State finds further protest against British military practice in mail seizures desirable, it will certainly now stand on firmer ground than in the note dispatched before the current and obligatory precautions were ordered at this end.

Relief And Politics

There has been a prevalent belief that the Hatch act prevents relief recipients from engaging in any kind of political activity. Senator Hatch has now come forward to confirm the opinion of the Department of Justice that the act was never intended to ban such activities.

Its primary purpose is to extend prohibitions upon political activity, previously applicable only to the civil service, to all other Federal employes, excepting only a limited number of policy-making officials. In making it unlawful for anyone to solicit or receive political contributions from persons in receipt of relief funds, the purpose was to protect those on relief from political exploitation and assure their freedom to vote as they choose.

So long, therefore, as the political activities of persons on relief are entirely uncoerced, they may, as Senator Hatch explains, be as active as they wish and even run for office if opportunity offers. There is a possibility, of course, that such freedom of action may occasionally encourage evasion of the spirit of the law. Nevertheless, it would be highly discriminatory and undemocratic to curtail the rights of large groups of citizens merely because they have been forced, through no fault of their own, to accept public aid.

Warning In Time

It is not safe to refuse to reply to the questions of census enumerators on the mistaken assumption that cooperation is voluntary.

The director of the census officially warns the public that failure to comply with requests for information or the giving of intentionally incorrect answers may be severely punished. Fines run from $100 to $500 for such offenses and prison sentences range from 60 days to a year, the more drastic penalties applying to the deliberate giving of misinformation.

Business firms failing to return reports are even more heavily penalized, while any individual or committee conspiring to cause an inaccurate count of a community may be fined $1,000, or imprisoned one year or suffer both fine and imprisonment. It is to be hoped that innocent "boosters" who would like to give their home town a few more inhabitants than it can strictly claim will take notice of this provision.

If threats of punishment could make people tell the truth the census would be a very complete document. As it is, chief reliance has to be placed upon the native intelligence and willingness to cooperate of the average citizen. A few errors, intentional or inadvertent, do not seriously impair the validity of the results. The chief value of legal sanctions is potential rather than actual, for it is officially stated that "in the 150 years of census-taking, the records show that it has rarely been necessary to resort to compulsion."

A War Election

By his unexpected action in calling a general election in Canada, to be held some time in March, Prime Minister Mackenzie King has clearly outwitted his Conservative opponents. Probably their last desire at the moment is an election on the issue of the government's conduct of the war, which Premier Hepburn of Ontario and other Conservative politicians have lately been criticizing with more energy than visible substance.

There has been so little convincing evidence behind the charges of the opposition that the question of an underlying motive is inevitably raised. Seemingly what the Conservatives desired was to force Mackenzie King to accept a coalition government for the war period, which would incidentally give them more authority in the solution of internal Canadian questions, such as the railroad problem.

But instead of making this compromise the Prime Minister has shrewdly called for a showdown at the polls. In doing so he shows confidence in his strength with the electorate and that confidence would seem to be fully justified. The Liberal organization is compact and in good working order throughout the Dominion. That of the Conservative Party is said to be far from ready for the strain which a general election will place upon it.

Just three months ago the provincial election in Quebec demonstrated tremendous strength for the Liberal Party in districts which had been regarded as reliable Conservative strongholds. This was a great personal victory for Mackenzie King and an indorsement of his wartime policies which the recent attacks by Premier Hepburn of Ontario and others have seemingly done little to undermine.

So the Prime Minister can look forward to the general election, forced by Conservative ineptitude, with complete equanimity. His position is the stronger because the Liberal government has now held power for over four years and must by law submit its case to the electorate before October. Now the opposition has provided Mackenzie King with opportunity to choose his own moment, and to accept an issue which evidently causes him little real concern.

That issue, ostensibly at least, will be the competence of the Liberal government to conduct Canada's share in the war effectively. Doubtless there have been many instances of inefficiency in the rapid mobilization and equipment of the Canadian forces. But the fact that important units have already reached the Western Front is indication that the management has not been as bad as is charged. Certainly it is unimpressive for Dr. R. J. Manion, the Conservative leader, to charge that the Canadian government "should have been prepared years ago for a war which had appeared inevitable."

If the Conservatives are going to campaign on the charge that Canada is not conducting the war efficiently, and if the Liberals seek return on the ground that they can be relied upon to make a most effective contribution, the net result will almost surely be a definite intensification of Canada's war effort. And this, from the viewpoint of the outside world, appears as the most significant aspect of the forthcoming election across our northern border.

Under Two Flags

Perhaps it was nothing more than the influence of a full moon, but the world has seemed just a little madder than usual this week. There was the big snowstorm that came up with the wind from Atlanta. There was the California doctor who recommended ardent kissing as a cure for colds. And there was the astonishing reaction of Comrade Louis F. Budenz, special correspondent of the Communist Daily Worker, when he saw his flag, complete with hammer and sickle, suddenly unfurled at the golden jubilee celebration of the United Mine Workers in Columbus, Ohio.

Did Comrade Budenz jump to his feet and Heil Stalin with right arm extended in the authoritative proletarian salute? He did nothing of the sort. He shuddered with indignation at what he recognized instantly as "a provocateur's crass attempt to disrupt the anniversary ceremonies." The whole incident, he wrote in a seething wire to the Daily Worker, was "a wretched effort to stir up red baiting and to daub the miners' union from Dies' brush."

Mr. John L. Lewis, more understandably, was of much the same mind. He called it "a most cowardly, reprehensible and dastardly trick." There are no Communists in the mine workers' union, he asserted, because its constitution tacitly forbids Communists to join. "The United Mine Workers," he declared to the echo of great cheers, "has but one flag; the American flag, the Stars and Stripes!"

After which Comrade Budenz reported with equal indignation to his paper, which every day displays the same hammer and sickle insignia that so enraged him at Columbus.

Planned Extermination

There is nothing surprising in the fact that Germany and Russia are rigorously excluding foreign newspaper correspondents, Red Cross workers and other impartial observers from the parts of Poland they have respectively taken over.

The agents of both dictatorships prefer to operate in those conquered areas behind the screen of closest secrecy, and with good reason. For the reports that are trickling out of the partitioned country tell a tale so grim and tragic as to shock a world grown callous to resurgent barbarism.

Confirmation of Poland's continued martyrdom has recently been forthcoming from the Vatican, whence well-informed broadcasts authorized by the papal secretariat of state add details to refugee reports, eyewitness accounts and evidence available from sources within Germany and Russia themselves.

In the Russian part of Poland the Red Terror is working overtime. An uncounted number have been executed while thousands of others have been conscripted as the wageless slaves of Communism. Fuel is not available, food is scarce, disease and starvation stalk the cities and villages.

But bad as are conditions on the Russian side of the line they seem in some ways even worse in German Poland, where terrorism is more scientific and efficient.

There large masses of the population have been robbed of their homes and their belongings and driven into the areas provisionally reserved for their miserable existence. As one Vatican broadcast puts it: "A system of interior deportations and zonings is being organized in the depths of one of Europe's severest winters on principles and by methods that can be described only as brutal. And stark hunger stares 70 per cent of Poland's population in the face as their reserves of foodstuffs and tools are shipped to Germany." In addition to this there is the calculated practice of herding the decimated Jewish population into the "Reservation", which has been established in the barren area to the south of Lublin.

Such are the methods employed by the Nazis in obtaining the "living space" for which they claim to fight. And such are the means by which Hitler and Stalin expect to make the fourth partition of Poland final.

Unpliant Legislators

For some months Gov. Earl Long of Louisiana has been adorned by the mantle of power once worn with swaggering braggadocio by his brother, the late Huey Long. He hopes to continue to do so and will if he defeats Sam H. Jones, the "Reform" candidate for the Democratic nomination, in the run-off primary to be held on February 20. But, even if successful, the brother of the late Kingfish will have a far more difficult time of it than Huey had.

One of the principal factors which made it possible for Huey Long to have his unquestioned way in Louisiana politics was the complete subservience of the State Legislature. That body, in the days of the Kingfish, was as much of a rubber stamp as the present German Reichstag, the Italian Chamber of Deputies or the All-Union Congress of Soviets. The individual legislators at Baton Rouge, with remarkably few exceptions, were pliant and willing tools of the dictator.

In this particular a decided change has come about as a result of last week's primaries. Only 25 of the 100 present members of the House, only 9 of the 39 members of the Senate won renomination. It is possible that among the incumbents who failed of a majority last week are some who will secure the necessary majority of votes in next month's run-off. In any event, however, the next Legislature seems certain to have a majority of new members and a great many of these will be pledged to a house-cleaning program.

The shadow of the Huey Long dictatorship continues to hang over the State even though the dictator himself has been dead more than four years. But more and more the substance of the power he once commanded slips from the hands of his successors. Whoever wins on February 20 in the gubernatorial race will have no hand-picked Legislature to do his unquestioned bidding. And such a Legislature is essential to a dictatorship.

"Dr. Hrdlicka said he was surprised at the discovery of the skull of a Neanderthal man in Russia, as it had been thought the range of the Neanderthal man was rather restricted." We should have thought the range of the Neanderthal man rather extensive, what with dinosaurs and such things constantly chasing him.

We have never been able to figure out a way to use to any advantage the time spent waiting when a barber puts a hot towel on our face and goes off somewhere and forgets us.

"Corpus Delicti"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mark Sullivan in The Post of January 23 speaks of an early case of Senator Borah's where a Chinaman had been murdered. The article uses "corpus delicti" as meaning "the body of the deceased." This is a mistake and one frequently made. "Corpus delicti" does not men the body of the deceased; it means "the body of the crime." "Corpus delicti" may be properly used in relation to any crime; to illustrate—in an arson case facts showing a criminal burning constitute "corpus delicti."

In a killing case "corpus delicti" "the body of the crime" means, under the law, actual facts showing a criminal killing of the deceased; of course these facts must be proven in order to convict.

If a mangled dead body were found at the foot of a cliff, it would not be "corpus delicti;" "corpus delicti" would be the actual facts showing criminal killing of the deceased.

Any law dictionary or unabridged English dictionary will define "corpus delicti" as I define it.

"Superb Program"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I publicly express my appreciation of the recent concert given in Purcellville by Malton Boyce, of Washington, and the St. Matthew's Cathedral choir? In the three years of the library concert series here nothing has ever approached the reverential attunement between singers and audience as occurred here last Sunday afternoon, January 21. It was a superb program and we hope to have them again for an Easter concert.

Union Vs. The National Symphony

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The action of the musicians' union in attempting to kill the National Symphony Orchestra in the District by making exorbitant demands seems to be characteristic of certain elements in the trade union movement.

Westbrook Pegler has been exposing angles of racketeering that have become entrenched in the unions without any protest or action by President William Green or the other responsible heads of the national body. This racketeering or, in a more euphemistic term, "hoggishness" puts the unions in the unenviable position of killing off culture.

If unionism and culture cannot exist side by side, then there is no doubt that the masses of music lovers and those who value the cultural values of civilization will turn thumbs down on unionism. It is up to the better elements in the musicians' union to try to do everything possible to foster and develop latent and struggling musical movements if they wish to survive. In Washington and in other cities the musicians' unions have killed off orchestras in the movie houses and substituted "canned music" in their place. It is a plain case of killing the goose that lays the golden egg.

The masses have definite physical needs in the way of food, clothing and housing. They also have definite cultural needs. If the unions persist in trying to curtail or abolish those needs, public sentiment will result in legislative action, as it well should.

ARISTOTLE.
Washington, Jan. 24.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a subscriber to the National Symphony Orchestra for the last eight years I lament the possibility of the orchestra breaking up, but I can assure you that I was shocked to learn of the musician's average salary. It is cruel to think of the musicians working so hard for so little money.

Better by far that the orchestra should cease to function than that trained men should be oblized to work for starvation wages. Music is a luxury, and if the people of Washington want symphonic music, why shouldn't they pay for it? The musicians could earn almost as much on WPA and not be put to the expense of buying strings for their instruments.

A man cannot make good music when he knows that his family is on the verge of starvation, and this, I understand, is the plight of many musicians connected with the National Symphony. It seems cruel that 80 trained men should be exploited as they have been for the last nine years. They see no hope of increased wages and are therefore discouraged and possibly disgusted. Apparently Washington cannot do what St. Louis and other cities do—support an orchestra and pay living wages.

BENJAMIN DUCK.
Washington, Jan. 23.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Re your editorial of January 24, "Musical Suicide." Please: All the blame for the grave possibility of our not having a National Symphony Orchestra seems to be placed on the musicians themselves—and not on the Musician's Union, where it rightfully belongs. The members of the orchestra are not anxious to be jobless next year, but if they defy the union they will be dropped therefrom; such a step is too drastic, considering the amount of money necessary for reinstatement in the union.

The work of Dr. Hans Kindler and the members of the orchestra, in building out of virtually nothing a top-flight organization, cannot be too highly commended. They have faced many obstacles, and won in their fight. Such persistence toward the realization of a great ideal is to be highly admired, and should be strongly supported.

The National Symphony Orchestra, in the National Capital, should be a matter of not only civic, but national pride. In these days, when half the world is overrun with terrorists, music—the one universal language—is more needed than ever before. The life or death of the National Symphony Orchestra is up to the public; let us hope the public "comes through."

Work For Someone?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I would like to comment briefly on the remarks of Dick Spurrier and "Horse Sense" in their scholarly denial of the allegation that "labor is essential to capital, but capital is not essential to labor."

They are quite correct. If our few million capitalists, with their capital resources, were to rise up in their wrath and destroy the parasitical labor class, utopia would unquestionably be here. For food, the Babbitts could have some nice fresh stock (preferred on Sundays) with debentures as aperitif and bonds for dessert.

They could keep warm with the intensive use of greenbacks as a fuel, although this might not be considered cricket as involving labor. Certainly, they would find no difficulty in traveling on first mortgages, finding bibulous delight in liquid assets and arranging for the frozen assets to solve the refrigeration problem. Capitalists of the world, good night!

If, on the other hand, the wage and salary workers were to bite the hand that feeds them and resettle their capitalist benefactors on a pension in some other quarter, chaos would ensue. To be sure, all the materials are here for the production of homes, automobiles, refrigerators, roads, furniture, etc., and distribution could undoubtedly be effected of unlimited agricultural produce, and the transportation and communication system is quite adequate, but whom are the workers going to work for?

They could be led by the great executives of the country who work for salaries and therefore do not belong with capital, but whom are they going to work for? People have to work for someone, don't they?

The Ruhland Scrap

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Washington citizens who are health-conscious and have watched the remarkable progress made by the Health Department during the past five years under Dr. Ruhland must be deeply grateful to The Washington Post for its independent and unremitting fight against the proposal from the District Building to oust the health officer in favor of a Federal appointee.

Besides Dr. Ruhland's successful attack on the District's high death rate, the organization of a bureau for the prevention of tuberculosis, under a director, and the rigorous campaign being carried on by this bureau is but another illustration of his many accomplishments with the support of Congress during these brief years.

"Deserves Commendation"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I want to tell you that when I looked out of the window this morning, I found your delivery boy making his rounds pretty nearly on time. At that time of day the snow had not been broken the slightest degree and the little fellow was having a hard time to break his way through. This sort of determination in the line of duty, I think, deserves very considerable commendation. That little fellow had guts and a sense of responsibility, which he bravely discharged.

Problems Of Peace

I was waiting at the corner of Sixteenth and Harvard for the Silver Spring bus the morning the thermometer took its drive toward zero. There is a church there. I did not notice its denomination, but I read and remembered the text on its bulletin board. It was a simple quotation from Thomas Mann: "War is a cowardly escape from the problems of peace."

In Silver Spring I joined a cheerful young woman employed as a home economist for the Farm Security Administration. We drove over country roads, stopping after an hour's drive at a railroad crossing.

As we walked down the track—the wind driving us—she told me a little about the farm family we were to visit—a widower left with five children, the oldest a girl of 16. He had been on relief in Baltimore, but that was no way for a man to live. If only he could get a place in the country, a place where he could at least raise something for them to eat! He knew of a place—the farm his folks had rented when he was a boy . . . No one had lived on it for years, not since the old folks died. Maybe—maybe the owner would let him take his family there and not be in a hurry about rent.

No one knows how he moved his family from Baltimore, nor how they survived the next few months. Last spring he applied for a Farm Security loan, and the woman I was with was sent to investigate.

"That's the house," she said, pointing to a dilapidated place about 100 yards from the track, the frozen stubble field extending to its door. "This was all grown over in brush when the family moved in. He had to clear it all. We don't know how he did it, for he had no equipment, but when he came to us it had been done and he wanted to plant a crop of tobacco.

"We took a chance—on his courage. We lent him enough to buy two mules, a plow, seed and a few chickens. Now, he has a good crop of tobacco over in that barn waiting to be stripped. We'll get our payment."

We were met at the door by a man in his middle forties, a boy of 3 at his side. A young girl was standing by the kitchen stove. The other children were at school.

I shall never forget that girl—Virginia. She was, as we say, as pretty as a picture. She had big brown eyes, a shock of curly hair, a straight little figure just coming into maturity. She had on a cotton house dress, an old sweater, sport shoes and no stockings.

The FSA agent's business was with her, for she was "keeping the book for the government," a necessary requirement whenever a loan is granted. While she was being shown how to make entries in the new book I looked at the one she had kept for 1939. Fat back, flour, kerosene, soap, thread, overalls—Virginia had written the account month by month. There was little else—no vegetables, no fruit, no fresh meat, no milk, no butter.

The agent was speaking.

"Now, Virginia, here is where you must put down the supplies you have on hand. How much canned goods is left?"

She turned to me.

"Virginia has a fine canning record. She put up everything she could get last summer, beans, tomatoes, blackberries."

Virginia interrupted. "There's nothing left now but a few tomatoes," she said, not apologetically, but with concern. "The children eat so much."

Her voice trailed off, hopelessly: we were embarrassed.

"Perhaps you'd like to see what she has left?" the agent said, though what she wanted me to see was the family's sleeping quarters in the two upstairs rooms. A few cans of tomatoes were on the floor by the central chimney where they would not freeze.

There was an iron bed in each room, on one not a stitch of bedding, on the other a quilt. In one corner was a child's crib covered with a blanket. The wind cut through these unplastered rooms, whistling through where the clapboards had fallen off.

"Next year Virginia will have a range," the agent said when we, shaking with cold, came back to the kitchen and stood around the stove, a small wood-burner. "It was hard for her to can on this one. When she has a big oven she can make bread—this one will hold only a pan of biscuits.

"We're lending enough, too, to buy three pigs and a cow and then there will be milk and meat." She turned to the girl. "I'll teach you how to make butter. When your father butchers in the fall I'll show you how to can the meat." Then to me she said, "They're getting along fine with Virginia here to help her father. He couldn't get along without her. A new loan, and next year——"

"Maybe," Virginia's father said, "maybe next year, now that people have seen we are good farmers, maybe we can move onto a place that has a better house. The rats around here are mighty hungry. Look at the hole one of them made to get through to the potatoes here."

Pardon For Scalese?

I UNDERSTAND that Will Green, the president of the American Federation of Labor, and Joseph Padway, its general counsel, have indorsed the application for a Presidential pardon filed by George Scalese, the racketeer president of the Building Service Employes' International Union, who served four years in Atlanta for a job of white slavery, the details of which the trial judge described as nauseating. Green advised the Department of Justice that Scalese's conduct as president of the union had been good, and Padway thought Scalese was a fine man who had lived an honorable life since his offense.

Waiving none of the objections to the presence of criminals in official positions in the labor movement, expressed by Senator Norris the other day, I suggest that this would be a good opportunity for Green and Padway to make character, as they say in the courts-martial, for their friend Mr. Scalese.

Perhaps they would be willing to give a public accounting of the manner in which this nonworking member of a Brooklyn gang became international president of an A. F. of L. Union.

What Background Has George Scalese?

WHEN DID George Scalese ever work as a janitor, window-washer, or porter or elevator operator; by what grades did he rise to the office of international president; what have the New York police and District Attorney Tom Dewey's investigators to say as to his activities in the last 10 or 15 years; who are his associates, and what has been done with the money collected from the rank and file workers in the form of initiation fees, dues and assessments?

What other unions have been organized by Scalese and his colleagues in Brooklyn and Chicago; how much money have they collected; what have they done with it, and does the American Federation of Labor want to take responsibility for the sort of union administration which Green, by his indorsement of Scalese, has described as "good" and which Padway has approved more heartily?

I don't see how Green and Padway can decline to make a full presentation of all these matters to justify their approval of the request for a Presidential pardon. It must be assumed that they have made a full investigation, because otherwise they would not be justified in giving their official indorsement.

A Public Hearing Should Air Facts

IF THEY CAN prove that Scalese has gone straight, that he rose to the presidency of the union by decent, democratic methods and that the funds of this and other unions in which he has been interested are all on hand or honestly accounted for, they have a good case for a pardon. If an open, impartial investigation shows otherwise, however, Green and Padway will have to admit either that they knowingly indorsed a crook or that they knowingly gave their indorsement without making sufficient inquiry.

They should not object to a public hearing of all the facts, because they obviously must believe that such a hearing would vindicate their action and restore their man's citizenship and honor after long suspension.

Possibly the Messrs. Green and Padway do not realize how important it is that the president of this particular union be a man of high character and good associations. The building service employes are, in some respects, guardians of the lives, safety and property of vast numbers of ordinary citizens.

Now In Position To Operate Rackets

THEY HAVE access to the living quarters of families in the big apartment buildings, and a criminal at the top could spot criminals around in the elevator jobs to rob homes and commit crimes against women. They could assist in the operation of dives in respectable houses and could let in thieves to work these buildings without taking active part in the jobs. And, of course, they are in a position to operate rackets with purveyors of groceries, meat and milk by excluding delivery men or sabotaging the goods.

The burden of proof is on Green and Padway because Mr. Green said only a few days ago that criminals should be eliminated from the A. F. of L., knowing at the time that the president of one of his big international unions was forbidden by law to run for scavenger in the public elections or even to vote for a nominee for the office of scavenger.

Buried Treasure

Gold Problem Permanently Insoluble?

LATELY this column dealt with that gold hoard at Fort Knox, Ky., now approaching $18,000,000,000, nearly two-thirds of all the monetary gold in the world. In so brief a treatment, little more can be done than outline, very incompletely, the problem that gold presents. To go beyond that, to deal with suggested solutions, is to enter a field bitterly contentious and highly speculative.

We can say the gold is there. That, no one denies. But we must not deal with how it got there. For that introduces discussion of President Roosevelt's monetary experiments, which is highly provocative.

We can say the gold presents a problem. That, too, no one will deny. At least, I think no one. We can say something must be done about it, sooner or later. For so long as we do nothing, the pile grows bigger. And increase of the pile not only accentuates the existing problem, but will bring new ones.

We can say the problem goes deep, and abundantly justifies the discussion that is getting under way. As the Baltimore Sun puts it: "The debate continues, as it must, for much that is fundamental in the traditional American way of life is bound up in the answer . . . We cannot continue much longer to accept the major part of the world's gold production . . . and use it neither for our own purposes nor yet for those of the world in general."

Problem Not Likely To Solve Itself

ANY NEWSPAPER discussion of gold must be in simple terms, understandable by average persons. But in attempting simplicity, one runs risk of criticism from technical experts, who understand the refinements of the subject—and differ violently among themselves.

One discussion technically sound and reasonably simple is in an article in the January Federal Reserve Bulletin, by the Reserve Board's expert, Mr. E. A. Goldenweiser. He says, as practically everybody else does, that the gold, as it stands, "is of little or no use to us." He says, too, that we cannot solve the problem by merely stopping our purchases: "An abrupt cessation of American purchases would create chaotic repercussions on domestic business conditions and prices." Mr. Goldenweiser says further that the problem is not likely to solve itself by operation of natural forces. It is not likely other nations, in the foreseeable future, will take the gold off our hands, by excess sales of goods to us, nor by borrowing gold from us in large quantities. Consequently, says Mr. Goldenweiser:

"It seems, therefore, that the problem of our huge gold stock is likely to stay with us for a long while, and that it may even increase—if gold continues to flow into this country. No simple solution to the problem can be devised. The ultimate solution will have to be a part of the answer to the much broader problems of restoration of world stability and international trade. It will also be bound up with rationalism of our own economy."

No Single Step Can Meet Problem

APPARENTLY the problem cannot be met with any single step dealing with gold alone. Whatever is done about gold must be accompanied by other steps dealing with other aspects of the economic and business world.

At this time, no such group of steps can be taken. The war abroad is a sufficient impediment, if no other. However, it is doubtful if any remedial steps can be taken during the Roosevelt Administration, because of a special reason. In this sort of situation, the factor of public psychology is always present and always important. An indispensable requisite to solution of the gold problem is public confidence. And in the field in which this problem lies, the field of money and currency, the Roosevelt Administration can hardly inspire complete confidence.

Any Administration that has already devalued the dollar, and gone "off gold," by that fact disturbs confidence within that field. Grant, for argument's sake, that devaluation of the dollar was desirable, nevertheless, loss of future confidence goes with it.

Congress Would Back New Administration

BUT DO WE NEED to conclude that our gold problem is permanently insoluble? Whatever Administration succeeds the present one will receive confidence from the country. A new President may or may not turn out to be a great President. However that may be, the mere fact that he is new will give him public confidence for a time, at least. A new President will also have presumably the support of Congress. In that condition it may be possible to do something about gold that will not only cure this problem but be beneficent in the broadest way. One can imagine a new President appointing, let us say, a man like Senator Carter Glass to be Secretary of the Treasury, and then addressing his new Secretary somewhat as follows: "There is that gold at Fort Knox. You know, or can find out, how to use it beneficently."

With such a mandate, the right man or group of men, if they assembled the best wisdom available, might be able to use that gold in such a way as to get the United States back on the track. Not only the United States but the world.

Move Indicated to Modify 'Harsh' 18-Month WPA Law

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

A drive to ease "excessively harsh" provisions of the relief law will be undertaken at the present session of Congress, it was indicated last night.

Publication of official figures showing that only 12.7 per cent of persons on WPA who were dropped from the relief rolls last summer have obtained private employment has apparently spurred on a move to modify severe restrictions of the law.

The 750,000 workers severed from the rolls last July and August were dropped in accordance with the 1940 relief act requiring the WPA to cut off all workers who had been employed with the relief agency for 18 months.

It is this 18-month provision of the act that will be the chief target of the revisionists, it was indicated yesterday. President Roosevelt specifically attacked the 18-month rule at the time he signed the 1940 relief bill June 30.

Representative Ludlow (Democrat), of Indiana, one of the "economy-minded" members of the Appropriations subcommittee handling relief, asserted that the WPA figures "confirm an opinion I have had for some time that the 18-month provision should be modified by some language giving it flexibility in extreme cases."

Approving the "principle" of the 18-month rule, Ludlow said that the existing law is "too harsh," as "a man with an invalid wife and a dozen children dependent upon him is automatically dismissed when the 18 months expire just the same as a single person with no dependents."

Another provision of the present law, which results in the dismissal of WPA workers if they have been absent five consecutive days, was attacked by Ludlow, who said that "consideration should be given to a worker who is absent because of illness or for some other unavoidable reason."

Ludlow asserted that work relief had "bogged down completely" in Indianapolis because of a provision, which took effect on January 1, requiring local sponsors to contribute an average of 25 per cent of the cost of relief projects in each State.

California is overcoming the difficulty of finding local sponsorship by contributing part of the 25 per cent requirement out of its own State treasury, Ludlow pointed out. In this way, they insure WPA assistance and correspondingly lessen their own direct relief burden.

On the return trip a new bay was discovered, which unofficially was named "Bay of Gales."

Editorial Award Goes To Woman Writer At Bowling Green

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Jan. 26.—Miss Daphne Dailey, editor of the Caroline Progress, weekly newspaper published at Bowling Green, won the 1939 Lee editorial award, it was announced today at the opening session of the midwinter convention here of the Virginia Press Association.

The award was made to Miss Dailey "in recognition of distinguished editorial writing during 1939 and for outstanding service in the community and State through newspaper editorial leadership in the public interest." Her series of editorials advocating the establishment of a county health unit for Caroline County won first prize for her in a State-wide contest sponsored by the association and the Lee Memorial School of Journalism of Washington and Lee University.

Arlington Editor Honored

Certificates of merit were awarded to the following editorial writers:

A. Robbins, jr., publisher of the semiweekly Hopewell News.

Howard B. Bloomer, jr., publisher of the Arlington Sun.

Harry Flood Byrd, jr., editor of the Winchester Star and son of United States Senator Harry Flood Byrd.

Presentation of the Lee award to Miss Dailey will take place at the convention banquet Saturday night, at which United States Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, will be the principal speaker.

Miss Dailey, who won certificates of merit in the 1937 and 1938 contests, is a young woman who became editor and part owner of the Caroline Progress about four years ago. Associated with her in the publication of the Progress and the Sentry, at Quantico, is Mrs. Clara M. Payne, who acts as business manager.

List of Rhame Winners

The Roanoke Times, the Richmond New Leader and the Lynchburg News each won "double certificates" in the annual daily newspapers' contest, conducted by the Virginia Press Association.

In the larger dailies' division the Roanoke Times won Rhame certificates for best front page and best general makeup while the Richmond New Leader placed first in press work and the handling of display advertising.

The Lynchburg News scored its "double" by placing first in general makeup and press work.

Suppress Selfish Interests, Bottom Advises Convention

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va. Jan. 26.—Maj. Raymond B. Bottom, publisher of the Newport News Daily Press and Times Herald, told Virginia editors today they had in their hands the finest sales argument available—the story of Virginia's progress.

"Let us tell the story of Virginia first," he said. "It is a better story than any single community can tell. It is a story that commands the suppression of local jealousies, local self-interest. It is a story that commands attention. It is a story that means greater profits for those who heed its call. . . ."

Maj. Bottom, president of the State Chamber of Commerce, speaking before the midwinter session of the Virginia Press Association, of which he is a past president, said if Virginia editors would generate first an interest in Virginia's "transcendent record," they could leave for secondary activity competition among themselves for a part in the increased progress.

He called "bunk, unadulterated and bald," the widely heralded assertion that the South is the Nation's economic problem No. 1, which he said had done Virginia and other Southern States an "egregious disservice." Speaking of the State's business progress, he said:

"It is a record that can be put on the front window and that is where we should put it," Maj. Bottom asserted. "If we fail or neglect to do it, we will be nothing short of the most inert dullards."

He told the editors that within five years 475 new manufacturing concerns had come to Virginia—175 in the past two years. He quoted from Gov. Price's message to the Legislature that Virginia per capita cost of government is 30 per cent below the average of the States and her tax on real estate lower than any State's except one.

"Virginia an economic problem? No. A thousand times no!"

"It is the most promising economic opportunity in the Nation. The internal problems that we have are not to be denied, and they must be met. But they are being met and they will be assimilated in their entirety as we improve under the influence of the advantages that Virginia holds and offers for enterprise and industry.

Press Club To Install New Officers Tonight

Officers of the National Press Club for 1940 will be inaugurated tonight at the club quarters with stars of stage, screen and radio, and outstanding newspapermen attending the ceremony.

Richard L. Wilson, correspondent for the Des Moines Register and Tribune, will succeed Arthur Hachten, of the International News Service, to the presidency. Five other officers will be inducted.

New officials include Melbourne Christerson, of the Associated Press, vice president; James E. Warner, of the Providence Journal, secretary; Sam O'Neal, of the St. Louis Star-Times, financial secretary, and two new members of the board of governors, Laurence Stafford, of the Booth Newspapers, and Richard L. Harkness, of the Philadelphia Inquirer. A special program of entertainment has been arranged, followed by a dance.

4 D. C. Officials Going to Sessions Of Road Builders

Four District officials will leave here Tuesday to attend convention sessions of the American Road Builders' Association in the International Amphitheater at Chicago.

Washington's traffic problems and plans will be presented to the meeting by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Engineer Commissioner David McCoach, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer and Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways. Van Duzer will conduct a comprehensive survey of Chicago's traffic light system.

Van Duzer's survey of "model" traffic signal systems was authorized by the Commissioners following a series of stories on Washington problems in The Post.

Floyd Gibbons Estate In Florida $20,557

Miami, Fla., Jan. 26 (AP).—An inventory filed in probate court today showed that Floyd Gibbons, war correspondent and commentator who died last September in Pennsylvania, left a Florida estate of $20,557.46, consisting of a home at Miami Beach and cash. The appraisers said a large sum of money in New York City had not been inventoried.

Mr. Hull On The High Seas

NO ONE HAS SPOKEN more often or more eloquently than Secretary Hull about "the principles of international law," the "maintenance of which cannot be too strongly emphasized at this time when a tendency towards disrespect for law in international relations is threatening the security of peace-loving nations." But when Mr. Hull looks at the map of the oceans of the world, it must give him a headache to observe that in respect to American rights the State Department is operating under several different systems of law depending on what area of the ocean it is thinking about and upon what foreign nation it is dealing with.

It was decided last autumn that there were compelling reasons for abandoning the older American conception of one system of law on the high seas. That decision having been reached, American rights now differ from one patch of salt water to another. And Mr. Hull should, therefore, bear in mind that he is no longer operating under general principles of law but that he is improvising expedients as he goes along.

Maritime Highways As Zoned By U. S.

AMERICAN RIGHTS on the high seas are now governed in some areas by the enforcement of the neutrality law and the proclamations made under it, in other areas by the non-enforcement of the neutrality law, in another area by the Declaration of Panama, in other areas by the principles of international law. A map of the maritime highways of the world, marked out according to the current official conception of American rights, will show the following zones.

1. Panama Safety Zone. This is the area inside an imaginary line, beginning in Nova Scotia and ending at Puget Sound. The line is 15,062 nautical miles long; it encloses 12,715,900 square nautical miles of salt water. From New York it extends 600 miles into the Atlantic Ocean; from St. Augustine in Florida it extends 1,100 miles. From an imaginary point north of Porto Rico, it runs 2,300 miles to an imaginary point which is nearer the coast of Africa than it is to the coast of Brazil. From that imaginary point it runs 5,000 miles down through the South Atlantic Ocean and around the southern end of South America. Then it runs north in the Pacific, 850 miles west of Chile, 1,200 miles west of Peru, 700 miles west of Mexico, to an imaginary point about 500 miles west of Seattle.

In this zone we claim not only absolute freedom of the seas for ourselves but that the British, French and Germans may not fight one another. In this zone the State Department is claiming rights which, admittedly, have no validity whatever under international law.

Where We Have Renounced Rights

2. The Combat Zone in Northern Europe. This area, which was defined by presidential proclamation under the neutrality act, starts at 20 degrees longitude out in the Atlantic Ocean and covers all the waters which touch France, the British Isles, including neutral Ireland. It covers neutral Belgium and The Netherlands, all Danish and Swedish ports, the Norwegian ports south of Bergen, all Finnish and Russian ports in the Baltic, and all German ports. In this zone we have renounced all maritime rights, or more accurately, we have forbidden Americans to exercise any rights.

3. The Zone of International Law. This is that part of the Atlantic Ocean, which is not marked off as the safety zone or the combat zone, and includes, principally, the maritime highways to Norway north of Bergen and the Arctic ports of Finland and Soviet Russia, the highway to Spain and Portugal and the Mediterranean including the Black Sea ports of Soviet Russia. This is where we are having our main trouble with the British contraband control. For in this particular area we are arguing on the basis of legal precedents in favor of neutral rights. We do not argue about neutral rights in the combat zone because we do not exercise them. We do not argue from legal precedents in the safety zone because there are none. But south of 45 degrees north latitude and east of 20 degrees west longitude, the State Department is asserting American rights under the universal principles of international law.

4. The Combat Zone of the Russo-Finnish War. This war has no legal status. However, American ships have no right to go to Finnish or Russian ports in the Baltic, but they may go to the Finnish and to the Russian ports in the Arctic Ocean, and to the Russian ports in the Black Sea and on the Pacific.

5. The Combat Zone of the Chinese-Japanese War. This war also has no legal existence. American ships may go to Japan because China has no navy. They could go to China if Japan were not peaceably occupying all the Chinese ports.

Enforcing Rights That Don't Exist

WE MUST NOW ask ourselves why and how we are operating under five distinct systems of American rights on the high seas. In Zones Four and Five we are for political reasons not choosing to apply our own laws. In Zone One, the safety zone around the Americas, we are operating on the theory that we can keep the fighting away from this hemisphere by threatening to make it disagreeable for the belligerents. We are using threats to enforce rights that do not exist, and if we are not bluffing, we may find ourselves obliged to back up some small country in South America, say Uruguay, which cannot carry out the threat. That was shown vividly in the case of the Graf Spee.

In Zone Two, the northern European combat zone, we have suspended all maritime rights not only to deal with belligerents but to deal with seven neutral countries, Ireland, Belgium, Netherlands, Denmark, Sweden, Latvia, and Esthonia. The reason is obvious. We do not wish to encounter Hitler's submarines, mines, and airplanes. That this is the reason, and not fear of the British and French navy, is proved in Zone Three, where though the Anglo-French navy is just as supreme as in the North Atlantic, we continue to send our ships and assert our rights. The reason is obvious. The British and French will detain and search our ships but they will not sink them.

Bluffing In One Zone, Intimidated In Another

THUS IN ZONE ONE we are bluffing or risking an encounter with both sides, in Zone Two we are intimidated, and in Zone Three, where there is inconvenience but not destruction, we argue because it is safe to argue. But if the British became tired of the argument, they would have only to scatter mines in the Mediterranean, as Hitler does in the North Sea, and the argument would be ended. They will not do this. But if they did do it, we could not even protest for we have not protested in Zone One, Zone Three, like Zone Two, would then be closed to American ships, and there would no longer be any American mails on American ships to argue about. It does seem awkward, therefore, that the State Department should start a public agitation because south of 45 degrees north latitude the British are not acting as dangerously as Hitler is acting north of that line.

What does it all go to prove? It goes to prove, first of all, that having departed from the principles of international law in two zones, it is hard to uphold them in the third zone. The evident fact is that we are not operating under the principles of international law. As a result we are asserting such rights as we can assert without risk, and we are enjoying the rights which the belligerents do not take away from us. If they are ruthless, as in Zone Two, we are intimidated and give up what belongs to us; if they are thought to be weak, as in Zone One, we are bold and claim more than belongs to us; if, as in Zone Three, they cannot afford or do not wish to be ruthless, we become indignant when they encroach upon our rights.

It goes to prove that having abandoned the guiding principles of our own tradition, we can only improvise expedients from day to day. The country has decided to keep out of the war rather than to uphold its rights under international law. Having chosen our course, let us not close our eyes to the consequences, applying one noble principle here and a different one there. Let us not invoke universal principles that differ according to imaginary lines of latitude and longitude, and then become entangled in public quarrels over variable rights in restricted areas of the ocean. As far as possible, let us negotiate quietly and calmly to make the expedients work as well as they can be made to work, invoking no absolute principles and inciting no popular emotions.

Can Fight Abroad And Stay Citizen, Roosevelt Says

No loss of citizenship devolves upon an American enlisting in a foreign government's military forces if he swears no allegiance oath, but taking of such an oath expatriates the volunteer, President Roosevelt said yesterday.

The Finnish military attache, Col. Per Silliacus, subsequently said his government exacts no allegiance oath from foreign volunteers, but only a promise to obey officers.

Mr. Roosevelt pointed out that no foreign nation may legally maintain an enlistment service here.

Standardizing Golf

"The year may bring legislation that will limit the distance a golf ball can travel. The golf association, at considerable cost and with the assistance of the Armour Institute of Chicago, is developing a machine to test golf balls and assure a standard distance."—News item.

"No legislation is needed to limit the distance of my golf ball," declared Elmer Twitchell, the well-known run-of-the-mill golfer, today. "And I consider such a statement an uncalled-for one, issued merely to taunt the great body of American divot diggers.

"Legislation to limit the distance a golf ball can travel!" sneered Mr. Twitchell. "There's plenty of limit now on how far my golf ball with travel, and that goes for most golfers. In fact, all my observations convince me that there should be legislation limiting the distance a golf ball should not travel!

"Ask the average golfer if he is having any trouble keeping his golf ball from getting too much distance, and see what he says! Ask him if he would like a law to keep its flight down?"

Elmer was quite incensed. "And what about the idea of turning out all balls to travel only a standard distance? That's cookoo, too. The balls driven by 90 per cent of the golfers do go a standard distance. That standard distance is about 50 yards. And in the wrong direction.

"And no machine supervised by any institute will make it go any farther or any straighter. What is needed is a machine to develop a golf swing that isn't 100 per cent comical. And maybe some scientific research to shorten the time it takes the average divot digger to discover that he should give up the game.

"I would also favor a machine to develop a standard-sized golf bag. I saw a fellow open a bag the other day and take out two bird dogs."

It was explained to Mr. Twitchell that the proposed limits on the distances traveled by golf balls was meant to apply to the professional golfers, who get 350 yards at a clip.

Leaders Praise Night Classes In First Aid

Plans for city-wide night school instruction in first aid were praised yesterday by Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, chairman of the board of education; Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police; and W. A. Van Duzer, director of vehicles and traffic.

Mrs. Doyle declared that training in first aid is indispensable to mothers of small children. Maj. Brown and Director Van Duzer pointed out that victims of traffic accidents can be greatly helped by bystanders trained in first aid, while well-meaning but untrained persons may do them further injury.

Courses are to begin February 5 in all public night schools under the direction of Robert Duncan, of the District Chapter, American Red Cross, and with the cooperation of E. J. Lockwood, night school director. Three lectures will be given each Monday, Wednesday and Thursday evening, at 6:30, 7:37 and 8:41 p. m.

'Gone With the Wind' Unwinds a Giant Story

Technicolor Picturization of Mitchell Novel Is a Variegated Mosaic That Loses Its Early Momentum Toward End of Story

"GONE WITH THE WIND." David O. Selznick's Technicolor picturization of the novel by Margaret Mitchell, adapted to the screen by Sidney Howard, starring Clark Gable, Vivien Leigh, Leslie Howard and Olivia De Havilland, with Thomas Mitchell, Barbara O'Neill, Victor Jory, Evelyn Keyes, Carroll Nye, Laura Hope Crews, Harry Davenport, Paul Hurst, Leona Roberts, William Bakewell, Jane Darwell, Louis Jean Heydt, Ona Munson, George Reeves, Isabel Jewell, Fred Crane, Marcelle Martin, J. M. Kerrigan, Albert Morin, Ward Bond, Mary Anderson, Irving Bacon, Terry Shero, Eddie Anderson and scores more. Directed by Victor Fleming. Reviewed Friday morning. At Loew's Palace Theater.

"GONE WITH THE WIND," David O. Selznick's Technicolor picturization of Margaret Mitchell's ponderous and phenomenally successful novel, yesterday revealed for the first time on a Washington screen at Loew's Palace Theater, fulfills most of the exorbitant claims made for it during almost four years of discussion, speculation and controversy concerning, first, the possibility of translating so far-flung a narrative into terms of the cinema; second, the casting of the principal roles and, third, the intricate problems of direction aimed at a closely integrated mosaic of the dramatic highlights of a pseudo-historical romance that encompassed a cataclysmic chapter in the preservation of the Union.

BELL

"Gone With the Wind" is the longest picture ever produced and the most eloquent in its exposition of the screen's power to cope with a sweep of action that marks the passing of an era; it reflects the movement and purpose of the Mitchell book with a faithfulness and completeness that would be surprising were not both so clearly implied by the length of the film. In the main, it has been cast with a fine eye to type, character and capability, and it certainly does not betray the directorial vagaries that had George Cukor in command of the pictured action in the beginning. Victor Fleming during the bulk of the picture's vivid developments and Sam Wood to wind up the prodigious proceedings. In these vital considerations are embodied elements of excellence—which never quite reach the point of greatness—that are all in the picture's favor and to its credit. Mr. Fleming's name, incidentally, is the only one mentioned in the work's official credits.

Action Gradually Dwindles

On the debit side of the ledger must be recorded the fact that by its very all-inclusiveness, "Gone With the Wind" packs all of its most exciting action into the first half of its enormous length; that it abandons then the gargantuan and tragic spectacle of a baronial social system's annihilation and resolves itself into a personal romance, centered in four pivotal figures, and so achieves an anticlimax that cannot be absolved of charges of a tediously compounded monotony that at times skirts dangerously close to the fringes of boredom. There is too much to be told to be told always in the pyrotechnic terms of fiery and explosive action.

The story as transmuted into celluloid, as it was in the book, is wrapped up in the strangely contradictory and thwarted life of Scarlett O'Hara, in love with one man and married to three others; hard, selfish, unscrupulous, vindictive—and at the same time tender, compassionate and brave; heroic, pitiful, contemptible and Spartan; a "fragile flower" of the Old South transformed into a scheming Borgia by circumstance and necessity. Inextricably tangled with her bitter and frustrated life are the destinies of the renegade Rhett Butler, who plucks a fortune out of a lost cause; the idealistic dreamer, Ashley Wilkes, and his angelic wife, Melanie. The importance of the other characters is minimized in the late Sidney Howard's adaptation of the larger Mitchell canvas. These four roles, however, are portrayed with a skill so fine, so true and so minutely right to the last detail as to lend "Gone With the Wind" a distinction beyond its intrinsic worth.

A Vivien Leigh Triumph

Vivien Leigh's interpretation of Scarlett's complex and contradictory nature is virtually perfection itself. In every nuance of mood—sinister, gay, somber or charming—she is the Scarlett Miss Mitchell etched so strikingly on the printed page. Her character represents the only claim that may be made by either the book or the picture to greatness in conception and development. Miss Leigh realizes it completely.

Scarcely less in justice can be said of Clark Gable's Rhett Butler—a character we shall always suspect Miss Mitchell created with him in mind. In sharpest contrast are the gentler characters of Ashley and Melanie, played with no less effectiveness by Leslie Howard and Olivia De Havilland and very often with infinitely more delicacy and charm. If anything, Miss De Havilland's limpid graciousness is a more perfect foil for Miss Leigh's aggressive belligerence than Mr. Howard's placid idealism is for Mr. Gable's hard-hitting acquisitiveness.

Thomas Mitchell's Gerald O'Hara and Harry Davenport's Dr. Meade are among the more deftly limned of the play's secondary characters. Barbara O'Neill, in the role of Ellen O'Hara, Scarlett's mother, is diminished almost to the vanishing point and becomes a less prominent figure in the action than either of her house servants, Mammy and Pork, so efficiently played by Hattie McDaniel and Oscar Polk. Ona Munson's picturesque embodiment of the flamboyant and big-hearted Belle Watling is a more efficient bit of portraiture than the veteran Laura Hope Crews' drawing, in caricature, of Aunt Pittypat. The lesser roles are adequately, sometimes brilliantly, played.

Striking Technicolor Effects

Technicolor's expert photography has brought many extraordinary pictorial effects to the climactic scenes of the picture, the most notable being the burning of Atlanta after the siege and the utilization of the fire's reflected glow as a prophetic background of romantic action. Valuable support also is lent the developments by an unobtrusive musical score contributed by Max Steiner.

Last night's distinguished, top-hats-and-ermine, reserved-seat premiere packed the Palace with an enthusiastic "first-night" audience that was not matched at either the morning or afternoon unreserved presentations, except in the matter of applause following the final fadeout of a picture that places a severe strain upon spectator endurance.

Last night's reserved seat premiere performance was a noteworthy occasion in the annals of the motion picture in the National Capital

Star Trio at Earle Salutes 'Fighting 69th'

Cagney, O'Brien, Brent Are in War Film; 'Red' Skelton Continues

By Richard L. Coe

"THE FIGHTING 69TH." Warner Brothers picturization of an original screen play by Norman Reilly Raine, Fred Niblo, Jr., and Dean Franklin, costarring James Cagney, Pat O'Brien and George Brent, with Jeffrey Lynn, Alan Hale, Frank McHugh, Dennis Morgan, Dick Foran, William Lundigan, Guinn "Big Boy" Williams, Henry O'Neill, John Litel, Sammy Cohen, Henry Stephens, DeWolf Hopper, Tom Dugan and Frank Wilcox. Produced by Hal B. Wallis. Directed by William Keighley. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Earle Theater.

With a practiced eye on the present, Warner Brothers draw a lesson from the past that has been taught before, but not always so stirringly as in "The Fighting Sixty-ninth," that war is hell. A salute to the Rainbow Division of the World War, the Earle's new feature co-stars James Cagney, Pat O'Brien and George Brent.

Beneath the camaraderie of the dogs of war, there is the stony reality of lawful murder that should not be lost on those who are fortunate enough to be on the sidelines in the present conflict. A strong, virile story of New York's Irish Division, "The Fighting Sixty-ninth" masks its purpose almost too completely with robust humor and gripping action that is stirringly engrossing.

Father Duffy is a New York legend now and "Wild Bill" Donovan is a celebrated Manhattan lawyer, but in 1917 they were two of the most respected officers of New York's Sixty-ninth regiment. And without a doubt, more than one such incident as the film relates found them active principals. With Pat O'Brien as the priest and George Brent as the valiant Col. Donovan, the "lost generation" finds admirable interpreters.

Their influence is directed toward that always excellent character actor, James Cagney. As an unwilling private of the proud regiment, Cagney is a boastful thoroughly despised snake. Father Duffy discovers that his leathery surface is but a veneer and tries to bring him out of himself. When this tough Brooklyn rat comes up against the enemy across the front-line trenches, his cowardice bursts through and he is sentenced by a courtmartial to be shot.

A Plea for Peace

That out of his ultimate redemption comes a touch of the sacrifice that makes war seem glorious is certainly not what Warners intended to convey. The scenes of waste and horror are too numerous for that and the final view of Times Square's statue to the war-time priest is an eloquent prayer for "a citadel of peace; peace forevermore."

It is a workmanlike, all-male cast that plays the story. The first half of the film takes place at Camp Mills and is a humorous treatment; the latter portion occurs at the front where the action is serious, foreboding. The three stars are forthright and expectantly fine in their pivotal roles and the supporting players that are most to the fore include Jeffrey Lynn, Alan Hale, Frank McHugh and Sammy Cohen (as a little Hebrew who adopted a brogue to join the Irish regiment.

"Red" Skelton, funnier and more resourceful than ever, continues to headline the stage bill. With the charming Edna Stillwell, the active comedian presents another "Slice of Life," saucily and shrewdly ridiculing our everyday habits. With the pert Eileen Ritter singing it, he submits a unique version of That Song, "Oh, Skelton, Oh," that stops the show. Chick and Lee, comedians; Toy and Wing, Chinese ballroom dancers; The Three Toppers, genuine strongmen, and Dorothy Bruce, the soprano "find of the month," completes stage festivities that are no end aided by the invaluable Roxyettes.

Combined with the trot of Skelton, the strong meat of "The Fighting 69th" forms a bill that can be highly recommended.

Bazooka Bob Burns Has Own Ideas of How to Please Public

By Frederick C. Othman.
United Press Hollywood Correspondent.

Hollywood, Jan. 26.—Arkansas' first citizen, Col. Robin Burns, announced today that he had quit trying to compete with churches.

"In the last two pictures," Bazooka Bob reported, "they made me too all-fired sanctified. I was too preachy.

"The people don't like that in the movie theaters. They go to the show for fun; if they want to be preached at, they can go to church. That's another thing.

"When they go to the movies to see me, they've got to pay 50 cents, or whatever. When they go to church, they can give whatever they think the sermon is worth."

Bob's two latest pictures, neither of which set any rivers on fire, not even in Arkansas, were "I'm From Missouri" and "Our Leading Citizen." He was a goody-goody gent in both.

Now he's working in "Alias the Deacon" at Universal, with Peggy Moran and Dennis O'Keefe, under the veteran comedy director, Christy Cabanne.

Plays Card Sharp

"And I think it's my picture," Col. Burns said. "I'm playing the card sharp at the carnival. I run a little game of three-card monte and they catch on and chase me out of town. So the next place I go they mistake me for a deacon and things begin to happen."

He said this kind of part was to his liking, because he merely was playing himself.

"Way back," he said, "I ran a carnival, on the East Coast. I used to play my bazooka to get the crowds around to the three-card monte game. I didn't exactly run the game myself, but I learned how to do it. So in this picture I'm just Bob Burns. I even play my bazooka and talk about my Grandpa Snazzy."

Col. Burns, who was a showman long before he ever heard of Hollywood, said he'd had quite a talk with the producer yesterday, telling him something of the Burns theory of movie making.

"What I had to say," Burns explained, "was that it seemed to me like it was foolish trying to light the sets so beautiful and make all those lights and shadows in the background.

Public Wants Amusement

"I said I thought the folks weren't interested in art, they wanted amusement. I said if each clip of film was a Rembrandt painting to be put on the wall and passed down from generation to generation, then all right, spend a lot of time on the artistic part.

"But as it is, the people are interested in the story and they don't care a whoop about the scenery behind the actors. If the show is any good, they don't even see it.

"And that isn't all. I told the producer that if he'd give me a good story, a couple of good actors and a good director, we could go out in the desert and make a good picture without any backgrounds at all. We could, too."

Burns said the kernel of his argument was that a $2,000,000 movie could be pretty bad, and a $200,000 one great entertainment.

"And I think the head men are beginning to realize that," he said. "Anyhow we're not wasting any time on this one."

ALEC WOOLLCOTT: The lecture business has become so profitable that two more critics—John Anderson and Olin Downes—will make lecture tours. Columbia Artists Bureau signed them . . . Tom Dewey: The noted law firm of Hastings & Aranow—Hastings was your opposing candidate in the District Attorneys campaign—has been dissolved. James Joyce: Your friend, Elliot Paul, who wrote "Life and Death of a Spanish Town," will give a Boogie-Woogie concert at Cafe Society next week. Your publisher, Eugene Jolas of Transition, and Whit Burnett, editor of Story magazine, will be there to stomp him home.

CHIEF MAGISTRATE CURRAN: Chimney Sweep, the islands off Orchard Beach on which your "Curran University" was established, has been ceded to The Bronx by Bob Moses. This without your knowledge . . . Luther Adler: Terry Harris, the tall actress who performs so well in that one scene with you in Elmer Rice's "Two on an Island"—a scene in which she states how difficult it is for a tall girl to secure a part in a show—is Mrs. Robert Rice, wife of the drama critic and daughter-in-law of the author . . . Herbert Hoover: Al Smith spent all of Tuesday night looking at 23,000 feet of newsreels about Al Smith. He brought his family to the Paramount studio to see the newsreel history of his career—especially the 1928 campaign.

JAY THORPE: The solicitors for the British publishers of "It's a Woman's Business"—the book written by your vice president, Estelle Hamburger—complained to the author that they couldn't approve it, because, "Carol Kennicott is libeled therein" . . . They referred to the author's report of her husband's courtship—when she told him: "I think Carol Kennicott is a bore" . . . Carol Kennicott can't be libeled. She's one of the characters in Sinclair Lewis' book, "Main Street."

EMILY POST: When more than 25 Broadway and Hollywood guests dined at the White House Sunday night, Eleanor Roosevelt realized they were nervous, and immediately set them at ease. "This is just a plain Sunday night supper," she told them. "Just some scrambled eggs. The only reason we're not cooking it ourselves is because there are so many of you."

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Jan. 26.

The 'phone rang. It was Orson Welles on the wire. "I read that boomerang paragraph," the voice with a grin said, "and maybe if you'll drop over for lunch we can come to the bottom of this Welles. Bring some of your sponsor's oranges. I'll supply the soup." "Oh, 50-50, eh?" So I dropped over, we sat down family style and went to it. "Why are you making a racket out of Hollywood? Why raise a beard in the first place? Are you going to make a picture? How long do you think you can keep going without producing anything? Is it true you . . ." Welles interrupted, clipping a lock off his flowing beard, handed it to me. "For your memory book. Sure, I'm going to do a picture in fact, I'm going to do three pictures because that's my deal." "But when?" I insisted. "When I'm good and ready. After all I've been here only five months and in that time lined up everything, including the writing of two scripts. That isn't bad from where I sit looking down at Hollywood. I'd start 'Smiler With a Knife' at once if I could find a leading woman." "What, waiting for Baby Sandy to grow up?" asked I.

HOPPER

"Well, why the beard then?" "Look," said he, "I don't have to shave or apologize for not shaving. So I'm trimming it scientifically, an inch a day and keeping notes on it." Which reminded me of a line of Alice Brady's when she was fascinated by a monkey act. She said, "Huh! How do you know I won't have to play one some day?"

"I'm happy about one thing," continued Welles, "I've gotten my share of notoriety. That article of Alva Johnson's is a pip. Only one line was edited. 'Illiteracy has never had a fair trial—except in Hollywood' it read. 'Except in Hollywood' was out! Another point in the article interested me. Ashton Stevens, famous Chicago critic, wrote: "If Orson Welles isn't at least a leading man by the time this has yellowed—I'll never make another prophecy.' It was written November 11, 1930."

"Funny about Hollywood. I think my activities will build up an audience. I hope. I'm more concerned making a picture for that public than the boys at Chasens. Broadway and Hollywood have one thing in common. The boys worry more about playing up to the gang at Lindys, Stork and '21' and Chasens and the Brown Derby than they do for the folks who see pictures in Bent Fork or Tallahassee. They're the people I'm interested in."

When word got 'round that Welles and RKO were divorcing, Welles had offers from two other studios. That tickled RKO's Schaffer and further convinced him he had a splendid piece of property in Welles . . . So that's the story. Take it or leave it. Personally, I'll take it. For Orson Welles, as I said months ago, has a shrewd head on those shoulders and I think he'll make the critics eat their words. And I for one hope he does. For

Is tough on a critic . . .

I love Katharine Cornell's sense of humor, in fact, I love almost everything about her. When a flowery friend was complimenting her on her performance in "No Time for Comedy" Kit chuckled and said: "That always reminds me of a sign written on the back wall of a New York theater which reads, 'If you think you're good, just try Oakland.'"

Ilona Massey Nears Stardom in 'Balalaika'

"BALALAIKA." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the play by Eric Maschwitz, adapted to the screen by Leon Gordon, Charles Bennett and Jacques Deval co-starring Nelson Eddy and Ilona Massey, with Charles Ruggles, Frank Morgan, Lionel Atwill, C. Aubrey Smith, Joyce Compton, Dalies Frantz, Walter Woolf King, Abner Biberman, George Tobias, Alma Kruger and Frederic Worlock. Music by George Potsford and Bernard Grun, adapted by Herbert Stothart. Directed by Reinhold Schunzel. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Capitol Theater.

Besides providing a gay and melody-filled hour for millions, "Balalaika," at Loew's Capitol, will have two very special results. First, you are going to see its top song, "At the Balalaika," soar up somewhere toward the top of the hit parade. Second, the picture is going to put Ilona Massey into a Hollywood niche nearly as choice as that occupied by Jeannette MacDonald.

Ilona Massey blossoms out into full stardom in "Balalaika." She has rare beauty, a touch of the exotic; she has a larklike voice and a nice sense of the theater.

"Balalaika," like "Ninotchka," is concerned with Russia and the revolution. But the resemblance is purely a surface one. For "Balalaika" is primarily a big, glossy, expensive musical romance. Ilona, playing a Russian singer, comes from a family of revolutionaries. Nelson Eddy is a Muscovite prince and Cossack officer. But though the revolution separates them, it brings them together again when Ilona deserts the Reds, joins her expatriate prince in Paris.

Music Is the Thing

The music, lovemaking, atmosphere, comedy, even the costuming of "Balalaika," all seem much more important than the story. Because all of these elements are so highly satisfactory and engrossing, the picture attains a high diversion value. Charlie Ruggles, as a body servant, and Frank Morgan, playing an opera director, are responsible for a practically continuous crackle of laughs. Nelson Eddy's singing is splendidly supplemented by the Cossack Choir. A young chap, Dalies Frantz, who plays Ilona's revolutionary brother, shows signs of being leading-man material.

Stage show laurels are practically grabbed by the orchestra with Sam Jack Kaufman leading an incredible but chiefly amusing overture that blends "A-Tisket, A-Tasket" with Rimsky-Korsakoff. Much audience appreciation was garnered by Larry Adler's harmonious harmonica. Gil and Bernie Mason get you to thinking they're a couple of jitterbugs, then trot out a pack of amusing and contrary little canines. Norma Gallo's dancing in the "Caravan" number scores another strong audience hit.

MARY HARRIS.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Family of Seven Lives in 3-Room House; Entertain In Kitchen; Should Girl Permit Beau to Call?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 17 years old and in my last year of high school. There is a boy in my section whom I like very much. I'm quite sure that he likes me. About four years ago this boy and I went with each other, but we were very bashful. We talked to each other but when we wanted to say how much we liked each other, we wrote it in notes I never saw him after school because he lives in the city and I live in the suburbs. This went on for about seven months. Then we drifted apart, but we still kept our friendship and went to classes together.

But now, after four years, we seem to be getting closer together again and we have lost some of our bashfulness. And this is my problem—I want to invite him to my home, but I am ashamed to, in a way; and in a way I am not. My Dad would let me have company, but since we don't have any living room to entertain in, I have always discouraged boy friends from coming.

We live in a little three-room house. We have two bedrooms and a large kitchen. There are seven of us and the boys have one bedroom and I have the other. Mother and dad bunk in the kitchen, moving their bed in every night. Dad has plans for enlarging the house and has already started two more rooms. The walls are up and there is a roof over it, but nothing is finished yet.

I'm wishing summer would hurry, because then I can entertain my friends in our large and beautiful yard. But I'm afraid that if I wait I may lose my chance with this boy. My brothers bring their girls to the house, and they say that if the boy really likes me, he won't mind our house. Sometimes I can see that they are right, but other times I can't feel that way.

If I invited the boy to my home, he would have to sit in the kitchen, where everyone gathers and talks. And there isn't room enough there for everyone to congregate and talk at once. Should I invite him anyway and take a chance that he will want to come again? Or shall I just try to forget him? If I act cool, he will want to know why. Shall I explain the situation to him, or just change the subject (as I have been doing) when he hints that he would like to come to see me? Please help me solve my problem. (P. S.: My father and mother think I should ask him to come out. They would like to meet him and I know they would make him very welcome.)

G. R. J.

Famous Novel Deals With This Problem

DEAR G. R. J.: One gets the impression of a pretty fine family group gathered for conversation in your kitchen, with your parents ready to make all their children's friends "very welcome," and with your brothers blithely bringing their "girls" home on the thoroughbred's assumption that it's the spirit of hospitality, and not a snob-proof "front," which counts among loyal comrades.

I think you may as well put the boy's sense of values to the test. If he doesn't come back after one visit, it will be time enough then to "try to forget him." I feel you are fortunate in having brothers with girl friends (who have learned to take "kitchen entertaining" in their stride), who can give you indirect, invaluable aid in initiating your beau casually into the family's gallant way of living within its means.

Instead of asking the boy simply to "come to call," with the idea of spending the evening sitting around the kitchen stove in the midst of the family circle, why not arrange with your brothers for a Sunday afternoon's skating or sledding party, to which you invite this boy and they ask their "girls." This could wind up with a simple but hearty supper at your house,—either a "sit-down" affair, shared with your parents and the smaller children; or an "ice box raid" for the skating party alone, consisting of sandwiches, salad and dessert served with coffee or cocoa. Or you could have one main "hot dish," such as chile, baked pork-and-beans, spaghetti and meat balls, or what-not.

Such a program should "'carry itself" from first to last, with no painful intervals of watching strained faces for symptoms of boredom or self consciousness. Ask the boy for 2 o'clock, say, and have the others there by 1:30. Set forth promptly, and by the time you are ready to go home for supper, the whole group should be in such hilarious accord that the boy will feel he has "been one of you" for ages. If the crowd swoops into the kitchen in this frame of mind, to met with warmth, a merry welcome and a substantial "feed" — you may know that your first real date has been a social success.

I wonder, by the way, if you have ever read Booth Tarkington's novel, "Alice Adams"—a fascinating story and a powerful sermon on the destructive folly of social pretense. Alice faced much the same problem as you do, and she made the mistake (to her bitter regret and complete undoing), of trying to deceive the man about her family background and the family's way of living. And while her beau might have accepted compassionately the dismal facts of her existence, he could not forgive her shabby character, as revealed by her transparently snobbish performance. Read the book. It should give you the philosophy you need to handle this situation.

Presenting Rebecca's Gown

A nostalgic shade of mauve is used for this custom-type night frock. Its coloring and finesse of detailing gained inspiration from Daphne Du Maurier's novel, "Rebecca." The "Rebecca Mauve" is used here for both the chiffon skirt and the long-pointed basque of exquisite hand-run Alencon lace, edged in Valencienne. There is a matching negligee of mauve satin and Alencon

Ghostly Heroine of 'Rebecca' Inspires New Lavish Frocks

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor.

DAPHNE DU MAURIER had little faith that her eerie novel "Rebecca" would have any repercussions other than those of possible appreciation by romanticists. But not only has it been "done" for radio by Orson Welles, and put into another one of Selznick's sensational screen adaptations, but it has influenced current fashions.

Marshall Adams

These fashions are named after the brooding dead heroine "Rebecca" who ghostily never appears in book or film. The Rebecca gowns are so rich and lavish in treatment that only one exclusive shop in each city has the privilege of featuring them.

The "Rebeccas," like their namesake's lust for wealth and opulence, are extravagant fashions—but so subtly rich of fabric and workmanship that they will appeal to women whose love for beauty matches only that of Rebecca's own.

Although the film will not come to Washington until the commotion of "Gone With the Wind" has died down, the affluent Rebecca collection of custom-type gowns are already being featured here. Pronounced in this group are the Rebecca mauves and orchids. Undoubtedly these were selected as the theme colors because mauve is a melancholy, remote, rather mystic color—very sophisticated, however, when transplanted into drifting negligee chiffons, dinner crepes and grape-blue nets for evening, with hand-tinted laces for trimmings. Not the least glamorous of these "Rebeccas" is a mauve evening suit, the gown expensively plain, the satin jacket cut along hug-me-tight lines.

Anesthetizing Camphor Termed Best Remedy For Itching; Called 'Morphine of the Skin'

I have before me a very interesting article, written by one of the most famous dermatologists in the United States, on the subject of itching. In spite of the fact that he is very experienced in diseases of the skin, he confesses that he doesn't know what is the cause of this common symptom.

We know that itching, like pain, is due to irritation of a nerve, but we are ignorant of exactly what causes ordinary sensations of feeling to become painful. Why should an inflammation of the skin at one time cause itching and at another time pain?

Irritation Is Cause

Nearly any abnormal irritation in the skin will cause itching. The injection of a small amount of material from the mosquita's salivary gland, the burrowing of the scabies insect in the skin itself, the reaction of the skin to food sensitivity, as in eczema, will all do it.

A common cause not usually remembered is atrophy of the skin and removal of the natural secretions by too much soap and water. In winter weather, especially, elderly people should remember this. They are often troubled by itching when they are certain there is no inflammation or insect as the cause of it. In these people it can be seen that the skin is thin and dry. It is wrong to prolong the habit of taking a daily bath in middle age, especially in winter, as this irritates an already atrophic skin.

Animals Also Itch

Physiological itching is common to all animals, especially those who are hairy or feathered. If you will sit quietly and fix your attention upon some part of your skin, you are almost certain to become conscious of a slight intrusive irritation at this point, a prickling sensation, and the longer it lasts the more it demands attention. You pass your fingernail over the irritated point and it is gone. What was it? Was it pain? If uneasiness is pain, yes. If desire is pain, yes. If the inclination to stretch the limbs, wink the eyes or eat is pain, so is this desire to scratch.

Itching is a sensation which is specific to the skin. When the eye is irritated, it responds not by pain but by sensations of sight—flashes, etc.

The treatment of itching is, of course, the treatment of the cause. The destruction of the scabies insect or of the bedbug is a campaign that confronts many of us during the winter months especially. Of all the remedies which are used for itching, the best is probably camphor. It is cooling and anesthetizing—in fact, has been called the "morphine of the skin."

Technique Needed To Clean Pots

If utensils are soaked in soapy water immediately after the food has been removed, cleaning them seldom requires exertion. Cold water is best for eggs, milk, or doughy substances. Hot water acts more quickly on greasy foods. A live lather of suds will ordinarily remove food and grease in a jiffy.

If burned or dried particles are inclined to be stubborn, place the utensil on the stove, add more soap, and bring the water slowly to a boil. A quick rub with soap or some other cleanser adds the final polish. After a scalding rinse and thorough drying with clean dish towels the pots and pans are ready for their special compartment in the kitchen cabinet or their hooks on the wall.

Mother, 205, Slims Down To 160 Pounds

Young Daughter Brings Her Weight Down to Normal

By Ida Jean Kain

THERE is nothing that makes you grit your teeth and go on dieting like hearing about others who have finished what you are just starting—and who are delighted with the outcome. The enthusiasm of these women is so genuine that it is always contagious. Today's letters may be all the encouragement you need to carry out your good resolutions to slim down to normal.

The first is from Canada: "Last April my daughter and I decided to follow your weight reducing diet. At that time my daughter was 11 years old, 5 feet tall, and weighed 143 pounds. Now she is 12 years old, 5 feet 2 inches tall, and weighs 121 pounds. She looks and feels grand and words cannot express her delight.

Loses 45 Pounds

"I myself weighed 205 pounds. I am 5 feet 6 inches tall and am 40 years old. I am now down to 160 pounds and hope to weigh much less by spring!"

The next letter is from a reducer in Illinois: "I am glad to report that I have reduced my weight almost to normal. I started just one year ago. I weighed 182 pounds for my height of 5 feet 3 inches, and now I weigh only 124 pounds. I certainly am pleased with the results. I still watch my calories, but I find I can eata little more without affecting my weights."

An Oregon reducer has trimmed down from a size 46 to a perfect 36! Her experience will be of keenest interest to those who have a considerable amount of weight to lose: "Last March I received your leaflets and diet material and went right to work counting calories. When I started I weighed 215 pounds, and today I weigh 153 and buy a size 36 dress, where before I bought a 46.

"Like all the rest, sometimes I became discouraged. But I was determined to see the scales go down. It has become fun to plan my menus. Of course, I had to take the joking and kidding that went with it from my friends. But now it is also a fine thing to hear them tell me what a difference they see in me. People I have known most of my life have apologized for passing me on the street without speaking. They didn't recognize me!"

Sensibly Took Her Time

There's room for just one more, and it is from a courageous reducer who brought her weight down from 189 pounds. She began her program last February and very seinsibly has taken her time. But now she has reached her goal of 135 pounds and says "There I intend to stay for the rest of my life!"

Slimming shouldn't seem so difficult when you hear from those who have accomplished the seemingly impossible.

Carrot Ring For Luncheon

Deviled crab and spiced pear salad make a noteworthy midwinter luncheon ensemble. And this carrot ring will interest the guests. Mix 2 cups cooked mashed carrots, 1 teaspoon each of chopped onions, celery and parsley, 4 egg yolks, ½ cup creamy vegetable sauce and 4 egg whites. Bake 1 hour in a ring mould in a pan of hot water in a slow oven—300 degrees. Unmould and fill with creamed mushrooms, hard-cooked eggs, chicken or fish. You can use spinach, corn, noodles, rice or peas in place of the carrots.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

Ingrid Bergman, Swedish Actress, to Play Joan of Arc; Mrs. Day Becomes Lecturer

New York, Jan. 26.

A FEW days ago I managed to catch up with Sweden's greatest gift to American movies since Greta Garbo came quietly to our shores 15 years ago as the protege of Mauritz Stiller. Need I add that Stockholm's second shipment is lovely Ingrid Bergman, whose American debut in "Intermezzo" was one of the screen pleasures of last fall.

Alice Hughes

Ingrid is a married lady with a little girl, for all her 24 years and her look, both on screen and in the flesh, of being an old lady at least 19. Soundly trained for the theater in her native land as a younger girl, she is now ready for Hollywood, having already tasted its joys and perils last year. But she thinks constantly of her husband, whom she left behind, and says, in a cute way, "He knows I'll come back to him again. He's very smart." I hope he is.

Little Ingrid, a natural actress if I've seen one in a long time, has been chosen by Dave Selznick to play the lead in a new film version of the story of Joan of Arc. It was Dave, you recall, who produced "Gone With the Wind" so long ago. Oddly enough, she frets about her English, though to my aged ears it sounds excellent at present. She is an earnest artist and a tractable girl, and has only caused her Hollywood bosses one fret—a worry common to all foreign girls who come to our shores and go up against American ice cream.

Like so many others, Ingrid quickly turned into a cherry sundae addict, during her last and first Hollywood stay, and the managers, directors and staff fretters were forced to worry about additional pounds. Of course, she is 5 feet, 8, and a youngster of that elevation can carry considerable avoirdupois. But she's sworn to go easy on the frozen dainty, just the same. A fine bet for our pictures, this Bergman. And I'll bet she'll click as a simple French peasant girl hearing mystic voices, too!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: Strange things happen to women, with never a hint of warning, and some of them are very nice. Take the case of Mrs. Katherine Day, who no doubt was prepared to be just the widow of a warm, clever writer who had turned out two or three charming books of brief essays. And now? The dramatization of her late husband's stories of "Life With Father" forms the current theatrical hit, playing here and also in Chicago, with Percy Waram and Lillian Gish heading the company. And she herself is lecturing to various women's groups around New York. Yep—odd twists fate takes with ladies, and may many be as nice as those of Mrs. Day.

Mary Pickford's local apartment has been crowded with nurses since the recent death of her former husband, Doug Fairbanks. Gosh, I hope nothing's too seriously wrong with little Mary! She is one of the best we've got, that little critter! shows comical and fine. Why is thus?

ONE of the most fascinating places in our town is International House, at Columbia University, which is headquarters for students from all over the earth. And at present one of the spot's chief ornaments is a lovely Burmese girl named Mathanrya Martin (how's that for a pretty handle?) She had an English grandpapa, which accounts for the Martin. She's studying higher mathematics at Columbia. Like all Eastern girls, she is chiefly struck and delighted by "the freedom of American women." Superficially and comparatively, that's true, from the standpoint of these saffron beauties—but free for what, baby?

Witty Phrases Color Talk

NO, IT'S not very clever of a girl to leave her talk to chance.

When meeting an attractive new man, for want of something to say you may blurt out such a "boner" as "My, you look tired," or "Are you the man who made that funny error in last week's game?"

So much smarter to be ready with a stock of gracious phrases. Deftly you start a conversation with "This is a nice party, isn't it?" or "Have you met the guest of honor yet?"

And when you know vivid word combinations your speech sparkles with bright repartee. "Bored? No, that's just my airy indifference." "A little bird tells me you're not all angelic sweetness."

On more serious occasions, too, a store of forceful word combinations helps you make a good impression. Giving a report at your club, urge "eager cooperation" and "active understanding," speak of "prestige and influence."

There's no occasion in business or social life which won't go more happily when you know the pleasant, poised thing to say.

Shoe-Brush Stand Is Necessity for Good Grooming

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

A settled-down adventurer we know once remarked that the nicest part about being married was having space for a shoe-shining box. Till then, he'd lived in a suitcase with never room for more than a can of blacking and a brush. Now, with gusto, he hoists his shoes on a very professional stand and pops his rag till he can see himself in his black brogues.

That's just one item of the good-grooming equipment every home should have. Another is a steam-pressing electric iron for setting in a snappy crease. And we're a stickler for a good sewing machine, kept out and ready to use for repairs on the spur of the moment. For that matter, all these good-grooming accessories are doubly useful when they're available for use without a getting out and setting-up exercise before hand. And so we're an arden advocate of a utility room in every home where such things are all set to go all the time.

Sra. de Fernandez Demonstrates Value of 'English in 20 Lessons'

By Hope Ridings Miller.

THE VALUE OF "English in 20 lessons" was demonstrated yesterday when pretty Senora de Fernandez, wife of the Minister of Paraguay, arrived at a party after having just completed her course. Before she left, she had made the rounds and tried out on each guest her three favorite sentences—"How are you?" . . . "It is nice to see you." . . . "May I have your card?" Meanwhile she had talked fluently with her big brown eyes, her ingratiating smile, and her expressive hands—to say nothing of a vocabulary that many Americans do not acquire in a lifetime.

HOPE R. MILLER

A congenial company, representing official, diplomatic and residential circles, a delicious menu planned by one of Washington's cleverest hostesses, and a gay round of talk that kept the party going until mid-afternoon were features of the pleasant event.

Senora de Espil, trimly turned out in a tailored black frock worn with pearls and a diamond clip on the shoulder, received informally. Huge vases of roses and spring blossoms, and a crackling open fire added a cheery warmth to the handsomely furnished drawing room.

Guests usually arrive early at Senora de Espil's parties; so, although yesterday's luncheon was arranged for 1:15, most of the company had assembled a quarter of an hour before.

The long dining room table, at which covers were laid for 21, was decorated with rare pieces of Vieux Marseilles and Strasbourg china, two fan-shaped bouquets of anemone, yellow daisies and stock at either end, and smaller matching bouquets flanking the china centerpiece.

Mrs. Douglas Among Guests

A fashion writer would have had a field day making notes, for smart frocks were very much in the picture. Mrs. Bankhead had on a becoming black outfit, featuring a snappy turban. Mrs. William O. Douglas, who looks more like a debutante every time I see her, was also in black, her dress being set off with a narrow lace ruching-effect neckline.

Mrs. Charles Edison, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, was a center of much attention; as was Mrs. Harold Ickes, wife of the Secretary of the Interior. Recently returned from a brief vacation in Florida, she is already deep in plans for her next "at home" on Wednesday. Mrs. Edison, incidentally, has postponed her reception for that date.

Skiing Plans Made at Party

Mrs. Hiram Johnson, in a two-toned beige and black frock, set off with a mink-trimmed turban, kept guests around her in a merry uproar as she regaled them with one amusing story after the other. On down the table, Mme. Bruggmann, wife of the Swiss Minister, and Mrs. Adolph Berle, discussed skiing, skating and other winter sports; and if I'm not mistaken, plans were made then and there for some skiing out at Woodley, the Berle home, yesterday afternoon.

An especially interesting addition to the party was Senora de Scilingo, wife of the new Argentine Second Secretary, who is British by birth, and who spent most of her time trying to get names and faces matched up.

Lady Broderick Is Grandmother

Mrs. Sol Bloom was there, sporting a pale blue turban with a black frock and a five-strand pearl necklace. Mrs. Patrick Hurley, always handsome, was especially so yesterday in her pencil-blue frock and matching hat. Others there were Miss Jennie Moore, Miss Mary Patten, Mrs. J. Frederick Essary, wearing a smart black spring hat; Miss Ruth Jones, and Mrs. Thomas Burke, who is recovering from an attack of influenza.

Lady Broderick, of Ireland, who says she expects to be here indefinitely and is enjoying being a grandmother for the third time (the Maurice C. Brodericks are the proud parents of a young daughter), was another there. And two especially pleasant members of the company were Mrs. Frank Letts, mother of the hostess; and attractive Miss Louise Stillwell, Senora de Espil's subdebutante daughter, who will make her bow to society in June and is already one of the outstanding buds of the coming crop.

John Degroots Visiting Nassau In Yacht Pinta

Aboard the schooner Pinta, which is visiting Nassau in the Bahamas, are Mr. and Mrs. John Degroot, of this city, who are the guests of Austin Gilmore, owner of the yacht. On the first stages of a three-months cruise, the Pinta will visit Port-au-Prince, the Dominican Republic, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

Mrs. Hamilton Fish is stopping at the British Colonial Hotel in Nassau, as are Mr. and Mrs. Franklin P. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Flood, Mrs. Catherine Herring, Monroe Warren and Dr. and Mrs. K. C. Corley, of Chevy Chase. Also from this city in Nassau are Mrs. Howard McClure, Brandon Shea and John Michael.

Miss Masi Visiting Sullivans Here

Miss Mary Paul Masi, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Masi, of Norfolk, Va., is visting her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Paul Sullivan. Their daughter, Miss Mannevillette Sullivan, will entertain for her at a small dance on February 2.

A debutante of the season, Miss Masi made her bow at the Norfolk German and the Baltimore Cotillion. A number of parties are being planned for her during her visit.

Mrs. Seaton Honors Mrs. Dawson Olmstead

Mrs. Arthur J. Seaton entertained at a small luncheon yesterday in honor of Mrs. Dawson Olmstead, who recently arrived from her home in Fort Monmouth, N. J., to visit here.

The party took place in Mrs. Seaton's apartment at 1613 Harvard street. Mrs. Olmstead, who is being widely feted, is a former president of the D. C. League of American Pen Women.

Seeking the Sunshine —Going—and Gone

Harris & Ewing.

When the winds blow cold in the Capital, Was hington treks to the South. Miss Carol S. Fries (above, left) departed last night, her ultimat e destination being the University of Miami, at Coral Gables, Fla. At the right is Miss Joa n McKenna, who is already in Miami and will be there with her parents as a guest of Mrs. C arolyn G. Good until next month. Miss Fries, daughter of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Amos A. Frie s, will stop in Columbia, S. C., to visit Miss Jane Tobias, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Henr y Tobias, formerly of Washington; then will go on to Fort Benning, where she will visit M iss Matile Griswold, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Oscar Griswold, and her brother and sister-in-law, Lieut. and Mrs. Stuart G. Fries, before going on to college

D. C. Notable Attends Dance

Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman will return today to her home in Washington from Philadelphia where last evening she attended the junior dinner dance at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel. Mrs. Tuckerman took Miss Patricia Prochnik, from Washington, and they were joined in Philadelphia by Miss Joan Hull, another guest of Mrs. Tuckerman's at the dinner dance. Miss Hull is the granddaughter of Mrs. John C. Fremont and Miss Prochnik is the daughter of the former Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik.

Yesterday Mrs. Tuckerman was the guest of honor at a luncheon given in Philadelphia by Mrs. David van Pelt at the Acorn Club. On Thursday, just before leaving for Philadelphia, Mrs. Tuckerman entertained at luncheon in honor of Mrs. William A. Butler, widow of Senator Butler, of Massachusetts, at the League of Republican Women's Club.

Guests included the Countess de Buyer-Mimeure, Mrs. John Bigelow, Mme. Perrotto, Lady Leslie, Mrs. Laurence V. Benet, Mrs. French Myers, of New York; Miss Caroline Nash, Mrs. George F. Becker, Mrs. Francis Savage, Mrs. Griffin de Mauduit, Miss Jessie Fremont, Miss Marian Stevens and Mrs. H. H. Matthews.

Mrs. Jacob Loose Gives Dinner

Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose entertained last night at dinner in her apartment at the Shoreham.

Ranking guests were Justice and Mrs. William O. Douglas, the Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun and the Chief of Staff and Mrs. Marshall.

Mrs. Breckinridge Long Entertains at Luncheon

Mrs. Breckinridge Long entertained at a luncheon yesterday at Grasslands, the attractive club on Nebraska avenue.

Fahnestocks Fete Spanish, Danish Envoys

Mr. and Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock entertained at a dinner last night at which the ranking guests were the Spanish Ambassador, Juan de Cardenas, and the Danish Minister and Mme. de Kauffmann. Senora de Cardenas had been called to New York for a brief stay.

Mr. and Mrs. Fahnestock tentatively have set February 8 as the date of their departure for Nassau, but if this cold weather keeps up they may postpone the trip until later in the season.

Also guests at the dinner last night were Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hoving, of New York, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Adsit Bull.

Writer to Address Town Hall Session

Dr. John W. Studebaker, United States Commissioner of Education, will preside over the panel at the Town Hall meeting at the Shoreham Hotel tomorrow evening when H. R. Knickerbocker, newspaper correspondent recently returned from Europe, will speak on the subject, "At the Ringside of History."

Other members of the panel will be Miss Dorothy Detzer, national secretary of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, who attended a meeting at Geneva early in the winter; Barnet Nover and Lyon P. Talley, president of the Commodity Credit Corporation.

Mr. Knickerbocker will be honor guest at a supper to be given after the meeting by Mrs. Robert Low Bacon.

Mrs. W. H. Brownson, Daughter in Capital

Mrs. William H. Brownson, widow of Admiral Brownson, and her daughter, Mrs. Charles L. Hussey, are at the Shoreham Hotel until after Easter from their home in Litchfield, Conn.

Mrs. Hussey is the widow of Admiral Hussey. She and her mother have many friends in the Capital City.

Mrs. Wilson To See 'Gone'

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and Mrs. Edwin T. Meredith will be among the guests of Mrs. Emlen Knight Davies at the benefit showing tonight of the movie "Gone With the Wind," proceeds from which will go to Finnish relief.

The Minister of Finland, Hjalmar J. Procope, will be present. Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn have organized a Dutch Treat party, the company to include Count and Countess Andre de Limur, Mr. and Mrs. David Finley, Mrs. Amory Perkins, of Middleburg; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lippmann, John Walter and Lady Margaret Walker, Mr. and Mrs. Dean Acheson, Mr. and Mrs. Selden Chapin, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Clark and Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Munson.

Minister Procope and Polish Ambassador Count Potocki will be guests of Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, who has also invited Senator Henrik Shipstead, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Drew Pearson and Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja.

Miss Collinwood, Mr. Haskell Wed

Of interest to Washington was the wedding yesterday afternoon in Richmond of Miss Elizabeth Pelton Collingwood, of that city, to Henry Smith Haskell, II, son of Mrs. Clayton Haskell, of Washington.

The ceremony tok place at 4 o'clock at St. Andrew's Church. The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, John Chichester Collingwood, jr., wore a gown of chantilly lace and tulle with a heart-shaped neckline and long sleeves. A Brussels lace veil, worn by both her grandmother and her mother, completed her costume, and she carried a shower bouquet of white pansies, lilies of the valley and white orchids.

Tea Will Honor Actor Horton

Judge and Mrs. Ernest H. Van Fossan will entertain at a tea on Thursday afternoon from 4 until 6 o'clock in their apartment at 2101 Connecticut avenue in honor of Edward Everett Horton.

The Hollywood comedian, who will open here at the National on Monday in "Springtime for Henry," was a college chum of Judge Van Fossan at Oberlin College and Columbia University.

Martha McClure Will Arrive Here Feb. 14

Miss Martha McClure, Republican national committeewoman from Iowa, will arrive here February 14 to attend the meeting called for February 15 by Chairman John Hamilton. She will stay with her sister, Mrs. William Fitch Kelley, in her apartment at the Wardman Park, as she always does when she comes to town.

Miss McClure has been spending the winter in Arizona.

Barkleys Pay Tribute to Messersmiths

58 Guests Attend Dinner Given by Senate Majority Leader

Fifty-eight guests gathered at the dinner given last evening at the Hotel Carlton by Senator and Mrs. Alben Barkley for the newly named United States Ambassador to Cuba and Mrs. George Messersmith. The party was a farewell gesture, as the Messersmiths expect to leave next month.

Washington officialdom was well represented. There were Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed, the Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki; the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., the Attorney General and Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Senator and Mrs. Alva Adams, Mrs. Warren Austin, Mrs. Sherman Minton, Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg—their respective husbands were en route from Idaho, where they attended the funeral of Senator Borah; Senator Kenneth McKellar, Senator Tom Connally, Senator and Mrs. Morris Sheppard, Senator and Mrs. James F. Byrnes, Senator and Mrs. A. B. Chandler, Senator Joseph Guffey, Senator and Mrs. Lewis B. Schwellenbach and Senator and Mrs. Frederick Van Nuys.

Others present included Representative Patrick J. Boland, Mr. and Mrs. Breckinridge Long, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Davies, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., Mr. and Mrs. William Stanley, Mr. and Mrs. O. Max Gardner, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fleming, Max Truitt, son-in-law of the hosts (Mrs. Truitt is ill), Mrs. Mary MacArthur, Charles Michaelson, publicity director for the Democratic National Committee; Miss Mae Helm, Mr. and Mrs. J. Fred Essary, Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer, Stewart McDonald, Edward Keating, Col. and Mrs. Edwin Halsey, Miss Pauletta Guffey, Mrs. Eleanor Rand, daughter of Mrs. Davies; Miss Dorothy Graves and David Barkley, son of the hosts.

Dorothy Roosevelt Plays in Musicale At White House

Mrs. Dorothy Kemp Roosevelt, sister-in-law of the First Lady, was among the artists featured at the musicale given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House.

There were many members of residential society among the guests, who, after the program, gathered in the state dining room for tea.

Mrs. Dorothy Roosevelt, who is a pianist, appeared with Mrs. Loraine McDonald in a program for two pianos. Miss Nemone Balfour, the singer, was the other artist, and sang works by Schubert and Brahms, as well as several Scottish folk songs.

Mrs. Corby Opens Miami Beach Home

Miami Beach is beginning to resemble a suburb of Washington, so many members of Capital society are vacationing at that resort.

Mrs. Charles I. Corby arrived last week and has opened her home on North Alton road. She has as her guest her sister-in-law, Mrs. Elliot Corby, of New York.

Week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Hoover were their son, H. W. Hoover, jr., a student at Rollins College, in Florida, and Miss Carl Good, of Washington. The engagement of Mr. Hoover and Miss Good was announced recently.

Three popular bachelors have established their quarters at the Del Mar Manor for the season, with a Chinese valet and cook to look after them. They are James Corcoran and Sunny Workman, of Washington, and Thomas Aulbach, of New York.

Mrs. Eva H. Boothby, of Washington, who is spending two weeks at the Pancoast Hotel, has been joined by Miss Helen Donegan, who arrived by motor.

Mr. and Mrs. George Junior, of Washington, who have been at Miami, have left for Port-au-Prince, Haiti, by clipper.

Tourists Land In Revolt Zone

J. Forbes Amory, who sailed last month for a tour of South America, already has run into a revolution down there, according to word received by his friends here.

Mr. Amory landed in Guayaquil five days before the revolution, which broke out after the elections, January 11. He had dined at the American Legation in Quito January 9 and was warned there might be trouble. By the time he reached Guayaquil the worst of the revolution was over.

The traveler will go into the interior of Peru for pictures of Indians and will visit Chilean lakes and other places of interest before returning here in the spring.

Arthurs Are Hosts On Bridal Anniversary

To celebrate their thirty-first wedding anniversary, Col. and Mrs. Robert Arthur entertained at dinner at the Army War College Club last evening for 30 guests.

Ranking guest was Brig. Gen. Philip B. Peyton and the other guests included officers and their wives from the historical section of the Army War College, where Col. Arthur is attached, members of the Coast Artillery Corps and some civilian friends.

'La Grippe' Takes Toll Of Invited Araujo Guests

Brazilian Naval Attache and Wife Entertain at Merry Party for Members From Navy Circle and Diplomatic Corps

By Carolyn Bell

A merry "service" party was held yesterday when the Naval Attache of the Brazilian Embassy and Senhora Araujo entertained for a large group from the Navy circle as well as the Diplomatic Corps at the Mayflower Hotel from 5 until 7 o'clock.

Like so many other parties of late "la grippe" took its usual toll of expected guests. As the hostess said, hardly a couple came in together for either husband or wife was sick.

Receiving just inside Presidential Room Commander and Senhora Araujo were assisted by their son, Victor. Senhora Araujo wore an attractive frock of lilac chiffon with a violet taffeta coat.

A huge spring bouquet centered the table where tea and coffee, as well as all manner of sandwiches and sweets, were to be had. A semicircular bar was arranged on either side. There was the usual whisky and soda, for the gentlemen, and champagne, with strawberries, for the ladies.

Attaches' Wives Assist With Tea

Senora Machado, wife of the Military and Air attache of the Brazilian Embassy, who was pouring tea, had a dubonnet hat to top off her black costume. At the other end of the table was fetching Senhora Gouthier, wife of the Second Secretary of the Embassy. She wore a Chinese tea wool frock and her shako was edged in fox fur. Not far from the tea table Senhora Fragoso, whose black bonnet was topped by a cluster of bright pink flowers, was chatting with Miss Emma Knight in a green wool ensemble.

Rather late arrivals to the party were the Brazilian Ambassador and pretty Senhora Martins. She wore a silver fox jacket over her black outfit and a red velvet turban, with a sweeping veil edged in sequins, completed the costume. Mrs. George Pettengill, wife of Admiral Pettengill, added a spring-like touch to her outfit with chartreuse and blue feathers atop her chapeau.

The Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy, Capt. Don Umberto Cugia, who will leave February 10 for sea duty, informs us that a new naval attache will arrive at the embassy within a few days. The Naval Attache of the German Embassy and Frau Witthoeft-Emden were among those who stopped in during the afternoon, as were Frau von Boetticher, wife of the Military Attache of the Embassy.

Portuguese Envoy Attends Party

The Minister of Portugal and Mme. Bianchi were there, as was Miss Sibilla Skidelsky in a squirrel coat; Mrs. M. H. McMahon with a lame turban wound about her head; Mrs. Paul S. McMahon; Gen. Frederick Boschen and his daughter, Mrs. Edgar Morris, jr., wearing a skunk cape, and Mrs. Thomas Dawson.

Miss Mary Ruddell was chatting gayly with Victor Araujo when glimpsed. A short pink jacket and matching turban enlivened her black ensemble. Others there were Mr. and Mrs. Jim Cunningham, Charles C. Pettijohn, the Naval Attache of the Cuban Embassy, Maj. Felipe Munilla; C. W. Gottehelf, Col. Robert Arthur, Mrs. Jack Marshall and Mrs. Helene Bernard.

Hamels Hosts Before Dance

Several dinners preceded the meeting of the Friday Evening Dancing Class last night at the Willard Hotel.

Among hosts were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hamel, who gave a large dinner at the Chevy Chase Club. Guests included Justice and Mrs. Bolitha J. Laws, Mr. and Mrs. South Trimble, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Edgar J. Goodrich, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Townsend, Mr. and Mrs. William Weigester, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Shorb, Mr. and Mrs. Logan Morris, Mr. and Mrs. Alvin W. Hall, Dr. and Mrs. Carl Henning, Judge and Mrs. C. Rogers Arundel and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Loman.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Wideman entertained at their home, 3232 Woodley road, before the dance. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. William S. Culbertson, Maj. and Mrs. Parker West, Mr. and Mrs. John E. McClure, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Montfort, Judge and Mrs. Samuel E. Whitaker, Mr. and Mrs. Newell Ellison, Mr. and Mrs. E. Barrett Prettyman, Mr. and Mrs. J. Craig Peacock, Sidney F. Talliaferro, Dr. and Mrs. William Burdick, Mr. and Mrs. Francis W. Hill and Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Korner, jr.

Penwomen Turn Time Backward for a Night

Staid Members Are Chattering Schoolgirls Again in Gay and Undisciplined Evening of Pointed Verse and Song

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

The Penwomen let their hair down (those of them who had long hair) for their "Gaudy Night" party given last evening at their Grafton Hotel studio with a large and enthusiastic attendance. It was a members only entertainment with school days as the theme and costumes in keeping.

Matilde Kolb Bartlett, in the role of school teacher, welcomed mothers, aunts and guests for a Friday afternoon program by a class of somewhat undisciplined pupils of various sizes and ages. The class opened with the singing of "School Days," followed by a welcome by the teacher and the roll call, to which the members responded with "bright sayings."

Amusing limericks, many of them about the league activities or its membership, were given in the class recitation. Those participating were Mrs. William H. Manchester, Dr. Florence A. Everhart, Mrs. Augustus O. Thomas, Mrs. George W. Stackhouse, Mrs. Agnes McCall Parker.

Mrs. Nell Wiggins, representing a talkative colored girl, kept the class in a titter. Nell V. Smith, who is publicity chairman for the local branch of the league, was one of the star pupils, presenting a "prize poem." It was in the rhythm of "Hiawatha" and was of the Penwomen and their president, Mrs. Helen Orr Watson. The poem began:

To the Grafton Hotel studio
Troop the District League Penwomen.
Made of every type you've heard of,
Made of every type you've dreamed of,
Big and little, tall and slender,
Short and plump ones, wide and narrow.

As it continued it described Mrs. Watson:

Wrote a book and called it Chanco
Won first place and lots of dough.
Made her famous, Brought her family
To a state of vertigo.
Reason—they can never find her—
She is always on the go,
Making speeches, teaching classes,
Bossing Penwomen—lays them low.

Following this recitation, the attention of the schoolroom was distracted by the arrival of "Pet," an unruly little boy, portrayed by Mattie Richards Tyler, led by the hand of his colored mammy, role taken by Mrs. Inez Sheldon Tyler. Mrs. Smith was responsible for the words, "These Penwomen," written to be sung as a round to the tune of "Three Blind Mice."

There followed a letter exercise, based on the initials of the name, D. C. Branch, National League of American Pen Women. Verses dealing with various members of the branch were recited by Mrs. J. Jeune Carter, Elizabeth Hartman, Winifred Willard, Mrs. Estelle Steele, Mrs. Marshall Hugh Irish, Mrs. Louise Dunwell, Margaret Jean Bailey and Mrs. Angela Barr.

The program included a musical reading by Bess Heath Olmstead, former president of the branch, and Mrs. Watson, a recitation by Ann Singleton and a class song and dance in which Leila Pier King, Marguerite Merigold, Katherine Jacobs and Clara Manderschied took part. Mrs. Bartlett was chairman of the evening.

Whittier Children Awarded P.-T. A. Health Certificates

Mrs. Ralph Graham and Mrs. Santelman Were in Charge of 'Summer Round-up' to Correct Defects Before Classes Started

Whittier School children who participated in the "summer roundup" of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers yesterday received certificates signed by both the national and District congresses showing that they entered school last fall with a clean bill of health.

The purpose of the "roundup," of which Mrs. Ralph Graham is district chairman and Mrs. Rudolph Santelman, chairman for Whittier, is the medical examination of pre-school children the summer before they are first enrolled in classes to discover remedial defects. Those for whom these defects have been corrected before the beginning of school or who are rated as perfect, are entitled to the certificates.

The "summer roundup" chairman in each parent-teacher association subscribing to the plan, and members of her committee visit the families in their school district, in which there are children who will enter school the next year. They encourage the parents to have the children examined and follow up the examination with the correction of defects. Mrs. Evelyn Bright Buckley, chairman of health for the District Congress, under whose department this committee functions, says the effort is to enable children to start school free from the handicap of some minor ill that may be remedied easily.

The children are given general physical examinations, weighed, measured, and given dental inspection and vision tests. "Child Health Day" is in May, which is the month chosen for the examinations. They are given at the school with the school nurse, oral hygienist, medical inspector and other physicians volunteering their services. The nurse consults with the mothers, explaining the clinical services available to those who desire to use them.

Whittier, the parent-teacher association to which Mrs. Graham belongs, rounded up 56 children last summer, the largest number reported by any in the city. Raymond, with 33, and John Burroughs with 32, were next. Of the 56 Whittier children, 29 were found to be free from defects and the others had them corected before school began. Unfortunately, the preschool precautions did not prevent some of them from being absent yesterday because of illness. Only half of the 56 were on hand to receive their certificates, but the others will get theirs later. Mrs. Graham and Mrs. Santelman made the presentations.

D.A.R. Program On Defense

Mrs. Lee R. Pennington, jr., State chairman of the District D. A. R. radio committee, has arranged for the third in a series of "national defense" programs to be broadcast this morning at 9:45 over WJSV. Lieut. Col. William M. Grimes, general staff corps, will speak on "The Responsibilities of the United States Army in the National Defense." Other speakers on the series were Maj. Sidney Morgan, State staff, District National Guard, and Commander Leland P. Lovette, U. S. N.

Col. Grimes, who comes from a military family and is a graduate of the Cavalry School, the Command and General Staff School and the Army War College, received the Silver Star for gallantry in action during the Meuse-Argonne operations. During the World War he commanded the Fifteenth Machine Gun Battalion of the Fifth Division.

A benefit card party will be given by the junior group of Constitution Chapter, D. A. R., at the hotel, 2400 16th street, this afternoon at 2:30.

Miss Dorothy Grace Catling is chairman of the group, and the committee for the party includes Miss Lucy Eastham, treasurer; Miss Helen Vassar vice chairman, and Mrs. Andrew Dawson, secretary.

Marcia Burns Chapter will hold a card party at the All States Hotel tonight at 8. The proceeds will go toward the scholarship fund in the Crossnore School, where the chapter has for several years maintained a scholarship.

Tau Beta Phi Plan Invitation on Monday

The Washington Province of Tau Beta Phi Sorority will hold its semiannual formal initiation ceremonies in the Pan-American Room of the Mayflower Hotel on Monday at 8 p. m. Girls who will be received into membership are Emily Lynch, Sarah Jones, Mary O'Brien, Betty Brayton, Lorraine Weast, Eloise Fox, Lillian Dee, Mary Agnes McCarthy, Adele Feeney, Frances Trott, and Virginia Snyder.

Miss Adrienne Odenthal is chairman of the initiating committee, with Miss Ruth Helmuth, Miss Lillie Mae Preston and Mrs. Sadie Gunn assisting.

Members of the seven local chapters will attend the initiation and will honor the new members with a buffet supper after the ceremonies.

Adviser Plan Called Futile By Kennedy

Says Commissioners' Veto Power Would Deprive Citizen Body Of Any Real Power

By James D. Secrest

While Chairman Kennedy, of the House subcommittee, yesterday assailed two unexplained revisions in the Seal reorganization plan, the District Commissioners dispatched to the Budget Bureau a compromise plan to retain Dr. George C. Ruhland as District health officer.

Targets of Kennedy's criticism were provisions for a citizens' advisory council and the proposal to supplant the health officer with an appointee from the Public Health Service or Army or Navy Medical Corps.

Kennedy said that he differed with the Commissioners on many of the details of the reorganization plan also, but would withhold his views until after the District heads have an opportunity to justify their recommendations at committee hearings.

Sees no Gain for Citizens

"I don't see what advantage can be claimed for the citizens' advisory council," he said.

"It certainly wouldn't give the people of Washington any more control of their city government than they have at present. The members of the council would be apt to be subservient to the Commissioners, as they would be appointed by them."

Kennedy's objections to the provision in the Seal bill for replacing the health officer by a Government physician are based on opposition to the principle of subordinating municipal administration to Federal control.

He said that the qualifications of Dr. George C. Ruhland were not involved in the controversy, from his point of view. Consequently, the modification decided upon by the Commissioners to prevent Dr. Ruhland's immediate ouster is as unsatisfactory as the first proposal, he said.

A physician trained for the armed services or even the Public Health Service, Kennedy said, might prove a poor health officer for a municipality such as Washington. His training, he explained, has been along different lines.

The new plan sent to the Budget Bureau by the Commissioners yesterday would permit the selection of an officer of the Army, Navy or United States Public Health Service corps, to head the Health Department. The Commissioners explained, however, the proposal would "permit" them to obtain a Federal man and in no sense should it be interpreted as "mandatory."

Under the original Seal plan, the President would be authorized to designate a member of the Public Health Service 30 days after Congress approved the bill. The public interpretation was that this was an attempt to oust Dr. Ruhland.

Kennedy called Commissioner Allen by telephone yesterday and made a tentative engagement for Tuesday to discuss means of expediting the reorganization legislation. Allen was confined to his hotel by a cold.

If the Budget Bureau does not submit the commissioner's plan, together with its recommendations, within another week, Kennedy said he would call on the bureau to expedite its approval.

Hearings will be scheduled on the Seal and Kennedy bills as soon after the Budget Bureau acts as members of the reorganization sub-committee can arrange to take the time from other affairs, the chairman said.

Rare Food Disease Takes Second Life

Buckhannon, W. Va., Jan. 26 (AP).—A second death was reported here today from botulism, a rare form of food poisoning.

Latest victim was Pete Peraldo, 48-year-old contractor of Beckley, W. Va. His son, Dante, 18, died two weeks ago of the same cause.

They became ill after eating pickled beef tongue on December 29. Another son, William, ate with them but showed no signs of poisoning. No previous cases of botulism are on record in the State.

Capital News In Brief

Footprinted to Jail

For the past month, First Precinct station detectives have vainly attempted to capture a burglar who seven times looted a Chinese restaurant at 929 Ninth street northwest. What baffled the sleuths was the thief's method of getting in (and out). Then it snowed.

That was Tuesday night. The thief made his seventh visit, rifled the automatic victrola and the cigarette machine. He also left footprints on the roof. He used the skylight.

So police took turns watching. Last night the 23-year-old thief was in a cell. He made his eighth visit and was greeted by a uniformed welcoming committee.

Boy Is Injured

Fred Wineland, 13, of 519 Trenton street southeast, received bruises of the left leg and a possible fracture of the right shoulder when the automobile in which he was riding skidded into collision with another at Nichols avenue and Sheridan road southeast last night. Police said one automobile was operated by Sherman A. Snow, 35, of the Trenton street address, the other by Elmer E. Cox, 26, of Oxon Hill, Md.

Chiropractors Rap Move

The District of Columbia Chiropractic Society yesterday unanimously adopted a resolution opposing the Seal plan to change the method of appointing the District's health officer. Members also went on record favoring the retention of Dr. George C. Ruhland, present health officer.

Study Directed On Colored Welfare Costs

Civic Federation to Survey Lack of Funds In Last Two Decades

Social welfare costs for maintenance of community standards and assurance of national progress, were presented to the Federation of Civic Associations last night at a meeting in the board room of the District Building, by Charles M. Thomas, federation president.

A study of deficiences in quota of appropriations for colored citizenry in the last two decades was directed to be made, with a view to developing a special civic program for persons of low incomes, especially masses of prsons who have come ino h Disrlce from relaively reardd aras.

The federation directed its executive committee to make a study of a city-wide recreational program, including establishment of toy libraries, censorship of films, youth hostels for hikers, a girls' athletic program, a recreation in the church program, and concerts at popular prices sponsored by nonprofit organizations.

Participation in "Tomorrow Citizens' Exhibit," an exposition of work of colored civic organizations, was directed, incident to a proposition sponsored by the American Association of University Women in the foyer of the National Museum, beginning February 5.

Shortage in custodial and engineering forces of the public schools, resulting in deterioration of buildings, and objectiton to cinders for the covering of playgrounds, was the basis of a report by Howard D. Woodson, chairman of the committee on public works. The federation requested the Engineer Commissioner to give employment to colored mechanics in the District Repair Shop, and asked for concrete, or bituminous concerete playground surfaces, in adopting this report.

Americanizers Plead for Care In Legislation

Declaring that "the future of America involves the American-born children of all peoples," the Americanization School Association last night asked all legislators to consider carefully pending measures that may affect millions of native-born children of foreign-born parents.

The Association's legislative committee made the plea in a meeting in which citizenship problems were discussed with representatives of several organizations that aid foreign-born citizens.

Without proposing or approving specific legislation, the committee, through its spokesman, Maude I. Aiton, administrative principal of the Americanization School, urged "men and women who have knowledge of immigration and naturalization . . . to look calmly at American problems in which newcomers to this country are involved."

Speakers included Souren H. Hanessian, vice president of the association; Vladimir Vasa, of the Americanization School; Elizabeth Eastman, of the Foreign Language Information Service, and Mrs. Geoffrey Creyke, chairman of the D. A. R. Americanization committee. James A. Crooks, chairman of the legislation study group of the association, presided.

Hush Yo' Mouf, Honey Chile, Olivia Has a South'n Accent

Actress Tells Yo-All How She Got It, Saying 'I Can't Dance in Fancy Pants' Many Times Over for Peachtree Street Brogue

Put the right honey-dripping drawl in "I can't dance in fancy pants" and "I can't afford to buy 44 Fords" and you know how Olivia De Havilland got educated to that Peachtree street talk as Melanie in "Gone With the Wind."

Over and over they had to say it in their accent exercises and still Miss De Havilland found "Atlanta" the hardest word to drawl. Others in the cast couldn't get the twang out of "Mother."

Miss De Havilland talked about all this yesterday here, while declining cigarettes and cocktails, but able to enjoy the party all the same.

She is here for the President's birthday celebration at the invitation of Mrs. Roosevelt, and for the opening of "Gone With the Wind" last night at Loew's Palace Theater. Meanwhile, she "wants to see the beauties of Washington" and, said the theater manager, "that sounds like press agent talk, but Miss De Havilland was only here once before, and that on a moonlight night—which is no unfavorable environment for such a girl."

And then she got to talking, not about Hollywood but some very everyday sort of matters and she has a voice that takes on a tiny excitement and does such things to the ear, say, as a cello note does.

In the afternoon she went to the Capitol and disbanded a large part of the Democratic bloc in the Senate. Among these were the Georgia Senators, who with Senator Barkley and others had her to lunch.

And earlier still Gen. Julius F. Howell, 94-year-old commander of the United Confederate Veterans—taking no cues from anyone—bent low and kissed her hand and called her "a real Southern lady." She was born in Tokyo, Japan—but her real name is Olivia De Havilland.

Another Premiere

Around the corner in front of the Earle Theater there were no klieglights spotlighting the sidewalk, nor antiaircraft searchlights poking at the sky, but another premiere was also taking place.

A delegation of 50 priests and teachers from Catholic and Georgetown universities came to see "The Fighting 69th," dealing with the life of Fr. Francis P. Duffy, heroic chaplain of the Rainbow Division in the A. E. F. Msgr. P. J. McCormick, vice rector of Catholic University, led the party, many of whom had been close personal friends of the war priest.

Here, too, there was to have been an unusual display for the premiere, but icy streets forced postponement of a demonstration by the regimental band of the 260th Coast Artillery and a detachment of 100 men, who were also to participate in the stage show. The extra-bill program will be carried out Monday night.

Church Paper Attacks Rum Sales Tax Plan

Richmond, Va., Jan. 26 (AP).—The current issue of the Virginia Christian Advocate expressed vigorous opposition to Gov. Price's plan to add to the general fund of the Commonwealth by taxing liquor 10 per cent for education purposes.

"Right-thinking people," the advocate says, "have a right strongly to resent any suggestion of tying up liquor proceeds with our educational system. One would as soon think of diverting these funds for the support of our churches . . . let the schools be supported as legitimately as we expect them to be operated."

Finnish Benefit Show Tonight

A special tableau of the Finnish Arctic will precede tonight's Finnish benefit performance of "Gone With the Wind," which opened yesterday at the Palace.

Of the 2,357 seats, 91 per cent have been taken up. The remainder represent resale tickets, bought at $10 each but turned back further to increase the fund.

The Rev. Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, chairman of the Washington unit of the Finnish Relief Fund, announced last night that the resale tickets will be available at $3 and $5 each at the Willard Hotel until 6 p. m. and after that at the Palace box-office. He revealed that in some cases a single ticket had passed through three hands and had brought in $25 to $30 for the fund.

The tableau, to be enacted by three stars of the Washington Civic Theater, the Misses Janice Norton, Edith Sogner and Florence Lovell, will begin at 8:25 p. m. The Finnish national anthem will be sung by the Foundry Methodist Church choir, and the Finnish Minister, Hjalmar J. Procope, will be presented to the audience. The film will start at 8:30. A chair for the "Invisible Guest," in a special box, will remain unoccupied, symbolizing the "magnificent demonstration of Washingtonians doing good over and over again," Father Walsh said.

Roosevelt Sees Slums Shriveling

Letter to Housing Parley Here Cites USHA Progress to Lower Rentals

The United States Housing Authority has "progressed consistently toward lower rents, lower income groups served, lower construction costs, increasing decentralization and community responsibility," President Roosevelt declared last night in a letter to the National Housing Conference at the Willard Hotel.

"Last year, for the first time in about half a century," the President wrote, "the slum areas in our country as a whole commenced to shrivel rather than to expand. Through public and private endeavor, this tendency should continue until decent housing for the lowest income third becomes the established rule rather than an almost nonexistent exception."

The President also expressed gratification at the vital interest being shown in improving housing conditions in rural areas.

Letter Read at Banquet

The President's letter was read at the ninth annual banquet of the National Public Housing Conference, attended by more than 150 professional, business and civic leaders. The dinner climaxed the program of the opening day; other sessions will follow today.

Housing Administrator Nathan Straus and eSnator Robert Wagner, of New York, speaking at the banquet, hailed the achievements of the USSHA program.

Straus pointed out that rents on 17 projects completed in 1939 averaged 16 per cent lower than estimated in the 1938 report. In some projects in the South rents are as low as $7 a month, he said, although in 1938 he was criticized for predicting those rents "might be brought down to $12 a month."

Asks More Money

The authority's success in the last year raises the question of reducing subsidies, Straus said. At present USHA homes rent at the same level as slum dwellings, he explained, and the public housing movement has the alternative of lowering the rents still further or accepting lower subsidies.

Straus concluded with a warning against "tinkering with a successful, living organism," and asked for public support of the Wagner-Steagall bill to increase the Authority's lending limit to $800,000,000.

"We are standing at the threshhold of a new day in housing," said Straus, "but the battle is only beginning and our ammunition is nearly exhausted. Only if the people make their voices heard will Congress vote us the sinews of war we need."

The speeches of Straus and Senator Wagner were broadcast over a Nation-wide hookup of the Mutual Broadcasting System.

Low Cost Emphasized

Senator Wagner emphasized the low cost of the USHA program to the taxpayers, pointing out that the authority realized a substantial interest profit on its loans.

The House has voted only $10,000,000 for the USHA this year, Wagner said, while England, with a population less than one-third of our own, spends annually $75,000,000 on public housing despite the cost of armament.

Other speakers at the dinner were Heinz Norden, of the Tenants' Housing Council; James Dundan, of the Textile Workers Union, and John Ashton, of the Construction Workers Union. Louis H. Pink, superintendent of Insurance of New York State, presided.

At the morning session Jacob Crane, assistant administrator of USHA, said the authority must reduce Federal subsidies to a minimum of $7 to $9 per family per month.

Other problems being faced by the USHA, he said, are simplifying administration, integrating projects with general city building plans, advancing design technique, increasing knowledge of management and expanding the present program to rural housing.

Resolutions Adopted

Other speakers at the morning session were F. C. Palmer, of Atlanta; N. H. Dosker, Louisville; Allan Harrison, New York, and Sam Howell, Omaha.

Cooperative housing was discussed at a luncheon meeting by Allan Harrison, New York; E. R. Bowen, Cooperative League of America; Dr. Edith Elmer Wood; Ira S. Robbins, New York; Herbert E. Evans, Consumer Distribution Corporation, and LeRoy Bowman, Cooperative Housing Federation.

The conference adopted resolutions indorsing the Wagner-Steagall bill; urging appointment of a rural housing commission; urging State governments to copy New York's action and set up their own housing authorities; favoring public loans, but not subsidies, for cooperative housing projects for the middle income group, and opposing a move in Congress to exclude aliens from public housing projects.

Hi-Yo Silver! Board of Trade 'Cowboys' Plan Annual 'Feed'

'Jedge' Gosnell Fines the Boys a Mile Of Dimes as They Whoop It Up in Kangaroo Court; Donkey Pepper Unseats Rodeo Hero

The Board of Trade's midwinter dinner committee went western last night with a wild and woolly kangaroo court directing the final organization meeting for the annual dinner February 3.

As they worked on plans for the dinner, which will be staged in the setting of the "Days of the Golden West," Washington's business men kept the "courtroom" filled with laughter despite the gavel pounding of the "cowboy jedge," Lawrence W. Gosnell, committee chairman.

The meeting room, on the second floor of the Star Building, was decorated in the best boom-town saloon manner, replete with sawdust carpet, gaudy paintings on the "barroom" wall, and a judge's bench, balanced upon four beer kegs. Thornton Owen, chairman of last year's dinner committee, added the final "ranch" touch by bringing his donkey, Pepper, to the party.

Joseph Monaghan, dressed in a green jockey shirt and white riding breeches, showed that the donkey was not merely a decoration by mounting Pepper. He hastily slid off, however, amid catcalls and good-natured jeers.

Candles poked in empty whisky bottles and a few lanterns provided illumination as the "midwinter dinner case" was tried. A. L. Shipe, plaid neckerchief about his throat, was prosecuting attorney. Fred A. Smith was sheriff; Edmund Carl, assistant sheriff, and Raymond Florance, recorder of deeds. "Fines" were dimes for the "Mile o' Dimes" drive. About 100 were contributed.

The meeting adjourned in a burst of song, accompanied by a three-man hill-billy band.

Religious Freedom Hailed At Incarnation Get-Together

Fathers and sons of Incarnation Lutheran Church last night were told that unrestricted public worship and public education are the pillars of the Nation.

In their annual get-together, they heard Gratz Dunkum, District School Board member, cite George Washington's Farewell Address in support of the importance of morality and religion in America's life.

The educator said the first President's emphasis on morality and religion was even of greater importance than his warning against foreign entanglements in the the same address. He added that "fathers and sons would do well to gather around those pillars."

As the function opened, the dads and lads listened to the invocation from the Rev. Henry Manken, their pastor, then stood at attention to pledge allegiance to the Flag.

After eating a meal prepared and served by the Woman's Guild of the church, the group heard John W. Martin, toastmaster and financial secretary of the congregation, introduce the guests.

Among them were Edward Folk, president of the Incarnation Men's Brotherhood, sponsors of the function; G. R. Moberley, 83, and his son, C. C. Moberley, 53, oldest father and son present, and others. Uniformed Boy Scouts of Troop 600, of the church, attended. George W. Freas was chairman of the banquet committee.

Rev. T. L. Coyle, Sherwood Pastor, Accepts Coast Call

The Rev. Thomas Law Coyle, pastor of the Sherwood Presbyterian Church, Twenty-second and Rhode Island avenue northeast, has accepted a call to the First Presbyterian Church San Diego, Calif. It is the largest church in that city.

MR. COYLE

Mr. Coyle will preach his farewell sermons tomorrow, speaking at 8:50 and 11 a. m. on "The God Above the Battle," and at 8 p. m. on "The Future." A farewell party will follow the evening service.

During his three-year ministry, Sherwood Church has made great strides, with 479 members added to the rolls, while the church school enrollment soared to 1,065. Six months after coming here, Mr. Coyle inaugurated a system of three Sunday services, which has proved popular.

Party Feb. 15 Will Benefit Blood Bank

Cooley-McCullough Legion Post to Sponsor Bridge And Other Games

Cooley-McCullough Post No. 22, American Legion, will hold its Children's Hospital blood bank benefit party at the Annapolis Hotel the night of February 15, Charles Kohen, commander, announced yesterday.

The hotel management has donated the use of its ballroom for the card party, said the post commander, and plans are being made for a large attendance. Bridge will be featured, he declared, adding that there will be other games to suit every taste.

Simultaneously C. E. Barron, president of the local unit of the American Bridge Association, announced that final arrangements for the unit's program in support of The Post-WJSV blood bank campaign will be made at a meeting Monday night. The date and place for the bridge party will be decided at that time, he said.

Another party announcement yesterday was that of the Herndon, Va., Order of Eastern Star, which has scheduled its benefit program for February 7. Mrs. Lottie Meyer is in charge of arrangements.

The Post, Station WJSV and the American Contract Bridge League, national sponsor of the "Have a Heart" campaign, invite all individuals and organizations interested in holding blood bank parties during St. Valentine's week, or thereabouts, to send their applications for heart-shaped tickets to The Washington Post.

The tickets may be paid for in advance or after the party has been held and the receipts are in the party host's hands. Checks should be made payable to "The Washington Post, Blood Bank Fund."

Anacostia Group Hits Arbitrary Parking Change

A resolution expressing resentment of action of the Traffic Advisory Council in recommending limited parking on Nichols avenue southeast without notifying the Anacostia Citizens' Association was adopted last night by that organization, meeting at Anacostia High School. Parking has been banned on the east side of Nichols avenue in the morning and on the west side in the afternoon.

Several commuications were referred to the citywide committee. One from the committee on civic affairs of the Federation of Churches urged a dispensary system for retail liquor sales. Another, from the District Firemen's Association, asked support in fighting personnel cuts. A proposal that a new bypass be constructed to link South Capitol street and Firth Stirling avenue also was referred to the committee.

A letter was received from the director of vehicles and traffic approving installation of a traffic light at Fourteenth street and Good Hope road. It pointed out, however, that lack of funds made erection of the light impracticable now.

Judge Landis Plans Baseball Reorganization

Czar Seeks To Clarify Club Deals

Offers Plan to 'Free' Help, Revolutionize Transactions Between Majors and Minors

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Jan. 26.—Kenesaw Mountain Landis, commissioner of baseball, offered today a plan that would revolutionize player transactions between major and minor league clubs.

Landis in a 3,000-word letter to all club owners proposed to clarify the situation resulting from his recent decision freeing 91 players from the Detroit Tigers' farm system.

It aims to establish for the players freedom of competition and the proper chance of advancement; for the clubs, equality of opportunity in acquiring players and for the minor leagues the assistance that they need and which critics of the recent Landis decision maintained are impossible without "farm" systems.

Merely A Suggestion

Landis' proposal is in no way an order to the club owners. In a brief preamble, the commissioner pointed out that his plan merely is a suggestion and a request is made upon all clubs, major and minor, to survey the proposal and submit views and suggestions as promptly as possible.

The commissioner has always regarded farm systems as "evil," and detrimental to the best interests of young ball players.

The fundamental objectives of the plan are:

1—The major and minor leagues to cooperate in acquiring, developand advancing players.

2—Clubs to acquire a player by no means except outright ownership—in other words, no player can be held on option.

3—Small minor league teams—classes B, C and D—to be granted cash subsidies each year.

4—All players in classes below the major leagues not sold by a deadline—Landis suggests Sept. 1 as the date—to be eligible for drafting by higher classification clubs each year.

The major points in the plan are listed as protection of interests of club owners, promotion of welfare of the players and secure their chance to advance or still and above all to warrant the public's confidence in baseball integrity and methods.

The most striking possibility in the plan is the demand that no player could be controlled by any club except through outright ownership that would end options and working agreements.

A Break for Players

Insistence is made that players "shall have the right to advance and remain in the highest classification of baseball service for which they are qualified," and that clubs "shall have equality of opportunity to obtain player strength on reasonable terms with no possibility of restrictions by competing clubs to control players at the source of supply"—meaning the minors.

Landis proposed that a fund be established, by the major leagues, to grant cash subsidies of $1,000 annually to each class D league team, $1,500 to each class C league team, and $2,000 to teams in class B leagues. The fund for the subsidies would not be completely exhausted each year since each club would pay back its subsidy out of the proceeds of its player sales.

For example, a class B team selling players would turn the first $2,000 back to the subsidy fund and retain the balance. To cover shrinkage when clubs fail to realize their subsidy from sales the major leagues would make contributions each year. All baseball fines also would go into the subsidy fund.

Minors Ask Year to Get Rules Clear

By the United Press

Durham, N. C., Jan. 26.—President W. G. Bramham of the National Association of Minor Leagues tonight asked Commissioner K. M. Landis to suspend prohibitions for 1940 against phases of baseball's farm system contained in Landis' seven-point bulletin issued January 15.

Since release of the bulletin, Bramham said, major and minor leagues have been fogged as to their farm operations for the coming season.

He said his request would relieve the condition for 1940 and enable both majors and minors to work out suitable substitute farm plans which would meet Landis' approval.

His message to Landis said he was making the request because of the late date of Landis' bulletin, which came after many agreements and contracts for 1940 had been entered into.

Bramham, virtual "czar" of minor league baseball, promised Landis his "assurance and guarantee to you that every thoughtful consideration will be given to your recommendation for a substitute for the working agreement plan."

Under his assurances, Bramham said, and because of the hardship imposed on clubs and parks by the January 15 date, "I urge you to agree to suspension of operation of prohibitions under your seven-point bulletin for the 1940 season."

Since Landis' bulletin was made public, the St. Louis Cardinals have recalled working agreements with ten minor league teams and the New York Yankees have recalled agreements with seven clubs.

Dates Set for Trotters

New York, Jan. 26 (U.P.).—The National Trotting Association set dates for the Grand Circuit today. The meeting at Good Time Track in Goshen, N. Y., is scheduled for August 12. The Hambletonian, feature of the meeting and richest trotting special in the country, will be run August 14.

Washington Pro Scores Sub-Par 69

Amazing Exhibition Of Putting Enables Him to Head Strong Field in Crosby Play

By the Associated Press

Del Mar, Calif., Jan. 26.—Cliff Spencer, a comparative "unknown" from Washington, D. C., putted his way to golf glory today by leading the first half of the field in the opening round of Bing Crosby's fourth annual $3,000 Pro-Amateur Open.

The tall, dark Capital pro, winding up his first try on California's winter golf circuit, turned in a 35-34—69 for the par 36-36—72 of the Rancho Santa Fe Country Club. The round was played under ideal weather conditions.

Spencer, from Beaver Dam Club in the Capital, led because of his phenomenal putting. He sank a 15-footer on the sixth, a 30-footer on the sixteenth and one of almost 20 yards on the seventeenth. He missed a chance for a 68 when his approach on the last hole hit the rim of a hill and rolled back into a divot. He had five birdies.

Coffey Ties For Third

Rut Coffey, of Winchester, Va., tied with five others for third position with a 35-36—71, scoring three birdies and two bogies.

With many of the tournament stars, such as National Open Champion Byron Nelson, Jimmy Demaret, Horton Smith and Lawson Little, scheduled to play their first round of the 36-hole event tomorrow, Spencer finished one stroke in front of three others going into the final 18 holes Sunday.

Just back of Spencer were Lloyd

This Morning

Without Shirley Povich

(While Shirley Povich is on vacation his column will be written by various members of the Sports staff.)

By Walter Haight

It is getting so that a fellow can't whistle a tune without somebody saying that's so-and-so's theme song. The radio is responsible. It blasts theme songs for soaps, coughdrops, hair tonic, second-hand autos. In fact it is getting so that when father gets out the stick to do some tanning, Junior ups and says, "Just a minute, Pop. Wait until I sing my theme song." Whereupon Junior sounds off with the strains of "Who's Afraid of the Big Bad Wolf."

HAIGHT

Then there's "Hail to the Redskins." Under Jack Espey's direction, this theme song for the pro football team blistered some of the town's best tonsils. Grandmas and tiny tots, who didn't know a football from an electric razor, were "Hailing to the Redskins" with all their might a few months ago.

Now comes Joe Holman, publicity man for everything but the United States Front of Washington Starlings, with a theme song. Joe, the man-mountain of local news circles, probably figured that if Espey, an ant hill in comparison to him, could get "Hail to the Redskins" on the tips of all tongues then he could make the town swallow a theme song on the Washington Eagles.

Holman, who has published a book of his verses, parked his huge frame in front of a typewriter and came up with his Eagles theme song:

First Stanza.

Some birds spread wings and fly
Up toward the distant sky
But there's another kind, we find
That keep o • spirits high
They're birds of sleet and snow
The fastest birds we know
Let's wish them lots of luck
They're ice birds of the puck.

Second Stanza.

Some birds come with the spring
In Magic May they sing
But we rejoice, and make our choice
From hardy birds that bring
Glad tidings with the cold
They're holiest of the bold
We cheer the most their pluck
These ice birds of the puck.

First Chorus.

Here come the Eagles
Skimming o'er the ice
Swift striding Eagles
Birds of paradise
Fine feathered Eagles
Washington's delight
Staunch and steady, always ready
Out to win tonight.

Second Chorus.

Here come the Eagles
Fired with will to win
Game, gallant Eagles
Royal, loyal men
Fine, fearless Eagles
Full of fire and fight
Men of muscle, lots of hustle
Out to win tonight.

Now it's up to somebody to write a theme song for the Washington Ball Club. How about, "Salute, Fighting Nats to You; Nine Men Tried and True." Then we might go on with "Throw that ball; Field that ball; Hit that ball." Of course, Clark Griffith couldn't have a hundred Indians all over the field a la George Marshall. However, he could get a dozen Senators to run around chased by swarms of gnats. At any rate, it's an idea.

Believing that everybody and everything in sports should have a theme song, I'm suggesting the following:

Clark Griffith—"Im Sorry Dear, So Sorry Dear, There'll Be No Dividend This Year."

Bucky Harris—"Give Me Another Pitcher, Give Me a .400 Hitter and Leave the Rest to Me."

Judge Landis—"You Can't Pull the Wool Over My Eyes."

Detroit Tigers—"How're We Going to Keep Them Down on the Farm."

Goldie Ahearn—"I Picked a Lemon in the Garden of Glove."

Washington Fight Fan—"All Alone, I'm So All, All Alone."

Bill Bennings—"Once in the Dear Dead Days Beyond Recall, I Had a Winner."

Heinie Miller—"Parade of the Wooden Soldier."

Golden Glove Novice—"Maw, He's Making Black Eyes for Me."

Arch McDonald—"I'm Coming Home, Never to Roam."

Riverside Stadium—"While the Cigarettes Were Burning."

District Bookies—"Get Out of Town Before It's Too Late."

Steve Mamakos—"I Get Along Without You Very Well, Phil Furr."

Sammy Snead—"When My Spoon Comes Over the Mountain."

Ben McCoy—"Pennies From Heaven."

Chicago U.—"I Used to Love Football But It's All Over Now."

Bob Addie—"It's a Sin to Tell a Lie."

Shirley Povich—"Way Down South in the Land of Cotton and Snow."

Race Fan—"Where, Oh Where Has My Little Dog Gone?"

Jimmies'—"The Boys Can't Even Roll Out the Barrel."

Astor Clarke—"Pin a Rose on Me."

Santa Anita—"It Isn't Raining Rain, It's Raining Violets."

Joe Turner—"Grunt, Grunt, Grunt—Well, All Right."

Pedro Montanez—"The Little Man Who Wasn't There."

Joe Holman—"Time on My Hands."

Jimmy Lake—"Somewhere a Voice Is Calling."

District Golfers—"Beautiful Snow, I'll Be Glad When You're Gone, You Rascal, You."

Art Brown—"Didn't Know What Time it Was."

McGill Boxers—"We Took Naps, South of the Border, Out Catholic U. Way."

C. U. Basketball Team—"Itasket, Itasket, When Will We Make a Basket?"

Babe Ruth—"Thanks For the Memory."

Andy Farkus—"After the Ball Was Over."

George Marshall—"I'm Forever Blowing Bubbles."

Jack Espey—"Yes, Yes, a Thousand Times Yes."

Ben Dulaney—"Carry Me Back to Old Virginny."

Reds Banagan—"Red Sails in the Sunset."

Tony Wakeman—"Sweet Sue."

Ann Hagner—"On the Sidewalks of Brooklyn, New York."

All of Us—"God Bless America."

Eastern Five 24-20 Winner Over Gonzaga

Three Quick Baskets In Last Two Minutes Net Tide Victory

A three-game losing streak, unprecedented in the last three years of Eastern High's cage history, was brought to a halt yesterday on the home court when the Tide rallied strongly for a 24-to-20 decision over Gonzaga.

The club that was consecutively beaten by Central, Roosevelt and Washington-Lee last week, thus achieved its second triumph of the season over the Purple. An earlier game ended, 36 to 31, in Eastern's favor.

Of all Eastern's powerful last-minute drives this year, yesterday's was by far the longest delayed. Three field goals it scored in the last two minutes of play to dig itself out of a 20-to-18 deficit and give the Purple its heart-breaking setback.

Bob Custer, Neil Craig and George Pigott scored in that order after the first six minutes had accounted for only 2 points. George Adriani rang up those on a set shot from the side, and until its hot streak Eastern players missed a total of at least 15 easy shots while they held Gonzaga to exactly no score.

It was a perfect replica of the previous Eastern-Gonzaga battle in that the Purple led at every quarter except the last. It was out front 6 to 4 after the first eight minutes, 14 to 11 at the half and 20 to 16 at the end of the third. Gonzaga never made a serious scoring threat in the last period, though it profited from the wildest set of shooting on Eastern's part this season.

The decision was a personal triumph for little Moe Shulman, veteran guard, who was all over the floor as he fought his team out of its losing stretch. He earned high-point honors of the game—7—but that hardly vouched for the brilliant all-around game he turned in. Gonzaga's Bob Mulvihill held high-scoring Bob Custer to only two field goals and managed for as many himself.

A peculiar twist was given the game by the fact Gonzaga scored not one foul goal. It had a chance for only two, however, Rice missing both shots allowed him on Custer's pushing in the third quarter.

Roosevelt, Wilson Win Interhigh Games

Riders Nose Out Western, 29-28; Presidents Beat Tech, 33-23, to Maintain Unbeaten Pace; 2,000 See Red Raiders' Late Rally Fall Short

By Bill Burnett

Two more foes were left gasping in the wake of Roosevelt and Wilson High cage teams last night as the brilliant interhigh duo continued its neck-and-neck race for the championship in a double-header at Tech gym.

Roosevelt, meeting a rugged and ready Western delegation, managed for a 29-26 victory with the blessing of the timekeeper's final gun, and the lightning attack of Wilson smashed Tech, 33-23.

The largest scholastic crowd of the current season, estimated at 2,000, watched the winners keep their undefeated interhigh records intact. Roosevelt clinging to the top spot by virtue of having played one more game than the Presidents. It was Western's second defeat in three games and Tech's third.

Riders Extended

Roosevelt's razor-thin victory over Western was the most exciting of the evening, though Wilson turned in a better game than either of the first-mentioned. The Riders were pushed to the limit throughout, and it took a lot of stalling plus George West's pair of points for them to win.

Behind a 25-to-19 edge going into the final period, the Red Raiders staged one of their customary rallies tot pull within one point of their foe with a half-minute left. The score was 27 to 26. Then Irvin Schenker and Johnny Lumpkin fouled West in succession and the stellar towhead made both shots good. Five points by spindley Hal Mitchell featured Western's near-successful rally and Jimmy Karas contributed the other two-pointer.

At the half, Roosevelt held a 17-to-15 margin, but it took a comeback to get that. After the first quarter it trailed, 11 to 8. A total of 19 fouls was called—somewhat slowing proceedings—but the game was interesting to the end.

West, Travis Get Seven

For the first time in its titleward march the Riders split points fairly evenly. West and Ernie Travis had seven each. Hymie Perlo eight and Dick Goodman five. Ten points by Mitchell paced Western's attack, and Schenker turned in eight.

In flattening Tech, the white-clad Wilsonites indicated they will be a hard club to take when the interhigh round robin tournament rolls around. Several players who have merely promised big things to date finally stepped out and delivered.

Best of these was flashy Bart Fug-

Rally Allows St. John's to Win, 33 to 30

With the lead changing hands like a hot potato, St. John's stepped out in the closing minutes to take a hard-fought 33-30 game from Anacostia High in the gymnasium across Eastern Branch. St. John's used only six players while Anacostia kept freshmen going into action. However, the home club was unable to stop St. John's scoring twins, Cady and Corrado, who between them accounted for 27 points. Each had five field goals.

St. John's emerged from the first half with a lead of 17-14 but Anacostia came back from the rest period to go to the front. With three minutes to play, Anacostia was ahead, 26-25, only to have the Vermont avenue boys come through with the late punch that earned them the decision.

Colonial Five Invades Point To Play Cadets

G. W. Faces One of Hardest Tests in Army Encounter

The George Washington University basketball team meets one of its stiffest tests of the season this afternoon, risking its six-game winning streak in a game with strong Army at West Point.

The Soldiers, conquerors of Princeton and Cornell within the last two weeks, are just beginning to hit their stride and are confident of halting the Colonials who have averaged 50 points a game while winning eight of ten starts.

The George Washington squad left yesterday evening and was to spend the night at Hudson and then move on to the site of the game today. This game is the feature of Army's weekly sports program which also will include indoor polo, ice hockey, swimming and boxing and wrestling.

Del-Hud Five Beats Bantam-Press, 67-37

In a final tune-up prior to tonight's game with United Typewriters, the powerful Delaware & Hudson tossers turned back Bantam-Press in a second-half Heurich Amateur Basketball League game at Heurich gymnasium, 67 to 37.

Gerald Burns scored 21 points and Akky Viana 16 for the winners.

Hoya Quintet Faces Loyola Of Baltimore

President's Birthday Funds to Benefit From Game at Tech Gym

No matter what the outcome of the game, the President's Birthday Fund for Infantile Paralysis will be a 100 per cent winner tonight when Georgetown University's basketball team plays host to Loyola of Baltimore at Tech Gym.

Every cent realized from the game, scheduled for 8:30, will be turned over to this worthy charity. A 7 o'clock preliminary will bring together the Georgetown Frosh and Loyola's fledglings.

The Loyola Greyhounds, as they are called, are reported to have a rangy club including many of the players who held the Hoyas to a three-point margin of victory last year and will rule at least an even choice tonight.

Star of the invading team is Capt. Eddie Barzak, a junior forward who twice has been honored with a berth on the All-Maryland State five.

Also important in Loyola's offense are 6-foot 5-inch Walt Cummings and 6-foot 1-inch Vin Brook who is considered the best ball handler on the squad.

A revised Georgetown line-up will take the floor tonight in an effort to snap their five-game losing streak. Sophomore Jim Geibel returns to center; Al Lujack will start at forward instead of center and George Pajak shifts from forward to guard. The other starters will be Buddy O'Grady, at forward, and Irving Rizzi, at guard.

Benched by the shakeup is Capt. and Forward Johnny Schmitt. Schmitt and Don Martin, number one reserve, will see considerable action.

Ty Cobb (the Golfer) Just a Shrinking Violet

Former Battler of Majors Refuses to Face Golf Gallery

Del Mar, Calif., Jan. 26 (AP).—D. Scott Chisholm, perennial announcer at California golf tournaments, stood on the first tee before hundreds at the Bing Crosby tournament today and bawled:

"And now I'd like to present America's baseball idol of all time—the one and only Tyrus Raymond Cobb—come out, Ty."

Hidden behind a post, embarrassed as a kid with a patch in his pants was Cobb. He edged out by the kilt-costumed Scotty as it it might be his first public appearance, bowed, chewing furiously on a long, unlighted cigar, and promptly faded back into the crowd.

"Speech, speech," demanded Scotty, and the man who wrote baseball history with his flying spikes lost no time bobbing further back into the crowd. "Aw, no, never," he grinned. "I'm no speaker."

Cobb, making one of his rare trips away from his home in northern California, near San Francisco, is playing in the tournament, his first round tomorrow. He's teamed with Benny Hogan, the former Fort Worth, Tex., pro now from White Plains, N. Y.

In an informal ceremony this morning—with a wide grin—he accepted the "presidency" of the "Has-Been Association." "It's an honor," he announced.

Bob Elliott Signs Pittsburgh Contract

Pittsburgh, Jan. 26 (AP).—Young Bob Elliott of Piaster City, Calif., new Pirate outfielder who batted .333 in 32 major league games last season, today became the club's twenty-third player to enroll for 1940. Elliott skyrocketed from Louisville, of the American Association, to Toronto, of the International League, and finally to big time baseball within the 1939 season. In 161 games in three leagues he batted .323.

Movie of Olympic Games to Be Shown at Belasco

The first public showing in America of the film "Olympia" will be held at the Belasco Theater Friday, February 2. It is scheduled for a four-week run.

Washington has been selected as the site of this premiere because of the international scope of the picture of athletic events in which 51 nations participated at the 1936 Olympics in Berlin.

Fifty-two cameramen shot the film, turning in more than 1,110,000 feet of negative. Even though considerably trimmed, the picture still runs almost two hours.

A percentage of the receipts from the picture, which deals largely with the feats of the Finns who finished second to this country in the team race, will be donated to the Finnish Relief Fund.

Maryland U. Boxers Slight Favorites Over C. U. Tonight

Terps' Light Fighters Give Them Edge

LaFond Is Confident Despite Absence of 3 Stars for Clash At Brookland Gym

The University of Maryland will be a slight favorite over Catholic University tonight in their sixth annual dual boxing match at Brookland Stadium, but there is scant betting on the Terrapins by those who know the history of this dog-eat-dog ring series. The first bout is scheduled for 8:15 o'clock.

Although not worse than an even choice in any year, Maryland has not made C. U.'s mitten slingers cry "Uncle" since their first meeting in 1935. Meanwhile the Cards have captured two matches and two have finished in 4-4 ties.

Counting heavily in Maryland's favor in this match is the weakened condition of the C. U. squad, which will be without three of its best punchers because of ineligibility. Capt. Fred Stant, Joe Bunsa and Jay Turner, a trio of terrific punchers, will be on the bench in deference to the three-year varsity competition rule.

LaFond Is Confident

C. U. Coach Eddie LaFond, well known for his ability to pop up with the unexpected, is strangely confident of victory, and the reason for his optimism is said to be the fine showing of the boys he has developed to substitute for the benched stars.

John Tedder, at 135 pounds; Bob Viner, at 155 pounds, and Joe Carrig, at 175 pounds, replacing Bunsa, Stant and Turner, respectively, have all displayed definite signs of promise, especially Carrig, lanky football end, whom Coach LaFond calls a great national prospect.

On paper, the Terps figure to sweep the three lighter classes. C. U.'s only probable winner in these classes is Featherweight Lenny Bartone, who beat his opponent, Bob Bradley, on a hairline verdict last year. Moving into the heavier divisions, the Cards should have at least a 50-50 chance of taking the 155-pound, 165-pound and heavyweight bouts.

Middleweights Featured

Feature bout of the card should be the middleweight engagement of C. U.'s Gerry Strang and Maryland's Newton Cox. Strang won a very close and hard-fought decision over the Terrapin who went on to become Southern Conference champion at his weight.

C. U. Blames Exaggeration On McGill U.

Denying charges that its publicity office intentionally exaggerated the ability of the McGill University boxing team, Catholic University last night announced it would make photostatic copies of a press release allegedly sent it by the Montreal school.

Charges that C. U. had falsely built up the invading fighters as Canadian intercollegiate champions cropped up after the match Saturday night which the Cardinals won, 7-1. Five of the highly touted Canadians were knockout victims.

A copy of the press release said to have been received from McGill will be forwarded to the school because an editor of the McGill Daily, a student publication, wrote The Post in protest of publicity "grossly unfair" to McGill.

The student-editor, S. H. Durn, said in his letter to Shirley Povich, Post sports columnist, that McGill had sent out no publicity claiming that its team was Canadian Intercollegiate champion or that it boasted individual titleholders in four divisions.

In closing his letter Dunn said he believed some sort of an explanation of the "fiasco" should be forthcoming because the one-sided result of the fight made McGill "a laughingstock in Washington."

The press release in question describes two of the members of the McGill team as former Canadian intercollegiate champions; one as "Montreal Junior Champion" and still another as "Hallhousie University College champion before coming to McGill.

No mention is made of McGill as a former or preesnt Canadian team champion.

Gallaudet Five Beaten, 48-36, By Shepherd

Playing "bang-up" game of basketball, Blair Smith's Gallaudet courtmen, hampered by injuries, lost a tough game to Shepherd College basketers, of Shepherdstown, W. Va., last night at Kendall Green before a packed gym, 48-36.

The Blues led the visitors in the first period, 10-7, but were nosed out as the game progressed. At half, the score stood in favor of Shepherd, 20-15. From then on the West Virginian Mountaineers took advantage of their lead and started piling up point after point. Sloppy play was the chief factor in keeping the Blues from scoring.

Lally and Ambrose were high scorers of the evening with 21 and 16 points, respectively. "Ducky" Dulek and Hal Weingold paced the losers, the former getting 13 markers and the latter 9.

Terps Defeat N. C. State Quintet, 43-36

Maryland, Led by Mondorff, Rallies To Win League Game

By the Associated Press

Raleigh, N. C., Jan. 26.—Maryland's Old Liners defeated N. C. State's Red Terror, basketballers in a Southern Conference game tonight, 43 to 36.

The Terrors tallied first, after a scoreless five minutes, but then Pershing Mondorff, veteran Maryland guard, who was the individual star of the game, sparked his team in a drive which put the Terrapins in the lead, 19 to 8, after 17 minutes. State rallied to ring 6 points and the half ended 19 to 14.

Mondorff and his company kept their 5-point margin until midway the last period, and even stretched it by 2 points, but then Ray Smith and Roy Gromartie hit the hoop three times in 50 seconds, to leave Maryland on top by 1 point, 33 to 32.

Mondorff, who had an eagle eye on the basket from near midfloor, looped in a long one and the visitors were off again, never to be headed.

Howell and Aide Retained at Tempe

Tempe, Ariz., Jan. 26 (AP).—Arizona State Teachers College at Tempe said tonight an agreement had been reached with Millard (Dixie) Howell, head football coach, and Hillman Walker, his assistant, for their services for the 1940-41 school year.

Garfield A. Goodwin, chairman of the Tempe School Board, said Howell, who guided the Bulldogs to a Border Conference championship last fall, had been given a "substantial" salary increase. He declined to name the figure.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Jan. 26.—Joe Louis may be the greatest heavyweight champion we've ever had. Or just the best of a bad lot. You'll never be able to tell. But one thing seems definite about him, in any comparison with the greats of the past. He's certainly the lonesomest.

The other night at the Armstrong-Montanez fight Louis spent a half hour in the vast lobby of the Garden. He was unmistakable, for in addition to the fact that everyone knows his somber face, he was the best dressed man in the joint. Many of the 19,000 persons at the fight walked past him, and a vast majority of those who saw him muttered, in an awed way, to their friends and passed on.

CONSIDINE

"Lookit," they'd mumble. "There's Joe Louis."

It was rarely "h'ya, Joe?" or even, "can I have your autograph?" and it was never "hello, champ."

The champion almost seemed to feel it, though if he owns emotions he has always been able to mask them. Diffidently he answered a few questions a sportswriter or two asked of him. He weighed 205 . . . he felt good . . . he'd come in (against Godoy) at 202 . . . he couldn't say how long the fight would last . . . he chuckled a little softly when some writer commented on his necktie.

Maybe Joe Enjoys His Loneliness

Then he moved away. Joe made a tour of the lobby, looking intently at the pictures of the by-gone greats.

And the people went past him.

A few minutes later these same people gave him a thunderous ovation when Harry Balogh introduced him. But the roar quickly subsided when he climbed out of the ring and took his place in the audience, and when he walked out after the fight he was ignored even by those who brushed against him.

Perhaps he doesn't even notice it, or is even grateful that he isn't being subjected to the kind of lionization that has made furtive hermits of a lot of our public heroes. But we doubt it.

Louis has heard of the way that Sullivan . . . Corbett . . . Johnson . . . and Dempsey were the lions of their time. Even the surly champs, the crowd-haters or mob-shunners like Jeffries, Willard, Tunney and Sharkey, got more notice and more adulation than Joe. Probably old Har' Wills did, too, for he was a glib and imaginative man.

A Billion to One Didn't Worry Him

For all his established superiority, you don't hear Louis called "champ," or "the champ." Somehow the name doesn't fit him, though the honor certainly does. Between fights his name rarely finds its way into the papers.

It has been estimated in Make Jacobs' office that only between 10 and 15 per cent of the audiences at his fights is colored. Per capita wealth has something to do with that, of course, but not that much to do with it.

Louis should be more of a public curiosity than he is, if for no other reason than that he is a symbol of America's favorite story, the success yarn. He came up from revolting privation, a billion to one shot to make good, and tonight he sleeps in an old home at Pompton Lakes, N. J., wherein Gen. Washington is supposed to have spent some time. He has a fortune and those close to him have been given security, their wildest dreams, back in Alabama days, could not have pictured. He has been the most fearless champion since Jeffries, never had a fixed fight, never barred a challenger, never did an unsportsmanlike thing in the ring, never fought a dull fight and never will.

But he was alone and lonely the other night. He always is.

Marion Miley Wins Punta Gorda Tourney

Punta Gorda, Fla., Jan. 26 (AP).—Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., turned back Clara Callender, of Long Beach, Calif., 2 and 1, over the 36-hole route today to win the annual Punta Gorda Women's tournament. Grigor Scores Winning Goal; Ripley Also Is Big Factor in Scoring

By the Associated Press

Atlantic City, N. J., Jan. 26.—The Baltimore Orioles nosed out the Atlantic City Sea Gulls, 4 to 3, in an Eastern Amateur Hockey League game tonight.

The victory enabled the Orioles to advance two points on the league-leading New York Rovers, who went down to a 5-3 defeat at Washington.

George Grigor scored the goal that finally decided the issue after 7 minutes and 41 seconds of the third period.

Carl Ripley scored twice for Baltimore in the first period, once unassisted and again on passes from Grigor and Jack Dyte.

Hazen McAndrew put the Sea Gulls back in the game by scoring twice in the second period, the first time in 59 seconds on a pass from Alf Webster, and again in 4:29 on a pass from Phil Vitale. The Orioles went ahead again on Norm Calladine's unassisted goal in 11.07.

Grigor then gave the Orioles a two-goal bulge with his goal in the third period. Norm Tustin scored on passes from Norm Burns and Ed Benchley in the same period.

Wilson Alumni Defeated, 36,33, By Varsity Five

Using 11 players, the Wilson Teachers' varsity five turned back the school's Alumni last night by a count of 36-33, despite some fancy shooting by Phil Fox, now a coach at Eastern High. Fox dropped in seven field goals and a foul for 15 points to top all scorers. In fact, the game was decided at the free-throw mark. The Alumni made 15 field goals to the Varsity's 14, but the latter sunk 8 fouls to 3 for the Grads. Clark's 11 points led the winners.

Eagles Rally, Defeat Leading Rovers, 5-3

D. C. Hockey Team Breaks 3-3 Tie To Beat New Yorkers

By Jack Munhall.

The only penalty the New York Rovers suffered last night was a costly one, for the Washington Eagles capitalized on a banished player's absence to score the winning goal in the third period for a 5-to-3 victory at Riverside Stadium.

A crowd of 2,000 saw Mike Germann, Washington wing, ram in the decisive score at 18:2? as Julie Sawchuck, of the Rovers, sat in the penalty box for interference. Just before the final whistle the Eagles added a superfluous point when Roy Covert stole the puck away from the frantic New Yorkers and went all the way for an unassisted goal.

The victory left Washington 4 points behind the league-leading Rovers and tied for second place with Baltimore Orioles who defeated Atlantic City last night, 4-3. Rovers have 41 points, and the Eagles and Orioles 37 each.

Two Players Injured

Two players, Goalie Gordon Lee, of Washington, and Howie Hollinger, of the Rovers, suffered slight injuries in scrimmages around the nets. Lee received a cut on the inside of his mouth when he collided with a goal post in the first period, and Hollinger was badly shaken up in a similar accident early in the last period.

Lee continued in the game after first-aid treatment, but Hollinger did not reappear on the ice after he ran into the post, striking his left arm and shoulder a stunning blow.

Even the heated action of the match, one of the fastest and cleanest of the season here, could not make the fans forget the cold. The official temperature in the press box was 26 degrees. In one corner of the stands it was computed at 17 degrees.

Protests Plentiful

After 40 minutes of good, fast hockey marked by constant protest of the officiating by the Eagles, who disputed the Rovers' first and fifth goals, the teams were tied up at 3-3 going into the final period.

The clever visitors got away to a 2-0 lead in the opening period. The Eagles tied it at 2-2 early in the second stanza, fell behind at 3-2 and then deadlocked the count again just before the close of the period.

Davies, veteran Washington defense, drew a 10-minute misconduct penalty from Referee Bill Chadwick in the second period when he protested that New York's fifth goal should have been disallowed because Mike Pechet, the scorer, was off-side on the play. Davies previously had argued with Referee Chadwick on New York's first point, claiming that Bud Foley, who scored, kicked the puck in the net.

Burrage scored the Eagles' first and fifth markers, the first coming on a spectacular shot from just inside the New York blue line and the second from close by.

Virginia Boxers Clash With Carolina Tonight

Varsity Battles May Draw 5,000; Frosh Bouts in Afternoon

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 26.—Varsity and freshman boxing teams of the Universities of Virginia and North Carolina renew their rivalries here tomorrow afternoon and night in the first of the State's most colorful collegiate sports event for the 1940 season.

Memorial Gymnasium is expected to house a crowd of 3,000 for the afternoon freshman bouts, starting at 3 o'clock, and reverberate from an excited audience of some 5,000 at 8 o'clock when the varsity boxers clash in the sixteenth of the dual meet series.

The referee for both meets is Allie Wolff, formerly intercollegiate champion several times from Penn State, who is now coaching boxing at Cornell.

North Carolina and Virginia varsity swimming teams also meet here tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Cavalier Line-up Same

Coach Johnny LaRowe's Cavalier varsity line-up is due to carry over intact from last week, when the team he rebuilt made an impressive start at Blacksburg with a 7 to 1 victory over Virginia Tech.

Backed by two previous meets, a 4 to 4 tie with Citadel and a 7 to 1 triumph over North Carolina State, Carolina will present its ace, Billy Winstead, in the opening 120-pound bout against Joe Block, who made his varsity debut last week. Winstead holds the Southern Conference title for his division.

Arthur LipKint, Virginia's sophomore 127-pounder, is slated to face John Johnston, a Tarheel beginner, and Peter Coy, another highly prized Cavalier sophomore, probably will be matched with Jimmy Inskeep, a veteran of only one varsity meet.

145-Pound Bout a Natural

Looming as one of the highlights is the 145-pound duel between Virginia's Dick Williams and Ed Dickerson, both of whom are seasoned campaigners. Truman Southall, Virginia captain, has a well-qualified foe in Clark Bartlett for his 155-pound event, and another thriller is promised in the 165-pound match between Virginia's Fenton Somerville and Elden Sanders, Southern Conference finalist last year and undefeated in the current season's two meets.

Two Carolina footballers, Mike Bobbitt, light-heavyweight, and Gates Kimball, heavyweight, are the foes for Kenneth Rathbun, Virginia's sophomore light-heavyweight and Ed Burgers, whose varsity heavyweight experience is limited to last week's meet.

Central Five Bows, 44-43, To Md. Cubs

The University of Maryland freshman basketball team defeated Central High School, 44-43, at College Park yesterday in a game decided in the last 10 seconds of play by a basket by Center Irving Gordy.

The Little Terrapins were leading at the end of each of the eight-minute quarters but Central also held the advantage at various times.

The score at half favored Maryland, 24-23.

Friends Beat Baltimore's Latin Quintet

Sidwell Outfit Scores A 39-32 Victory; Newmeyer Sets Pace

Sidwell Friends' basketball team won its first game of the season yesterday, 39 to 32, at the expense of the Boys Latin five of Baltimore, at the Friends' gym.

Armand Newmeyer sparked the victors with his brilliant play. He tallied 12 baskets and 3 free tosses to lead both teams in scoring besides playing a fine floor game.

Forward Riepe of the visitors kept his club in the game with his 16 points. The home team employed the man to man defense while Boys Latin used the zone.

Friends' led throughout the encounter and although the score was close the outcome never was in doubt.

Jacobs Offers Garcia Bout With Overlin

New York, Jan. 25 (AP).—Promoter Mike Jacobs today offered Ceferino Garcia, of Los Angeles, recognized in California and New York as the world's middleweight champion, a bout with Ken Overlin, of Norfolk, Va.

The fight, over a 15-round route, would be held here March 29, and Garcia's title would be at stake.

Greenberg Signs With Tigers, Agrees to Play in Outfield

'Out to Prove I'm Team Player,' Says Hank Over Phone

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Jan. 26.—Big Hank Greenberg, Detroit Tiger first baseman since the 1933 season, today accepted contract terms for 1940—in the role of an outfielder.

The 29-year-old slugger announced the decision here after conferring by telephone with Tiger Owner Walter O. Briggs, who is wintering at Miami Beach, Fla. He said that "club officials feel that the club will be strengthened if I play one of the outfield positions."

If Greenberg is able to make the change—and he expressed confidence that he would be a success as an outfielder—Rudy York will move to first base and George Tebbetts will be installed as first string catcher.

That arrangement may solve a problem that long has vexed Manager Del Baker and Gordon (Mickey) Cochrane before him. Both Greenberg and York are long-range sluggers, and both are first basemen. York has done considerable catching for Detroit but never looked his best there. He also has played the outfield.

Terms of Greenberg's contract were not made public, but the Bronx Belter appeared well satisfied. Greenberg is one of baseball's highest salaried players.

In a former statement, Greenberg said in part:

"I have been accused of being an individualist, but Del Baker and the club officials feel the club will be strengthened if I will play one of the outfield positions. I am going to show everyone I am a team player by going along with their ideas and feel confident that I will be a success as an outfielder.

"I owe much to the fans of this great baseball city and they can be assured I will be giving my best efforts at all times."

That remark that "I owe much to the fans" was generally interpreted as a gesture to placate Detroiters after a recent statement in which Greenberg declared he was mystified by the jeers he received at Briggs Stadium last season.

Inscoelda Wins at Hialeah; Mythical King Is Disqualified

Filly Wins First Race Since 1938

Stewards Deliberate 15 Minutes Before Awarding Purse to Woolf's Inscoelda

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 26.—A disqualification marred the feature event here this afternoon. B. F. Whitaker's Mythical King, a stakes winner in 1938 but unsuccessful since, finished first by a half length in the Opa Locka Purse, but after more than 15 minutes' deliberation, the stewards ordered the gelding's number down and the purse awarded to Herbert M. Woolf's filly, Inscoelda, the $6.40 for $2 favorite. The latter also had gone winnerless since scoring in the Walden Stakes at Pimlico late in 1938.

Ken Kling's Balloter received the place and Lewin Stable's Buttermilk the show.

Inscoelda tried to come through on the rail around the bend leading to the stretch. Ambrose Light was next to the filly, with Mythical King on the outside. The latter, piloted by Albert Schmidl, apparently came in, forcing Ambrose Light to block Inscoelda.

Mythical King then drew away, but Paul Ryan brought Inscoelda along on the outside in the stretch drive and his mount was catching the leader with every stride at the end. Balloter trailed Inscoelda by a length and a half.

The time for the 7-furlong test was 1:25 1-5, made over a fast track.

One of the highlights of the day came when Cave Hill, with Don Meade in the saddle, won the seventh race and paid $95.10 for a $2 straight ticket. Cave Hill had shown some early foot in his previous effort and won at Narragansett four races back. Meade kept the long shot well placed in the running, made his move entering the stretch and drove the G. L. Weiss' colorbearer first home by a head. Diabroom, another outsider, beat Sure Swift by a length and a half for the place.

Y. M. C. A. Defeats Navy Yard Marines

Paced by McGurk and O'Connell, Y. M. C. A. last night defeated the Navy Yard Marines, 52-39, in a fast and rough game on the "Y" court.

McGurk contributed 15 points, while O'Connell registered 12. High point honors of the night, however, were taken by Ware of the losers who banged in 18.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HANDIBOY, $11.20, $4.20, $3.20; ISAIAH, $2.80, $2.60; LINA'S SON, $4.10.

HANDIBOY forced a steady pace from the start, shook off ISAIAH in the final furlong and then was ridden out briskly to the finish. ISAIAH displayed the most speed, but hung when placed to a drive. LINA'S SON, slow to begin, closed an immense gap while saving ground. MISS MONOA raced under extreme pressure.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:31. Off 2:31½. Winner, A. J. Halliwell's b. g. CRUISING, in the thick of contention from the start, responded with determination when the final issue came and wore ELI YALE down. The latter displayed the most speed while saving ground, but faltered slightly when challenged. PRESIDENTIAL, away tardily, improved his position gradually on the extreme outside, but was unable to reach the leaders. DISCOBOLO had no excuses.

ROYAL MAN, displaying startling improvement, assumed command with rush and showed keen speed to always hold his opposition safe. JESSIE GLADYS gradually bettered her position on the outside and made a game effort, but could not get up. EQUILIBRIUM, hard ridden and prominent all the way, faltered when it came to a drive, yet outlasted THAT'S ME.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,100; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:31. Off 3:31½. Winner, King Farm's b. g. (4), by Pharamond II—Hello. Trained by M. Jolley. Value to winner, $775; second, $175; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:12⅘.

TIME PLEASE, outrun the first half mile, saved much ground entering the stretch, closed gamely to punishment and outgamed his opposition in the final drive. CENSOR, going well up on the outside of BRIGHT AND EARLY, in the early stages, was carried out by the latter entering the stretch, but continued gamely to set the place. BRIGHT AND EARLY bore out badly turning into the stretch and carried CENSOR, NEON LIGHT and ROY T. very wide.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DOUBLE B, $8.70, $4.80, $3.00; DOUBT NOT, $38.70, $10.80; DRAWSTRAWS, $2.80.

DOUBLE B, nearest in pursuit of the leader throughout, closed with determination through the stretch and got up in the last strides. DOUBT NOT showed high speed while saving ground and held on tenaciously when challenged, but faltered right at the end. DRAWSTRAWS, away slowly, was rated off the leaders until straightened into the stretch, came with a belated rush on the outside and was probably best.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—INSCOELDA, $6.40, $3.70, $3.20; BALLOTER, $3.70, $3.20; BUTTERMILK, $4.30.

MYTHICAL KING, going in improved form, followed the pace closely on the outside, bore in on the stretch turn forcing AMBROSE LIGHT into INSCOELDA, causing both to pull sharply and then drew away. Claim of foul was lodged and allowed. INSCOELDA, going in the front when crowded back, came again when clear and should have won. BALLOTER, rated off the pace, closed going strong. BUTTERMILK finished stoutly.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-quarter miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:11. Off 5:11½. Winner, G. L. Weiss' ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CAVE HILL, $95.10, $36.50, $20.00; DIABROOM, $24.00, $13.50; SURE SWIFT, $7.10.

CAVE HILL gradually bettered his position after leaving the backstretch, responded with determination when the final issue came and outlasted DIABROOM. The latter worked his way up on the inside, assumed a brief lead through the stretch, but could not withstand the winner's bid. SURE SWIFT, outrun in the early stages, closed a big gap in the last quarter. UP AND UP finished strong.

C. & P. Tel. Co. Reports Local Phone Peak

Total of 254,042 in Service on December 31, Up 14,374 in Year

An all-time high of 254,042 telephones in service in the District of Columbia at the close of the year was reported yesterday by Lloyd B. Wilson, president of the Chesapake & Potomac Telephone Co., in the annual report of the board of directors. This figure represented an increase of 14,374 over 1938.

Gross additions for the extension and improvement of the company's plant in the District of Columbia for 1939 amounted to $5,600,000. Total cost of this plant at the end of 1939 amounted to $48,488,722. As an indication of the growth of the business, the report pointed out that expenditures for construction for the last three years have amounted to $17,371,334, which is equal to 43.5 per cent of the cost of all plants in service three years ago.

The report showed that operating revenues of the company in 1939 totaled $12,205,833, an increase of 7.3 per cent over the previous year. Total expenses amounted to $9,902,948, an increase of 6.5 per cent due larkely to increased wages and taxes. Operating taxes, which showed an increase of $152,274, or 13.9 per cent over 1938, amounted to $1,251,668.

Net Earnings Higher

Net earnings of the company for 1939 amounted to $2,302,885, or 4.95 per cent of the average cost of the plant in service. This compared with net earnings of 4.75 per cent of the average cost of the plant in service in 1938.

At the end of the year, the report disclosed, there were 3,584 employes, the total pay roll for 1939 amounted to $6,692,660, the highest average weekly pay in the history of the company.

Benefit payments to employes totaled $176,653. The company's plan for pensions, disability and death benefits has been in operation for 27 years. It was amended, effective January 1, 1940, to increase the period during which employes having 15 or more years of service will receive full pay for sickness and accident disability.

Local and long distance calls, the report showed, increased 10.6 per cent over the previous year with a total of 351,696,000 calls made. Completed long distance calls amounted to 3,269,000, an increase of 7 per cent. The average daily number of total calls per telephone was 4.32 as compared to 4.14 in 1938.

Commenting on the progress made during the year, Mr. Wilson pointed out that the quality of service was maintained at previous high levels and in certain respects improved. "Not only were there fewer complaints and criticism from our customers," he said, "but there was an increase in the number of commendatory letters to the company during the year expressing appreciation of the service."

Concluding the report, the directors commended all employes "for their efficiency and genuine devotion to duty" and thanked the people of Washington for "friendly cooperation throughout the year."

Cotton Closes Higher After Early Losses

New York, Jan. 26 (AP).—The cotton futures market drummed up buying enthusiasm today, despite depressing influences. Canceling early losses of as much as 10 points, final prices were 2 to 6 points up.

Lower Liverpool and Alexandria markets, which have been bellwethers for the local market lately, put prices down at the outset. Added to that was the bearish view taken of continued cold weather and snow in the Southern cotton belt, expected to benefit new crop development.

Still another potential depressant was talk of probable discontinuance of the export subsidy program, due to lack of funds.

Yet, after midday, selling was only in dribbles. With offerings scarce, the list easily responded to more active support from New Orleans and cooperative accounts.

Buyers of textiles, according to Worth Street reports, showed no inclination to take advantage of easy price trends.

Cottonseed Oil
Cottonseed oil futures moved forward today in line with steady cotton and security prices. The market closed unchanged to 4 points higher. Top gains were not fully maintained, however, as traders eyed the uncertain movement in lard, hogs and grains. Sales totaled 104 lots: March, 6.78; May, 6.90*; July, 7.01*; September, 7.06.

Crude oil was quoted nominally at 5⅛ cents a pound in the Southeast and valley and 5¾ cents in Texas.

Graham Paige Plans to Resume Auto Production

Detroit, Jan. 26 (AP).—Under a financing plan that will enable Graham Paige Motors Corporation to resume car production, the corporation has liquidated a large part of its obligations and provided a cash fund of $783,838, net working capital of $998,508 and a revolving fund of $500,000.

A loan of $2,000,000 and the $500,000 revolving fund commitment have been obtained from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Private sale of convertible notes has netted another $300,000.

The new financing has enabled Graham Paige to pay the $750,000 balance of a previous RFC loan, liquidate other liabilities and reduce its deficit from operations by $1,260,000.

It will repay its new obligations to the RFC starting August 12, next at the rate of $10,000 a month or 50 per cent of net earnings whichever is higher. If any balance remains unpaid on August 12, 1945, it will be refinanced.

Graham Paige, which had operating losses of $1,241,046 last year and $1,910,186 in 1938 already is placing orders for parts and materials for its new line of vehicles and is planning also to manufacture major parts for a new model by the Hupp Motor Co. It expects to get into production next month with final assemblies scheduled for early in March.

U. S. Idle Money Hits Record High

The Federal Reserve Board announced yesterday that the idle money in the Nation's banks had reached a new record high of $5,500,000,000—a potential credit base for $45,000,000,000 worth of loans.

The vast amounts of credit which could be extended from these stores of lendable excess reserves has caused the board several times in recent months to urge Congress to create special powers to combat the potential credit inflation.

Cotton Gain Offsets Slump Of Tobacco in War Exports

New York, Jan. 26.—Four months of war have caused some drastic changes in United States foreign trade, according to an analysis by Business Week published in today's issue. Certain exports which had been lagging during the first eight months of 1939 scored tremendous gains in the last four months; and some countries whose purchases from us had been declining through August, rushed into our markets for spectacular quantities of our goods before the end of the year.

Most spectacular of all these changes growing out of the war, from the point of view of value involved, is the disastrous slump in tobacco exports. Compared with $80,000,000 in the last 4 months of 1938, they were a bare $21,000,000 last fall. Britain's shift to Turkish tobacco as a part of her vigorous economic war campaign is mainly responsible for the sharp contraction in tobacco sales abroad, though many other countries have cut their tobacco consumption.

The jump in exports of raw cotton in the last four war months more than made up for losses on tobacco, however. Cotton exports for all of 1939 were only 1 per cent ahead of 1938; for the last 4 months they were up 78 per cent.

Farm products generally did badly under the first impact of war, with meat, lard, wheat, fruit and tobacco exports registering setbacks. Industrial raw materials and manufactured goods, on the other hand, made gains, some of them spectacular. Airplane exports, despite the effect of the embargo on shipments in September and October, more than doubled, and aluminum exports—mainly for the vast airplane industries of the Allies—jumped 227 per cent. Sole loss among this group was recorded by trucks, which did better before the war started than later.

Final Prices Are ¼ Higher to ¼ Lower Than Previous Day

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Jan. 26.—Uncertainty regarding two important wheat market factors—condition of the new crop and outcome of the 1939 loan program under which more than 160,000,000 bushels have been impounded—helped to stifle trading in grains here today.

Prices fluctuated nervously but developed some rallying power after dipping ¾-¾ cent to within ⅛ cent of the lowest levels since December 13. May wheat fell to 97⅞, equal to the January 13 low and with that exception the lowest since December 13. July and September fell to 95⅝ and 95⅛, within ⅛ of their January 12 lows. These prices were 10 to 12 cents below the season's highs.

Wheat closed ¼ lower to ¼ higher compared with yesterday's finish; May, 98⅝@98⅝; July, 96⅛@96¼. Corn unchanged; May, 57⅛@57¼; July, 57⅛. Oats, ⅛ off to ⅛ up. Rye unchanged to ½ higher, and lard unchanged to 5 lower.

Some buying which helped to lift wheat about ½ over previous closelevels at times was credited to Southwestern mills, but because of generally slow wheat and flour demand and virtually cessation of export trade this activity was unimportant. Railroad reports of improved crop prospects in some areas of the Southwest where snowfall has been heavy and prospects of slowly rising temperatures had a bearish effect.

Money Markets

Foreign Exchange
New York, Jan. 26 (AP).—The Canadian dollar dropped ¼ cent in terms of the U. S. dollar today. The break followed a call by the Canadian government for a national election to pass on the war policy of the current administration. In the European division of the foreign money market a loss of .05 of a cent in the Netherlands guilder was the outstanding change. Money experts still seemed a little puzzled over eventual results of the neutral country's plans to revalue its gold stocks. Sterling and the French franc inched forward while the belga lost .01 of a cent. Unchanged was the Swiss franc. Closing rates follow, Great Britain in dollars, other in cents:

Boston Wool Market

Boston, Jan. 27 (AP) (U. S. Department of Agriculture).—Domestic wools were mostly quiet on the Boston market today with quotations about steady compared with sales early in the week. A few sales were reported on good 12-month South American merino wools at around 95@96 cents, scoured basis, including the duty. Similar wools of about 10 months' growth were quoted around 90 cents, scoured basis, including duty, but demand was slow. Some new orders were being received on wool tops, but the volume was smaller than the business of last week.

Tire Shipments At Ten-Year Peak

New York, Jan. 26.—Influenced by heavy replacement sales, automotive pneumatic casing shipments during 1939 amounted to 56,975,044 units. This is 32.1 per cent above shipments during 1938 and represents the best year since 1929 when over 69,000,000 units were shipped according to statistics released today by the Rubber Manufacturers Association, Inc.

Replacement units shipped in 1939 are estimated at 37,536,608, an increase of 22.8 per cent above 1938 and were the highest since 1931.

New Financing $29,767,990 in Week

New York, Jan. 26 (AP).—New security issues sold to the public during the week ended yesterday amounted to $29,767,990, Poor's Publishing Co. reported today. It was the second successive week of relatively light volume.

Securities sold for the purpose of obtaining new money accounted for 38 per cent of the total. The remainder represented refinancing of existing debts.

Copper Cut Again; Now 11⅝ Cents

New York, Jan. 26 (AP).—A leading custom smelter reduced domestic refined copper ¾ of a cent a pound to 11⅝ cents today. It was the second downward revision in a week.

The latest price is the lowest since 11 cents a pound was quoted just at the outbreak of the war abroad. In early October the red metal was boosted to 12½ cents, highest in two years, where it held until January 18.

Chicago Livestock

Chicago, Jan. 26 (AP).—Moderately heavier than expected hog receipts, attracted by yesterday's price advance, today tumbled values as much as 25 cents, heavy kinds showing the most loss. Meager cattle supplies sold generally steady, but bids on lambs were 15 to 25 cents down in slow trade.

Lockheed Tells How Planes Are Delivered to Canada

By the Associated Press

Burbank, Calif., Jan. 26.—Robert E. Gross, president of Lockheed Aircraft Corporation, described today the manner in which his firm is delivering warplanes to the Canadian government.

"Lockheed Aircraft," he said, "has purchased for $5,000 a sizable piece of acreage on the northern outskirts of Pembina, N. Dak., adjoining the international boundary. It will be immediately converted into a modern airport with runways and the necessary hangar facilities, as the field is being used for the delivery of a fleet of Lockheed planes consigned to the Canadian government at Ottawa.

"The shipment consists of 18 bombers, part of 200 recently ordered by the British air ministry. Since the invocation of the neutrality act, eight of the group have been delivered.

"Method of delivery in all respects strictly complies with the existing neutrality ruling. A Lockheed crew, consisting of pilot and mechanics, flies each plane from Burbank to Pembina, with stops at Albuquerque, N. Mex., and Omaha, Nebr. At Pembina, a landing is made on the American side of the line, where title is passed and customs officers verify the transaction as in accordance with neutrality laws.

"The pilot then taxis the plane up to the border, where a Canadian representative attaches a tow line and hauls the plane across the boundary.

"Acting with the express permission of the United States State Department, the Lockheed pilot and mechanics then fly the airplane to Winnipeg, where it is turned over to the Royal Canadian Airforce, after which the American crew immediately returns to the United States.

"All of the flights by American pilots in Canada in connection with these deliveries have the approval of the United States State Department."

Lockheed said the Pembina Airdrome would be available to other American firms for similar purposes.

Prices Hold Within Narrow Range; Aviations Rally Briskly at Close; U. S. Treasury Bonds Lower

New York, Jan. 26.—The stock market continued to hold within the narrow range of recent sessions today but the close was slightly higher, thanks to some spirited bidding for aviation shares and good support for a miscellaneous group of manufacturing issues. Judged by the composite average the gain was only 0.03 point, which is nothing at all, but at least it signified that the decline of the previous day had been stemmed. Tradng continued dull, only 603,8895 shares changing hands on the big board.

Life in the aviation issues was connected with reports of foreign war purchases. A degree of firmness in the rails developed without the stimulus of special news developments. Current earnings reports, covering the month of December, supply good reading for rail observers. January results appear to be following the rise, but there is as yet no justification for saying that the rate of rise will be continued through the early months of this year.

Since the start of trading this year the trend of the market has been downward. This downward tendency has agreed with the trend of business, which, measured by the well-known weekly studies, has been showing a declining rate of activity. For the first time in several months the course of prices has agreed with the business trend.

It will be recalled that the final quarter of 1939 the production index of the Federal Reserve System rose sharply and the rate for December even exceeded the high established in the peak year of 1929. During this period prices on the stock exchange, with the exection of a short-lived bulge in early September, fluctuated within a narrow range well below even the 1937 values.

Favorable Business News Ignored

The narrowness and irregularity of the general market attracted the usual series of explanations ranging from political affairs to the declining trend in a few industries. Even some good earnings reports of corporations failed to dispel the apprehensions and induce activity in any important group of stocks other than the aviation issues and a few others specially benefited by known developments.

Among the uncertainties affecting the markets unquestionably are those of international trade under the deepening war economy of some of the best customers of the United States. It becomes increasingly clear, from day to day, that heavy Allied orders for airplanes and war materials may well stimulate some industries, but the limited gold and dollar resources possessed by Britain and France are being rationed in so far as other purchases are concerned. American tobacco, fruits and similar products are less in demand, while German buying naturally is cut off altogether.

Added to these disquieting developments for agricultural producers and various others is now the general question of trade between the United States and Japan. For the period of six months required and given for abrogation of the 1911 commercial pact between Washington and Tokyo expired today. What the next steps will be is quite unknown, in commercial and financial circles, for the trade between the two countries now has been placed on the same day-to-day basis which already affects many sections of our internal economy.

Copper Cut

Further weakness developed in copper today as a leading custom smelter reduced the price by ⅜ cent to 11⅝ cents a pound delivered in Connecticut Valley. This action was not followed by leading producers. This represents a drop of ⅝ cent this week and ⅞ cent from the 12½ cents price which remained in effect from October 5 to January 17.

Uncertainty ruled in the wheat pit, as early losses were only partly regained during a nervous session. Wheat closed off ¼ to up ¼ as brokers concentrated their attention on the 1939 Government loan program and the outlook for the winter crop. Cotton was off to 10 points in early trading, but rallied, to close the day up 2 to 6 points on dull dealings. Coffee and sugar were moderately higher in slow dealing, but rubber, silk and copper futures all declined.

Bonds Irregular

Irregular tendencies prevailed today in the listed bond market, but net changes were generally modest. Turnover was only $5,810,000. United States Treasury obligations drifted lower because of simple lack of interest among investors. Speculative corporate issues were dull and uncertain. Foreign dollar securities showed losses and gains in about equal numbers.

The previous downward trend of Treasury issues was slightly accentuated in the quiet session. Recessions ran from smallest fractions to ¼ point, with long and short-dated obligations alike affected. Guaranteed bonds of the Farm and Home Corporation held better than the direct Treasury group. Only small fractional variations were noted in best rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds.

Speculative rails were idle and not much changed. Local tractions reflected some activity, with B. M. T. and Manhattan Railway bonds soft. Convertibles reflected the uncertainty of the equity list, but holding company bonds were fairly steady. Communications, amusement and other special groups were quiet and uncertain.

Japanese bonds continued to drag in the foreign division, owing to the lapse of the trade treaty. The Scandinavian group was marked downward, and some losses appeared in belligerent country bonds. But the Latin-American group was cheerful, some Brazilians being in keen demand, and Uruguayan bonds also reflecting inquiry.

Washington Called Eden For Insurance

M. H. Wilner Addresses D. C. Life Underwriters Association at Willard

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Washington was described yesterday as the garden spot of the country for sale of life insurance, by Morton H. Wilner, sales expert, addressing a meeting of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association at Willard Hotel. "Life Insurance and its Relation to the Buyer's General Estate," was the subject of Mr. Wilner, chartered life underwriter, and general agent of the State Mutual Life Assurance Co., at Philadelphia.

Mr. Wilner, who since going to Philadelphia, has raised his agency's national standing in the company from thirty-fourth position to twelfth, explained that property conservation through life insurance was now being employed in presentations to buyers by the better trained life underwriters.

In showing the inroads made upon a person's general property by Federal estate and inheritance taxes, administration and probate costs, at death, he reminded that life insurance offset the shrinkage and taxes and also created cash to conserve the property for the family's benefit.

By way of illustration, he said that a man wills his property gross, but the heirs receive it net; that the life underwriter owed a duty to his client to show him the way to minimize that difference which evaporates at a man's decease.

He emphasized that services of a well-trained life insurance agent were invaluable to the purchasing public, and that life companies and underwriters associations were giving thorough training to agents to serve the American people better.

Central High Graduate

Mr. Wilner is a former Washingtonian, having graduated from Central High School, where he was prominent in athletics, and later from the University of Pennsylvania, where he was an all-American football player and captain of the university baseball team. For some years Mr. Wilner was associated with his brother, B. L. Wilner, as cogeneral agent of the local State Mutual general agency.

He is past president of the District of Columbia Managers Association, honorary life member of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association and past president of B'nai B'rith. While in Washington he was very active in the Community Chest and other civic organizations. He is the son of Joseph Wilner, one of Washington's leading philanthropists.

Savings and Loan Institute

Washington Chapter, American Savings and Loan Institute, is one of the seven in the entire United States to attain more than 200 per cent of its membership quota in 1939, according to a report from institute headquarters at Chicago, received by Richmond Gibson, of Northwestern Federal Savings and Loan Association, and president of the chapter.

With individual memberships from the executives and staff members of savings, building and loan associations amounting to 45, the local unit registered 231.8 per cent of its assigned quota as of December 31, and thus attained fourth rank among the 70 units of the institute in its 1939 progress.

Mr. Gibson states that nationally the institute had surpassed all previous membership records, closing 1939 with 2,474 members, a 12 per cent gain over last year. It is the educational organization of the savings, building and loan business, is affiliated with the United States Savings and Loan League and is now in its eighteenth year of conducting study classes for the training of savings and loan people.

Savings Deposits

Savings deposits in banks and trust companies throughout the country increased $455,433,000, or 1.85 per cent during the year ended June 30, 1939, according to the annual survey of savings deposits by the American Bankers Association completed by W. Espey Albig, secretary of the savings division.

On June 30, total savings deposits as represented by savings accounts and time certificates held by depositors, totaled $25,080,947,000. This represents the sixth successive year of increases and is $3,955,413,000 above the depression low of $21,125,534,000 in 1933, the survey states.

Every section of the country showed an increase in the number of deposit accounts as well as in total savings for the year. The total number of accounts reached 45,419,846 as compared with 44,548,914 in 1938. Savings per inhabitant are $195, having risen $4 over the preceding year, according to the survey.

A dinner meeting of the fiduciaries section, District of Columbia Bankers Association, held this week at the Washington Hotel was addressed by D. J. Needham, general counsel, American Bankers Association. Mr. Needham's talk, which was informal, gave a general view of the banking situation and dealt with various matters of interest to trust officers.

Department Store Sales 4 Per Cent Above Year Ago

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board estimated yesterday that department store sales in the week ended January 20 were 4 per cent larger than in the corresponding week last year. For the four weeks ended January 20, the board figured sales 5 per cent over the similar period 12 months ago.

By Federal Reserve districts, sales in the week ended January 20 compared with a year ago, were:

Increases—New York, 8 per cent; Philadelphia, 5; Cleveland, 5; Richmond, 10; Atlanta, 5, and San Francisco, 8 per cent.

Decreases—Boston, 1; St. Louis, 3; Kansas City, 2, and Dallas, 3 per cent.

Bethesda Wins Thriller From Blair, 19-18

Shumate Is Star as Mates Defeat County Rivals Before 3,000

Paced by the outstanding scoring of little Johnny Shumate, Bethesda-Chevy Chase High clamped a strangle hold on the Montgomery County title race last night by nosing out a scrappy Blair High five, 19-18, in an action-filled game at College Park.

Approximately 3,000 spectators filed into Ritchie Coliseum to see the two outstanding suburban teams hook up in their annual county renewal and they went home not disappointed for they saw a Bethesda-Chevy Chase team come from behind in the second half to outscore and outclass Blair.

Blair, early-season sensation of the scholastic picture, stayed in the race until the final gun. But the relentless Bethesdans, and Schumate, particularly, had the stamina and drive necessary for the victory.

After a cautious first half, in which both teams concentrated on defense, the two clubs began a stirring offensive halted only by the timekeeper's final whistle.

Schumate paced the evening's scoring with ten points while Don Tabbutt led Blair's attack with six markers. Ford Kelley figured a close second with five. Nick Carter played an outstanding floor game but was held to a lone foul shot.

Bethesda Jayvees Win

In a thrill-packed game which had the spectators on the edge of their seats, the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High Jayvees came from behind in the last quarter to defeat Blair's junior varsity, 29 to 23, last night in a preliminary to the varsity encounter.

The victory was Bethesda's fourth straight this season but it was forced to dig itself out of a 17-11 half time deficit to win.

Jimmy Callan vaulted Bethesda into the lead midway in the fourth quarter with two successive field goals and succeeded in staving off Blair's futile rally. Callan led the scoring with 11 points.

ler, one of the fastest forwards in the city. He rammed home seven field goals, plus a foul shot, to take scoring honors. And he paired with "Moke" MacDonald, who managed for 11 pjoints, in a dazzling passing effort. Jordan Bentley and Julie Columbus also helped out. And Tech's touted floor game held little terror for Wilson's drum-tight zone defense.

Despite the width of victory, the Manual Trainers weren't out of things until the start of the final period. Then MacDonald rang up a pair of follow shots that upped a 24-20 third-period lead to 28-20, and that was Techs' finish. While Wilson was scoring 9 points, Tech got only a 2-pointer by Dutch Teeple and a single point by Jack Walsh.

Teeple had 8 points in his team's third loss, but once again it was Capt. Marshall Dellinger who sparked what offense Tech could muster. 8he 135-pounder turned in a brilliant all-around game, besides 9 futile points.

Bowling Stars Clash Tonight At Convention

Cuff-Santini Faces Baltimore Aces in Three-Way Competition

Most of the ranking bowlers of this section will be on the Convention Hall alleys tonight when the Cuff and Santini team tackles the Baltimore All-Stars in the first big intercity clash here. The first of the singles, doubles and team battles is scheduled to start at 7:30 p. m.

Cuff and Santini will have Astor Clarke, Joe Harrison, Hokey Smith, Perce Wolf, Ed Blakeney and Tony Santini to toss against the Baltimoreans, who will feature Win Guerke, No. 5, nationally; Earl Campbell, Ray Fiorentino and Wilmer Robey. Blakeney and Campbell are the only duckpin artists to roll consecutive 700 sets in competition.

In the singles, Tony Santini, winner of the Dixie and Capbell Sweepstakes and the biggest money winner of the season hereabouts, will tackle Win Guerke. Astor Clarke will be seen in the doubles and team battles.

The Lucky Strike team will invade Hagerstown tonight to complete a home-and-home battle with the All-Stars of the Maryland city. In their Washington meeting, the rivals finished all even. Lindsey Scott, Ray Parks, John Chaney, Bill Miller, El Geib and Jmmy Moore will roll for Lucky Strike.

Ida Simmons Wins

Ida Simmons, of Norfolk and No. 1 woman bowler, was the winner in singles and doubles staged last night at the Bethesda alleys. In singles she rolled games of 117, 126 and 113 for a 356 set to 344 for Ray Huffman. In doubles, Miss Simmons paired with Frank Riley and had a 353 set to aid in a 728 to 664 victory over Caroline and Henry Hiser. Miss Hiser had a last game of 140.

TAKOMA

Americans, of the Takoma Duckpin Association, who were resting in fifth place, defeated Youngblood Hardware in the odd game, rolling 605.

Dome Oil took the measure of High's Ice Cream Plant in three games, to draw up within two games of first place. Takoma Funeral Home won the odd game from Takoma Billiards.

Noble Viers, sr., of Youngblood, had high set for the night and tied with his teammate, Dutch Sherbahn with 145 for high game.

LUCKY STRIKE

In the Navy League, Charlie Nicholson rolled 155 and 407 as F. and A. No. 1 took two from Sight No. 2. Torpedo No. 1 turned in 1,707 and took two from Optical No. 1.

Miscellaneous dropped a pair to Drawing Room, led by Bob Acton's 370.

Manor No. 1, defending champion, moved into first place in the Country Club League by taking three from Kenwood No. 2, as Dallas Pratt turned in 132 and 334. Indian Spring dropped three to Argyle No. 2, which was led by Luther Beall's 352.

In the District Men's League at the Ice Palace last night, Georgetown won two games from Ice Palace. Bill Krauss, of Palace, had a 150 high game, and a 401 set. Jack Talbert, also of Palace, had the high set of 432. Other high sets were, Pugh, of Georgetown, with 423, and Bill Miciotte, with 414.

and Ray Mangrum and Bill Nary, pro at the Rancho Santa Fe Club.

E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, of Little Rock, Ark., 1939 winner, stayed close to the pace with 34-37—71, but another favorite, Clayton Heafner, of Linwood, N. C., slipped back with a disappointing 38-38—76. His main difficulty came in on the greens.

Bing Crosby Has a 79

Bing Crosby was among the first to finish, playing with Herman Keiser, of Springfield, Mo. They had a pro-amateur best-ball score of 71; Keiser had 75 and Crosby posted an individual 79, just for the records.

Leaders in the pro-amateur teams were John Thorne, Woodland, Mass., pro, and Paul Gardner, Los Angeles, with 64; Jim Turness, Providence, R. I., pro, and J. C. Earle, Hollywood, 66, and several teams with best ball scores of 67, including Leonard Dodson, Kansas City pro, and Nelson Barker, San Diego amateur.

Roosevelt Plan May Centralize Security Issues

Reported to Give Treasury Chief Power Over All U. S. Offerings

Government reorganization plans being drafted by President Roosevelt may give the Secretary of the Treasury control of the issuance of all Federal securities, including those offered by other establishments, it was reported today.

At his press conference, the President said he was working on two new plans to be submitted to this session of Congress. One, he said, contemplated interdepartmental changes, and the other intradepartmental shifts, as between various branches of the same organization.

Details of the plans have been closely guarded and have not been discussed, even in general terms, with Congressional leaders, it was indicated.

Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, who has been in charge of reorganization legislation in the Senate in the past; Representative Warren (Democrat), of North Carolina, who has acted in a similar capacity in the House, and House Majority Leader Rayburn have all disclaimed any knowledge of reorganization plans. They said the President had not discussed the subject with them this year.

The proposal to give the Treasury Secretary control over all Federal bond issues, it was learned, would fix into law a policy followed for several years. The purpose is to coordinate the offering of Government securities at the most favorable times and to prevent the securities of one agency from appearing on the market in competition with another organization's bonds.

In addition to the Treasury, the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation, the Home Owners Loan Corporation, the United States Housing Authority and the Commodity Credit Corporation issue their own securities.

The "intradepartmental" reorganization plan is expected to include a provision abolishing the Federal Alcohol Administration, now in the Treasury Department. Its taxing functions would be transferred to the Bureau of Internal Revenue and its enforcement duties to the Federal Trade Commission.

In his reorganization message last year, the President intimated that this year's plan of transfer might involve the shift of the Forest Service from the Department of Agriculture to the Interior Department.

Kaiser's Children Won't See Him on Birthday Today

Doorn, The Netherlands, Jan. 25 (AP).—On the eve of his eighty-first birthday, Germany's former Kaiser, Wilhelm II, pondered tonight in lonely exile how another European war will end.

Many of the congratulatory letters reaching the former Kaiser had been opened by German censors.

Only by special permit can he telephone members of his family in Germany. There have been unverified rumors of foreign agents keeping a close watch on him.

Unlike the birthday celebration last year, when the Kaiser's children and grandchildren and their families came to Doorn, there will be no guests from outside The Netherlands tomorrow.

Gray and aging but in fairly good health, the former Kaiser with his wife, the Princess Hermine, planned a quiet day.

D'Alesandro Takes Up Law Students' Cause

Promises to Push Bill to Give Any Chance at U. S. Jobs

A move to get House action on a bill designed to prevent discrimination in the Government service against graduates of certain types of commercial law schools was started yesterday by Representative D'Alesandro (Democrat), of Maryland.

Complaining that the measure, already passed by the Senate, has remained inactive on the House calendar since last August, D'Alesandro said he would try to have it transferred to the consent calendar where it would come up automatically every first and third Monday.

The bill, which was sponsored in the Senate by Senator Neely (Democrat), of West Virginia, was aimed particularly at the Agriculture Department and wage and hour division of the Labor Department and generally at the practice of appointing first-grade university graduates to Government legal jobs.

Night Students Hit

The solicitor general of the Agriculture Department, according to testimony at the Senate hearing, issued a rule which had the effect of barring all applicants for legal jobs except those who came from schools approved by the Association of American Law Schools.

D'Alesandro pointed out that scores of secretaries, clerks and elevator operators on Capitol Hill are attending night law schools, degrees from which would not qualify them to Government jobs under such a rule.

Unless the precedent of the Agriculture Department is set aside, D'Alesandro said, similar rules may be adopted throughout the Government service.

Tolerance Phrase Deleted

The House Civil Service Committee, in reporting the Senate bill, eliminated a phrase that is expected to raise objections. The Senate measure in listing classes of applicants that should not be discriminated against listed "any member of any particular racial or religious group or organization."

D'Alesandro said he was opposed to the House amendment and thinks the Senate language should be restored.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1940—
ADAM A. WESCHLER & SON, Auctioneers.

TRUSTEES' SALE OF VALUABLE BRICK DWELLING NO. 2134 37TH STREET, NORTHWEST, WASHINGTON, D. C.

By virtue of a deed of trust recorded in Liber No. 7066, folio 17, et seq., one of the land records of the District of Columbia, and at the request of party secured thereby, the undersigned trustees will offer for sale by public auction, on the premises, on FRIDAY, THE 2ND DAY OF FEBRUARY, 1940, AT 4 O'CLOCK P. M., the following-described property in the District of Columbia, to-wit: Part of Lot numbered Two hundred and ninety-one (291), in Square numbered Thirteen hundred and one (1301); beginning for the same at a point in the West line of 37th Street, distant 150 feet North from the intersection of the said line of said street, with the North line of Manor Street, and running thence North on said line of 37th Street, 20 feet; thence West, parallel with the North line of Manor Street, 91.30 feet to the East line of the alley 16 feet wide, as shown on plat recorded in the Office of the Surveyor for the District of Columbia in Liber 73 at folio 136; thence Southwesterly along said line of said alley, 21.54 feet; thence East, 100 feet to the beginning; subject to the covenants running with the land. Said property now being designated on the Books of the Assessor as Lot 826 in Square 1301.

TERMS OF SALE: One-fourth of the purchase-money to be paid in cash, balance in equal installments, represented by promissory notes of purchaser payable in three years, with interest at 6 per cent per annum from day of sale, payable semi-annually, secured by first deed of trust upon property sold, or all cash, at option of purchaser. A deposit of $200.00 required of purchaser at sale. Examination of title, conveyancing, recording, revenue stamps and notarial fees at cost of purchaser. Terms to be complied with within 30 days from day of sale, otherwise trustees reserve the right to resell property at risk and cost of defaulting purchaser, after 5 days' advertisement of such resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C. Deposit may be forfeited, or without forfeiting deposit trustees may avail themselves of any legal or equitable rights against defaulting purchaser.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

E. T. B. wants to know why a grand slam was missed on these cards. He writes:

"We would like to know how you think this hand should have been bid, for as it developed a grand slam was missed. It is the contention of three of us that North never did show great enough strength in diamonds to warrant South's going to a grand slam."

North
♠ K 7 4 3
♡ A J 10 9
◇ A Q 6 4
♣ J

South
♠ A 6
♡ K Q
◇ K J 10 8 5
♣ A K 8 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	3 NT	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	4 NT	Pass
5 ◇	Pass	6 ◇	Pass
Pass	Pass

E. T. B. does not specify whether or not he was using the Blackwood convention of four no trump for showing aces, but we assume he was not, since South cue bid to indicate the ace of spades.

We quite agree with him that North underbid his hand. His call of three no trump in response to South's three-club bid was ambiguous and did not give the proper picture of the hand. He might better have raised diamonds, bidding four odd, or even mentioned his spade suit. But three no trump certainly would not promote a slam.

We assume his four no-trump bid to be some sort of a slam try, but it seems feeble when considered with his previous bidding. His partner bid very aggressively, and after five diamonds, if North was ever going to take action, he then should have grasped his last chance and gone to seven. Had he shown his fine diamond support early in the bidding seven most certainly should have been reached.

Listen! with Slocum

This evening at 6:15 WJSV will unreel what it hopes will be a superior half hour in the cause of the sale of tickets to the President's Birthday Celebrations.

Washington is beginning to crawl with moving picture celebreties and most of 'em will be corralled for the broadcast. A troupe of tiny actors from the Langdom School, where victims of infantile paralysis learn their ABC, will do a brief skit, Arch McDonald will do a bit of mastering of ceremonies, and Paul Kain and his band will furnish the musical background. Somewhere in the course of the proceedings a few words will be muttered about buying tickets for the celebrations, but otherwise the show will be entertainment.

Visiting movie stars being what they are, it is impossible to be sure of any of them showng up, but we've asked and they've promised.

This whole business of Hollywood cowboys coming to Washington is disillusioning, if nothing else. For many years now, it has been a cherished thought that screen cowboys couldn't ride. Having an extremely small mind at best, we got quite a kick out of sitting back and watching the heroes dash madly across the screen, all the time saying to ourself "Poof, that's not the star, that's a double. The star can't ride as well as I can."

Well come Gene Autry and Bill Boyd to town and smack goes another illusion. Genie rode well enough to elicit many nods of approval at Fort Myer and the other night Boyd was scheduled to ride at the Fort but couldn't because of an overlong program. He was bitterly disappointed, first because he couldn't ride for the President and Mrs. Roosevelt and second because he hadn't been on a horse for several days and was yearning for a little wind in his ears and his eyes.

I guess the next thing is to find out that Nelson Eddy can really throw knives out of his teeth and that Tyrone Power's hobby is digging canals.

The Dragon's Teeth

Chapter 14

BEAU left the grounds early that morning; he was back by the afternoon.

Kerrie was waiting on the terrace. For him. He knew it was for him. By the way she started when she saw him. By the glad look in her eyes—glad, and anxious, too, as if she couldn't make up her mind whether what had happened was a dream or an actuality.

He stooped and kissed her.

The book slipped off her lap. "Then it's true!" And she jumped up and kissed him fiercely. "Let's go somewhere!"

"Where's Vi?" asked Beau slowly.

"She had an appointment in town with the hairdresser. Darling. You do love me?"

He held her close.

"That's all I wanted to know." She shivered with joy. "I don't care about anything else."

"Let's take a walk," said Beau.

They strolled into the sweet-smelling woods, his arm about her.

There was something unreal about the afternoon; the sunlight filtering through the leaves had a red cast, so that they seemed to be walking in a place not of earth.

"It isn't," said Kerrie, as if the future were altogether rosy. It isn't. There are so many things I don't understand. About you, darling. And about the future. But I've made up my mind not to look ahead . . . Isn't it lovely here?"

Beau sat down on a weatherbeaten stump. Kerrie sank to the ground and rested her cheek on his knee.

Beau hurled a twig away. "Kerrie, we've got to face the facts. You're on the spot."

"Please. Let's not talk about that."

"We've got to. You're on the spot, and we've got to do something about it."

She was silent.

"Your uncle paid me to find his heirs. I should have bowed out when I located you and Margo showed up. I've only brought you a peck of trouble." He scowled.

"I'm glad you didn't bow out." She pressed his knee.

"I didn't because—well, I had reason to believe your uncle Cadmus was murdered. I still believe it."

The red light of the sky on her pallor gave her face an eerie violet cast.

She stammered: "But I don't—I don't understand."

"Neither do I." He pulled her up and sat her on his knee, staring at the sky. "Anyway, I've been hanging around trying to find out what it's all about. And who's behind it."

"Margo," whispered Kerrie. "Margo! She's tried to kill me, Ellery. But how could she—Uncle was at sea—"

"Darling, why didn't you tell me?" Kerrie sprang off his lap. "Can't we expose her?"

"No proof. She's cute as hell, Kerrie. She's covered her tracks too well. And if we force her hand now, she may become desperate." Beau paused, then said quietly: "Sooner or later, no matter how many precautions we take, one of these little 'accidents' won't fail."

"The police—"

"They'd laugh at you, and you won't have anything to offer them but suspicions. Then the cat will be out of the bag and you'll be worse off than now."

"What do you want me to do, Ellery?" asked Kerrie simply.

"Get married."

KERRIE was silent. And when she did speak, it was in an unsteady voice. "Who would marry me, even if I should be silly enough to give up $2,500 a week for him?"

"I would," muttered Beau.

"Darling!" She flew to him. "If you'd said anything else I'd have killed myself!"

"You'll have to kiss the dough goodbye, Kerrie," he said gently.

"I don't care!"

"Funny kid." He stroked her hair. "I'd have asked you to marry me in Hollywood, but I couldn't bring myself to—not when it meant depriving you of everything money could give you. But now it's different. It's no longer a choice between money and me . . . it's a choice between money and—" He drew her closer.

"The money doesn't mean a thing to me," cried Kerrie. "The only one I'm sorry for is Vi. Poor Vi will have to go back—"

"You would think of her," grinned Beau. "Think of yourself for a change! With you married, Margo gets your share of the income automatically. So she won't have to kill you, and you'll be safe."

"But, Ellery." She looked troubled. "She likes you. I know. She likes you a lot. If you marry me, she won't—I mean, a woman can act awfully nasty in a case like that."

"There won't be any trouble with Margo," said Beau quickly.

"But——"

"Kerrie, are you going to trust me, or aren't you?"

She laughed tremulously. "Yes—if you marry me now, today!"

She could hold him against any woman, she thought—once they were married. She had so much love to give. So much more than a woman like Margo could possibly offer, much less feel.

"Is this a proposal?"

"I couldn't make it any clearer, could I? Oh, but I'm delirious, I guess, darling. How can you marry me today? We haven't even a license."

"Didn't I say to leave everything to me?" Beau grinned again. "I took out a Connecticut license last week."

"Ellery! You didn't!"

Kerrie ran all the way back to the house. Beau followed more slowly. Following, with her eyes no longer on him, he stopped grinning. In the deepening crimson light, his face was ghastly, too.

Kerrie was furiously hurling things into three bags when Vi returned. Beau was pacing the terrace downstairs in the dusk; Kerrie could hear the slap of his steps. She was grateful for them, because they kept him near her. She felt the need for his nearness when Vi came in, and that was strange, for Kerrie had never required a defense against Vi before.

"Kerrie! What's up?"

"Darn it," said Kerrie. "Where are those new nighties?"

"In the bottom drawer. What are you packing for? Where are you going?"

"Away," said Kerrie, as if it were unimportant. She did not look at Vi. "This is a heck of a trousseau I'm getting together.

"Trousseau? Kerrie, are you gaga?"

"I'm going to marry Ellery Queen." From an irresistible compulsion Kerrie said it lightly.

She heard Vi's gasp and the creak of the box-spring as her friend sank onto the bed.

"Marry? Him?"

"What's the matter with him?" laughed Kerrie. "He's the most fascinating thing in pants I've ever met, and I've decided to grab him before he changes his mind."

Vi did not laugh, however. "But, Kerrie— When?"

"Now. Tonight." Despite her best effort, a note of defiance crept into Kerrie's voice.

There was the most peculiar expression on Vi's face. But then she jumped up and hugged Kerrie. "All the luck, hon. You've got more guts than I'd have."

Kerrie clung. "Oh, Vi, I know what this means to you. Back to the old grind—"

"Easy come, easy go," said Vi gaily. "Don't fret yourself about me. It's 12 o'clock, and the coach turns into a pumpkin, and the glad rags become just rags. . . . Well, I had a few weeks in a fairy tale, anyway." She pressed Kerrie to her bosom convulsively. "Kerrie, you're sure?"

"What do you mean?" But Kerrie knew exactly what Vi meant. And because she herself had had similar suspicions, she felt herself go hard inside and slipped from Vi's embrace to resume her packing.

"And how about Sister Rat?" asked Vi dryly, after a long time.

"Who? Oh! I don't know. What's more, I don't care."

Vi looked at Kerrie; then she laughed. "So little Kerrie's been snagged by the tough lad who looks like Robert Taylor. . . . Quite a triumph. Epic, they'd call it in the movies. Giving up the old boodle for love. He must feel pretty snazzy, that man!"

"Vi. That's hateful," said Kerrie in a low voice.

Vi sat down on the bed again. "I'm sorry, Kerrie; I guess the shock . . . Tell me just how it happened. It's really too thrilling for words."

Kerrie looked her friend straight in the eye. Vi looked away. "Not so long ago, Vi, you were begging me to give all this up, to run away. And now, when I've decided to take your advice, you don't seem . . . well, pleased. Why?"

I'm not pleased? But, Kerrie, dear, aren't you a little mixed up? You're the one who has to be pleased, not I. Are you?"

"Very much!" Kerrie tossed her head.

"Then that's all that matters," laughed Vi. "Now are you going to stop being silly and tell me everything?"

Yes, Vi was acting peculiarly. Of course, it was natural for her to be—surprised . . . yes, and disappointed, too, over the prospect of Kerrie's marriage. It meant Vi's brief day of bliss was over and that she would have to go back to the old, mean, scraping life. And then for some time Kerrie had had the queerest feeling that Vi had come to distrust him. Oh, Vi liked him, all right; Kerrie was woman enough to be sure of that fundamental fact . . . And, too, Kerrie's marriage meant the separation of the two friends. That much could be remedied!

"Of course, you'll take pot luck with us," said Kerrie quickly. "I couldn't think . . . We won't have much, because Ellery's not well off, and it will probably mean a small apartment in the city. But we'll manage beautifully, Vi——"

"Thanks, Kerrie," said Vi. "But I've been a millstone round your neck long enough."

Kerrie dropped an armful of stockings and ran to the bed. "Vi! You're crying!"

"I'm doing no such thing," said Vi, springing up. "I'm going right back to Hollywood, where men are rats and all the rats are casting directors, and with the publicity I've had through this little racket of ours I'll get steady work—maybe. Well, I will!"

"Oh, Vi!" And it was Kerrie's turn to sniffle.

"Stop it," said Vi. She picked Kerrie up and deposited her on the bed. "Now you lie there while I finish packing for you. I'll see you through the execution, anyway, and then——"

They finished packing together, in silence.

PINK AND BLUE—that was how Kerrie had always visualized her wedding. She would wear a pale pink satin gown with a short train and a swathing veil of pink tulle. The gown would be princess-lined, with leg-o'-mutton sleeves and a high neckline edged with a narrow pleated ruffle, and the gown would button down the back—one long row of twinkly little buttons from her neck to her waist. Pink satin slippers, long pale pink kid gloves, a wedding bouquet of pink camellias and baby's-breath . . .

There she would stand, a creation in pink among bridesmaids in baby blue, who would be wearing doll hats and little muffs made out of fresh flowers. Of course Vi, as maid of honor, would be in powder blue . . .

That's the way it had always been, a vision of the future. But what was the actuality? Kerrie had hurriedly put on a simple two-piece tailored dress of navy-blue net, with a touch of white at the throat, and a navy-blue hat, white gloves, and navy patent leather shoes and bag. It was all right, but . . . And Vi. Vi had climbed into a white tailored sharkskin suit over a pink sweater.

And even aside from the clothes—just the three of them. That masterful individual who either scowled or grinned had insisted upon secrecy.

"When the papers get hold of this," he had said, "you'll be hounded to death. It's a big story."

"But, darling," Kerrie wailed, "something — anything — a few friends. A woman only gets married once! I mean—"

"So you see what you're getting," said Vi. "A woman only gets married once! Didn't you ever hear of Reno?"

"Lay off my wife," said Beau. 'Heiress Gives Up Fortune for Love!' They'll play it up bigger than the bundling party at Munich. If you want to enjoy your honeymoon, funny-face, you've got to outsmart the press."

"But how, darling?"

"Leave it to your uncle Dudley." And he had telephoned a justice of the peace he said he knew in Connecticut, upon whose discretion he could rely, and had sworn Margo and De Carlos and the servants to a 24-hour conspiracy of silence, and had refused to tell even Kerrie where he was going to take her on their honeymoon.

AND Margo—Margo was something of a surprise.

"You mean you're actually giving up Uncle's money?" she asked when she heard the news.

"Yes."

"But why?"

"We happen to be in love," said Kerrie shortly.

"Oh, I see." And Margo smiled slightly at the stiff face of the groom-to-be. "Well, I hope you'll be very happy."

"Thank you."

Funeral Rites For Dr. Green Set Today

Former Red Cross Official Won Legion Of Honor, Polish Medal

Funeral services for Dr. Thomas E. Green, 83, former director of the speakers' bureau of the American Red Cross, will be held at 2:30 p. m. today at the Church of the Epiphany, with burial in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Dr. Green died Wednesday at Washington Sanitarium, where he had lived five years. He joined the Red Cross in 1917, after 25 years as an Episcopalian minister. Born in Harrisville, Pa., he was elected Bishop of Iowa in 1898, but declined the post.

His services in behalf of international peace and other humanitarian projects won him the Chevalier of the French Legion of Honor and the Polonia Restitua, Poland's honor legion.

Honorary pallbearers will be:

Robert V. Fleming, Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, Charles H. Doing, Dr. H. W. Nicholson, H. E. Rice.

Opera Stars Distrust Youthful Conductor

CONDUCTOR LEINSDORF — KISTEN FLAGSTAD — LAURITZ MELCHIOR

Discord developed among members of the Metropolitan Opera Company in New York yesterday when two Wagnerian veterans, Prima Donna Kirsten Flagstad and Lauritz Melchior declared they distrusted the ability of 27-year-old Erich Leinsdorff to take over the baton of Arthur Bodanzky, who died recently

Sisters Observe 100th Anniversary

The celebration of the hundredth anniversary of the foundation of the Sisters of Providence in America began yesterday morning at Immaculata Seminary with the singing of a mass composed by Sister Cecilia, S. P., M. M., and dedicated to Mother Theodore Guerin, who founded the order.

Celebrant of the mass was the Rev. David Madden, S. J., of Georgetown University, who also preached the anniversary sermon.

Aid Veterans' Widows, Legion Group Urges

Granting of $50 pensions to widows of World War veterans won the support last night of the legislative committee of the American Legion.

The committee, meeting in the Mayflower Hotel, also went on record favoring compensation for war veterans who are unable to earn their livings by manual labor. Gail T. Judd, vice chairman of the committee, presided.

D. C. Fears Floods in March When Sewers Catch Sand on Ice

Some time next March when some son or daughter of Chevy Chase flashes to newspapers news of the First Robin, about 50 hard-working gentlemen in the District sewer division will have bitter experience with this January's snow.

The reason is 4,000 tons of sand.

That was the best available estimate yesterday of the tonnage that can be expected to be sprinkled on city streets between now and March to keep Mr. and Mrs. Washington as upright as possible, their street cars running and their autos out of the gutter.

Here's what happens: When snow or ice conditions warrant, the Smooth Sand & Gravel Co., under contract to the District refuse department, scatters sand around by the truckload. But the contract says nothing about cleaning it up. That's the job of the sewer division, when melting snow will have washed the sand into 1,200 sewer catch basins.

What worries the sewer division is whether its normal schedule of cleaning catch basins three times a year will keep it up with this winter's problem. A normal Washington winter consumes about 300 tons of sand. The city has had 1,500 tons, at 65 cents a ton, tossed off this year and the Capital Transit Co. considerably more than that.

Therefore the price of personal and vehicular traction in Washington this winter may be flooded streets and basements in the spring.

Then, when water starts backing up against sand-plugged street corner drains, grab a telephone. The division promises to send out an emergency crew right away.

Md. Student Found Dead

Montreal, Jan. 26 (AP).—Peregrine Wroth, 25, of Hagerstown, Md., a fifth year student at McGill University, was found dead today in his gas-filled apartment. An inquest will be held.

Confirmation Of Hazen Likely

Confirmation of the renomination of Melvin C. Hazen as District Commissioner virtually was assured yesterday as Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, withdrew by telegram a request that it be held up until he returned to Washington.

Senator King as chairman instructed Max Kimball, clerk, to poll the remainder of the Senate District Committee so that a report may be filed when the Senate meets Monday.

Carolinians to Dance

The North Carolina State Society will have a reception and dance in honor of Senators and Representatives from North Carolina at 9:30 o'clock tonight at the Shoreham Hotel.

James Beller, D. C. Attorney, Dies at 61

Lifelong Resident of City Was Secretary To R. L. Owen in Senate

James W. Beller, 61, lifelong resident of Washington, died yesterday at his home in the Mendota Apartments, 2220 Twentieth street northwest. He was a member of the law firm of Beller, Syme & Richardson, with offices in the Southern Building.

Mr. Beller was a graduate of Columbia University, now George Washington University, from which he received the Parker prize for the highest average during his law course.

He was admitted to the District bar July 1, 1904. For many years he was secretary to former Senator Robert L. Owen, of Oklahoma. He served with Senator Owen at the Peace Conference in Paris in 1919.

Mr. Beller was a member of the Columbia Country Club, Chevy Chase Country Club, Manor Club and Kappa Alpha Fraternity, and president of the National Mortgage & Investment Co.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Avonelle Crockett Beller.

Funeral services will be at 10:30 a. m., Monday, at the S. H. Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest, with mass at 11 a. m. at St. Thomas Catholic Church. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Volunteer Firemen Elect

Smithburg, Md., Jan. 26.—George Bushey was elected president of the Smithsburg Community Volunteer Fire Company.

Navy Boards Meet Feb. 6 On Promotions

330 Lieutenants to Be Picked, 11 Medical Corps Captains Named

The Navy announced yesterday that three selection boards to recommend officers for promotion or special training will meet here early in February.

A board to name 330 lieutenants, junior grade, for promotion to lieutenant will convene February 6. Capt. Robert A. Theobald will head the group, composed of Capts. Paul H. Bastedo, Lemuel E. Lindsay, Charles J. Moore, James A. Logan, James G. Ware, Elliott B. Nixon, George D. Murray, and Robert H. English. Lieut. Comdr. Armand J. Robertson will be recorder.

Rear Admiral Benjamin H. Dorsey heads a board of medical officers which will meet February 5 to select 11 commanders for advancement to captain in the Medical Corps. Other members are Capts. William J. Zalesky, James M. Minter, Gordon D. Hale, William E. Eaton, Richard H. Laning, and William W. Hargrave. Commander John C. Adams will be recorder.

The other board, membership of which was not announced, will choose officers for special portgraduate training at Annapolis.

Hiking Club Plans Walk Near Greenbelt

A two-mile hike through the wooded park area near Lake Greenbelt, Md., and a tour of the Agricultural Experimental Station at Beltsville will feature Sunday's outing of the Capital Hiking Club. Special buses for the trip will leave 1416 F street northwest at 9 a. m. Bob Shosteck will lead the hike.

Liquor Violator Faces Lottery Count After Term

John A. Terry, colored, of 340 F street northwest, was held for the grand jury on a charge of operating a lottery yesterday after a question of jurisdiction removed his case from Police Court to the United States Commissioner. He was held under $1,500 bond.

Prior to arraignment before Commissioner Needham C. Turnage on the lottery charge, Terry was sentenced by Police Court Judge Hobart Newman to serve 90 days in District Jail on conviction of six violations of the alcohol beverage control law.

After a conference between the bench and the prosecutor, Terry was sent before Turnage. He must stand trial in District Court after serving his 90-day sentence. As he was led away, for arraignment, Terry asked, "But can't I make bond?"

"Not for 90 days you can't," he was told.

Douglas Sees Aviation as Peace Servant

New York, Jan. 26 (AP).—Donald W. Douglas, president of the Douglas Aircraft Co., tonight told the Institute of the Aeronautical Sciences that in spite of the use of airplanes for military purposes he had "great faith in the future of aviation as a constructive servant of mankind."

In an address accepting the Daniel Guggenheim Medal for 1939 for "outstanding contributions to the design and construction of transport airplanes," Douglas asked, "Where does the highway of aviation lead humanity?" "Eventually aviation will justify the hopes and faith of those who pray and long for peace and tranquility," he said.

CCC Quota Unfilled

Baltimore, Jan. 26 (AP).—Maryland failed by 65 enrollments to fill its Civilian Conservation Corps quota for the first quarter this year.

J. Milton Patterson, State welfare director, attributed the vacancies to an upturn in industrial development here.
